The provision of personnel for the changing of the guard ceremonies does not incur additional manpower costs. Details of travel, food and accommodation costs are not held separately and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Troop Deployment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of troop deployment in each of the spheres of operation. [16843]

Mr. Soames: Operational deployment of UK forces is kept under constant review to ensure that the levels match the requirements at any time. At present, there are some 17,500 service personnel deployed in Northern Ireland, 12,700 deployed in support of implementation force operations in the former Yugoslavia and about 400 more on operations in support of United Nations Security Council resolutions in Iraq. In addition, over 400 personnel are committed to UN operations in Cyprus, Kuwait, Angola and Georgia.

RAF Aircraft Losses

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) the numbers, (b) the total cost and (c) the known causes of all training and operational RAF aircraft lost during (i) 1992, (ii) 1993, (iii) 1994 and (iv) 1995. [18846]

Mr. Soames: The number of RAF aircraft either substantially damaged or destroyed in air accidents in the years in question are as follows:

Year	Number
(i) 1992	9
(ii) 1993	9
(iii) 1994	8
(iv) 1995	8

Each accident is most thoroughly investigated by separate RAF boards of inquiry. Summaries of BOI findings, including accident cause and flight safety recommendations, are routinely place in the Library of the House. No additional costs are incurred for the replacement of aircraft lost in accidents since replacements are drawn from an attrition reserve, which is procured as part of the total aircraft requirement to offset predicted losses. The cost of this reserve is therefore borne when the fleet is procured, not when an aircraft is transferred from the reserve.

Iraq and Turkey (British Troops)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total British military presence in northern Iraq and in southern Turkey; and what forecasts he has made of the future presence. [19056]

Mr. Soames: The British contribution to the enforcement of the no-fly zone over northern Iraq is six Tornado GR1 and one VC10 aircraft supported by some 150 military personnel based in southern Turkey; there is also a small number of military personnel based at Zakho in northern Iraq. We have no current plans to alter this contribution.

RAF Air Defence Capabilities

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he intends to take to improve the RAF air defence capabilities into the next century. [19064]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In order to improve our air defence capability pending the introduction of Eurofighter, we have decided that, subject to the agreement of satisfactory contractual terms and conditions, a contract will be placed with British Aerospace to upgrade the RAF's Tornado F3 aircraft to make them capable of carrying advanced medium-range air-to-air missiles and advanced short-range air-to-air missiles.

Together with the radar improvements and joint tactical information distribution system with which the aircraft is already being equipped, this upgrade will greatly enhance the capability of the Tornado F3 and provide the Royal Air Force with an up-to-date beyond visual range missile capability. The overall programme is expected to cost £125 million.

Procurement Executive Headquarters

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the construction costs of his Department's procurement executive at Abbey Wood. [16853]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The outturn costs for the construction of Abbey Wood are estimated to be £247.2 million at 1992 prices—£273.3 million at 1995 prices—against the approved budget of £248.5 million at 1992 prices—£273.4 million at 1995 prices. The project is therefore within budget.

Overseas Armed Forces (Training)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries members of whose armed forces were designated as civil or Government servants with his Department's knowledge or consent during periods in the United Kingdom since 1980. [16400]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base and which (a) admit members of the public to all board or committee meetings and (b) hold open meetings for the public; and whether in each case this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntarily. [16027]

Mr. Boswell: The information required is as follows:

(a) The regional flood defence committees are required to admit the public to their meetings under the Public Bodies (Admission to Meetings) Act 1960 by virtue of paragraph 28 of schedule 25 to the Water Act 1989. This information, which is currently being included in the Environment Act 1995 (Consequential Amendments) Regulations 1996, was unfortunately omitted from the answer given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood on 1 May 1995, Official Report, columns 78–79.

(b) None of the other executive non-departmental public bodies, for which my right hon. Friend is responsible, has a statutory requirement to admit members of the public to board or committee meetings or to hold open meetings for the public.

(c) However, the following arrangements are operated on a voluntary basis:

Open meetings are held by the NRA to inform and consult local interests on particular flood defence interests.

The Home-Grown Cereals Authority holds no formal open meetings but does hold meetings and events where the public are welcomed.

The Meat and Livestock Commission holds open levy-payer meetings which may be attended by members of the public.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department which are subject to (a) investigation b the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. Food from Britain although not participating in the chartermark scheme, meets the required standards.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department publish (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) the minutes of meetings, (d) the agendas of meetings and (e) a register of members' interests, indicating in each case if this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntary. [16820]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 27 February 1996]: The annual reports and accounts of the following executive non-departmental public bodies, for which my right hon. Friend is responsible, are published:

Apple and Pear Research Council

Food from Britain

Home-Grown Cereals Authority

Wine Standards Board of the Vintners' Company

Horticultural Development Council

Horticulture Research Commission

Meat and Livestock Commission

Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew

Sea Fish Industry Authority.

Legislation requires, in each case, that the annual report and accounts are published.

Minutes and agendas of executive non-departmental public bodies' meetings are not published. There is no statutory requirement to do so.

None of the executive non-departmental public bodies publishes a register of members' interests. There is no statutory requirement for such a register. However, details of those filling many posts are published or are available at the time of appointment. The Home-Grown Cereals Authority has drawn up a register of interests of authority members which is available for public inspection at the HGCA's offices.

Horse and Pony Exports

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase the minimum values on the export of horses and ponies; and if he will make a statement. [16237]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 February 1996]: I have no such plans.

EDS Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those contracts his Department currently holds with EDS, indicating for each the (a) date of inception, (b) value and (c) duration. [17449]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry currently holds no contracts with EDS. Consequently, there are no dates, values or durations to report.

Zoonoses Diseases

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases have been brought to court in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EU countries for non-compliance with directive 92/117. [17180]

Mrs. Browning: Directive 92/117 requires member states to collect information on outbreaks of specified zoonoses in humans and animals and provide an annual report to the Commission on the trends and sources of the zoonotic infections recorded during the previous year. The directive also requires member states to establish measures for the testing of breeding flocks of domestic fowl numbering 250 or more birds for salmonella enteritidis or salmonella typhimurium. The requirements for testing breeding flocks are implemented in Great Britain by the Poultry Breeding Flocks and Hatcheries Order 1993 and in Northern Ireland by the Poultry Breeding Flocks and Hatcheries Scheme Order Northern Ireland 1994. Three prosecutions have so far been taken under the Great Britain order for non-compliance with its requirements. No prosecutions have been taken in Northern Ireland. The Department does not collect information on prosecutions taken in other member states.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations Her Majesty's Government (a) have made and (b) will be making regarding the review of EC directive 92/117. [17177]

Mrs. Browning: A Commission proposal for a review of directive 92/117 is under discussion by member states in Brussels but has not yet been agreed. The Government believe, however, that the control of Salmonella enteritidis and salmonella typhimurium in breeding flocks of domestic fowl is an essential element in any programme aimed at the control of these serotypes in production flocks. The Commission is familiar with the United Kingdom's views.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what penalties there are in other EU countries for failure to comply with directive 92/117. [17181]

Mrs. Browning: The Department has not seen the implementation measures submitted to the EC Commission by other member states and has no information on the penalties they are applying or wish to apply in respect of the requirements set out in directive 92/117.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many successful prosecutions have been brought under order implementing directive 92/117 in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EU countries. [17179]

Mrs. Browning: Three successful prosecutions have been brought in Great Britain under the Poultry Breeding Flocks and Hatcheries Order 1993. The Department does not collect information on prosecutions taken in other member states.

North-east Drift Net Fishery

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent correspondence he has had with the chairman of the National Rivers Authority about the north-east drift net fishery. [17256]

Mr. Baldry: I refer to my reply to the right hon. Member of Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 22 February 1996, Official Report, columns 270–71. I have since received a further letter from the chairman of the National Rivers Authority suggesting discussions between officials in the authority, the Ministry and the Scottish authorities on measures to safeguard future stock of spring fish, and these will be arranged.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much was charged to exporters for each consignment of livestock destined for export certified by his own veterinary and technical assistant staff between 13 and 19 February, inclusive; [17846]

(2) what sums his Department has received for providing a health certification service for livestock destined for export between 13 and 19 February, inclusive. [17724]

Mrs. Browning: Invoices have not yet been raised for these services. No money has been received.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce the results of his inquiry into inadequate certification by veterinary surgeons. [17788]

Mrs. Browning: Inquiries are continuing concerning the allegations made in the Channel 4 "Dispatches" programme and I can give no indication as to when they may be completed.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals were deemed unfit to travel between 13 February and 19 February, inclusive, by the Minister's veterinary staff when undertaking certification procedures of live animals destined for export. [17778]

Mrs. Browning: Between 13 to 19 February, of the 2,691 sheep and 3,843 calves presented for export, 39 sheep and 165 calves were deemed unfit to travel by veterinary staff while undertaking certification procedures.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary staff and technical assistant staff were deployed to undertake certification for animals destined for export between 13 and 16 February, inclusive. [17723]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Glandford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 20 February 1996, Official Report, columns 136–37, and on 26 February 1996, Official Report, columns 381–82.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if all local veterinary inspectors are employed by his Ministry when undertaking health certification work for animals due to be exported from the United Kingdom. [17711]

Mrs. Browning: LVIs are appointed by the Minister to act as agents on his behalf. They are not employees.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long certification took for each consignment of live animals destined for export between 13 and 19 February, inclusive, for (a) physical examinations and (b) related administrative procedures. [17725]

Mrs. Browning: The nature of the work is such that it is not possible to separate the physical examinations from the administrative procedures, for example, checking identities of animals. Set out in the table are the times taken at the various lairages on different days when one or more consignments were dealt with at each lairage.

Date	Number of consignments	Start time	Finish time
13 February	2 consignments of sheep 1 consignment of calves	0900	1300

14 February	1 consignment of sheep 3 consignments of calves	0830	1700
	5 consignments of calves	0730	1330
15 February	1 consignment of sheep	0830	1015
	7 consignments of calves	0800	1430
	6 consignments of calves	0730	1630
16 February	1 consignment of sheep 2 consignments of calves	0730	1230

[1] 14 February.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the rate per hour charged by (a) his veterinary staff and (b) his technical assistance staff to certify consignments of animals destined for export between 13 and 19 February, inclusive. [17721]

Mrs. Browning: For veterinary officers, the rate per hour is £41.61 per hour and for animal health officers, it is £23.47 per hour exclusive of VAT.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of animals for export were certified by the Minister's veterinary and technical staff between 13 and 16 February, inclusive. [17712]

Mrs. Browning: Between 13 and 16 February inclusive, Ministry veterinary staff certified eight consignments of sheep and 30 consignments of calves.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the use of a separate fitness to travel certificate ceased for the purposes of certifying animals for export. [17726]

Mrs. Browning: The use of a separate fitness to travel certificate ceased from 31 December 1992.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals were in each consignment certified for export by his veterinary and technical staff between 13 and 19 February, inclusive. [17722]

Mrs. Browning: The number of animals in each consignment certified for export by Ministry veterinary staff between 13 and 19 February, inclusive, was as follows:

Date	Number of consignments	Animals per consignment
13 February	5 consignment of sheep	204, 426, 400, 389, 386
	7 consignment of calves	88, 88, 203, 53, 51, 229, 110
14 February	1 consignment of sheep	405
	8 consignment of calves	146, 62, 268, 160, 53, 179, 229, 68
15 February	1 consignment of sheep	231
	13 consignments of calves	126, 80, 168, 138, 241, 206, 40, 262, 196, 16, 29, 59, 90
16 February	1 consignment of sheep	250
	2 consignments of calves	65, 140

No animals were certified for export by Ministry veterinary and technical staff on 17, 18 or 19 February.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current role of Jonathan Stirling in respect of animal health certification on behalf of exporters. [17866]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Glandford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 22 February 1996, Official Report, columns 269–70.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18153]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 1 March 1996]: A number of officials in the Department have declared their outside interests in accordance with departmental requirements. As with all employment matters, individuals' details are a confidential matter between them and their employer.

The following staff currently hold directorships under the guide to non-executive directorships for civil servants:

Mr. R. A. Hathaway: Manor Bakeries Ltd.

Mr. R. G. Purnell: H. R. Wallingford

Mr. A. R. Burne: The Albert Fisher Group plc

Mr. B. J. Harding: Cadbury Ltd.

The individuals concerned do not receive payment.

Organic Aid Scheme

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been received by farmers in the form of organic aid since September 1994; and if he will make a statement on proposals for encouraging greater participation. [18305]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Since the start of the organic aid scheme in England in August 1994 until the end of December 1995, £190,733 has been paid. Separate schemes operate in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. We are considering a number of options for encouraging greater uptake of the scheme.

Cassava Chips

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with Commonwealth countries as to the possible importation of cassava chips; and if he will make a statement. [18481]

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friend has not held discussions on imports of this product with any Commonwealth countries. Various preferential quotas exist which facilitate imports of cassava—manioc—into the EU from third countries in which members of the Commonwealth are free to participate.

Tractors and Agricultural Trailers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what safety guidelines govern the use of tractors and agricultural trailers; and what penalties exist for those who fail to adhere to these guidelines. [18430]

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

The regulations governing the use of agricultural vehicles and their trailers on the road are the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986, as amended, unless they are specifically provided for under the Motor Vehicles (Authorisation of Special Types) General Order 1979, as amended, as well as the Road Vehicles Lighting Regulations 1989, as amended.

The maximum penalty on conviction of an offence under these regulations of dangerous driving is currently a fine of £5,000 and disqualification. The Road Traffic Act 1991 allows the maximum penalty for causing death by driving, on conviction, could be five years' imprisonment.

The use of agricultural vehicles and machines off road is covered by the Health and Safety at Work, etc Act 1974. Under these regulations, the penalty for an offence can, dependant upon its gravity, be a maximum of £20,000 if it is heard in a magistrates court or an unlimited fine if it is heard in a high court.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Hall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a list of all overseas visits made by all Ministers of his Department since 1990, including (a) details of the places visited and brief reasons for the visit, (b) details of the size, composition and cost to public funds of the delegation and (c) the names of non-ministerial members of each delegation and the capacity in which each was present. [17497]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Knowsley, North (Mr. Howarth) on 18 July 1995, Official Report columns 1052–56, and will place in the Library a list updating this information accordingly.

Quota Hopping

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement in respect of the judgment by the European Court of Justice in case C48/93—Factortame III. [19554]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The judgment of the European Court of Justice in case 48/93 was delivered earlier today and runs to 22 pages. The court concluded that the principle that member states are obliged to make good damage caused to individuals by breaches of Community law attributable to the state is applicable where the national legislature was responsible for the breach in question and where the breach is sufficiently serious. The court also concluded that it will be for the national courts to decide whether such a breach has occurred and what damages if any are payable.

These conclusions and the court's judgment will be the subject of detailed scrutiny in the weeks ahead.

The judgment is a stage in the action brought by Factortame Ltd. and others in the UK divisional court against Her Majesty's Government for damages in respect of the losses incurred during the period they were excluded from the UK fishing vessel register and unable to fish. In considering this action the UK divisional court asked for guidance from the European Court as to whether in principle member states are liable to pay damages for losses arising from measures which were held in breach of treaty obligations. It will be for the Factortame applicants to decide whether and how to proceed with their action for damages before the UK courts.

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action the Government plan to take at the intergovernmental conference to deal with quota hopping; and if he will make a statement [19555]

Mr. Hogg: There is an inconsistency underlying the quota regime of the common fisheries policy in that the quotas allocated to each member state do not always benefit the fishing communities of that member state. This is because the eligibility for quotas and their administration by member states has to take full account of general treaty provisions, for example, on right of establishment and freedom of movement. This has undermined the benefit which the UK fishing industry has been able to secure from the fishing opportunities available to it under the common fisheries policy. We shall be pursuing this. In particular, we shall be exploring at the IGC whether there are treaty changes which could be made which would help to ensure that the fishing opportunities arising form national quotas provide real benefits to the fishing communities of the flag member state.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations he had with the Secretary to the Cabinet concerning the Government's response to the Scott inquiry; and where and when such consultations took place. [16601]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 22 February 1996]: Successive Governments have not disclosed the nature of specific sources of the advice they receive from the civil service.

Military Exports

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the procedures which have been obtained in his Department since 1974 to ensure that Parliament was informed of exports of military goods and services and dual-use goods and services to (a) the middle east, (b) Iran and (c) Iraq; and if he will indicate in which years changes took place. [17344]

Mr. Lang: Details of the exports of goods to Iran and Iraq are published monthly in "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom".

No information is given for the middle east as a bloc, although each of the individual countries' data are published.

Information is given for goods only. Broad commodity details are given for all countries. Figures for military goods and dual-use goods are not given as identified blocks. However, the Ministry of Defence, in the annual publication "UK Defence Statistics", publishes identified military exports and imports, but only in relation to broad geographic areas. There are no figures for dual-use goods because the classification under which export statistics are collected does not refer to dual-use goods.

Until 1988, the DTI published the "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom". From 1989 to early 1995, they were published by the Central Statistical Office. Since April 1995, they have been published by HM Customs and Excise. Details of the exports of goods to Iran and Iraq are published monthly in "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom".

On 26 February, the Government placed in the Library of the House a document setting out the current position in relation to informing Parliament on the export of arms, with an explanation of how this practice has evolved.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of total United Kingdom (a) exports, (b) imports and (c) total trade is represented by trade with EC countries according to the latest available figures. [17785]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on imports and exports is published by the Central Statistical Office in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", which is available in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Accountability

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of the Trade, pursuant to paragraph K8.1 of the Scott report relating to ministerial accountability, what additional measures he proposes to ensure his Department's compliance with paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". [17318]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 February 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the speech that I made on 26 February 1996, Official Report, columns 589–604.

Endowment Policies

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the percentage of endowment policy holders who may have insufficient funds on maturity to meet their full mortgage repayment liabilities expressing this data by year of maturity. [17472]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 27 February 1996]: I regret that this information is not available.

Insolvency Service

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been spent on the process of contracting out the work of the Official Receiver, broken down to show (a) the cost of the consultancy work, (b) the cost of the legal advice, (c) the notional costs of Insolvency Service staff working on the contracting out process and (d) the costs of Department of Trade and Industry services provided to the Insolvency Service. [17462]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 February 1996]: The cost of the contracting-out exercise undertaken by the Insolvency Service, in the period beginning October 1994, when the Government announced their intention to pursue the preferred option identified by the then consultants, to the announcement on 28 February 1996 of the outcome, was as follows:

	Cost (£) exclusive of VAT where applicable
Costs of external consultants	668,201
Costs of external legal advice	54,122
Estimated costs of Insolvency Service staff	1,265,527
Costs of DTI services provided to the Insolvency Service	300,744
Total	2,288,594

Official Receiver

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) bankruptcy and (b) winding-up orders were made during the 12 months ended 31 January; and how many were administered by each Official Receiver's office during the 12 months ended 31 January. [17463]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 February 1996]: The number of bankruptcy and winding-up orders made in the 12 months to 31 January 1996 and the number of cases in which the administration was completed in each Official Receiver's office are as set out in the table.

Office	Bankruptcy orders		Winding-up orders

USA (Inward Investment)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what has been the level of inward investment into the USA by United Kingdom firms in each of the last 20 years; [18202]

(2) what have been the levels of inward investment into the United Kingdom by (a) German firms, (b) EU firms and (c) US firms in each of the last 20 years. [18159]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on foreign direct investment is published regularly by the Central Statistical Office in "Business Monitor MA4, Overseas Transactions", which is available in the Library of the House. The latest information, for 1994, was published by the Central Statistical Office on 18 December 1995 in "First Release", CSO(95)296.

United States-United Kingdom Trade

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the mutual United Kingdom-United States balance of trade in each year since 1975. [18157]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is published by the Central Statistical Office in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistical" which is available in the Library of the House.

United States-United Kingdom Relations

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on United States-United Kingdom relations; and what proposals he has to develop closer relations. [18160]

Mr. Oppenheim: Relations between the United Kingdom and the United States are excellent. Our exports to the United States continue to grow and we remain the largest foreign investor there, while the US sends the largest share of its overseas investment here. Relations will be enhanced by the action plan agreed last December by the European Union and the United States which provides for co-operation on issues of international importance including further trade liberalisation. In addition, the Department of Trade and Industry will launch in May the second phase of the "North America Now" campaign, which will seek to achieve even more business in the United States for British companies.

Germany (Balance of Trade)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the balance of trade with Germany in each year since 1975. [18158]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is published by the Central Statistical Office in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", which is available in the Library of the House.

W H Smith

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will refer W H Smith to the Director General of Fair Trading in respect of discrimination against smaller circulation periodicals. [18344]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Director General of Fair Trading—DGFT—is responsible for investigating allegations of anti-competitive behaviour, abuse of monopoly power or restrictive trade practices. If anyone has firm evidence that W H Smith may be breaching competition law, they should bring it to the attention of the DGFT.

Magnox Reactors

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 511, if the fossil fuel levy after 1988 will cover British Nuclear Fuels plc's liability for the Magnox reactors; and if he will make a statement. [17833]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The fossil fuel levy will cover British Nuclear Fuels plc only until the end of the nuclear non-fossil fuel obligation—NFFO—in 1998.

Battery Technology

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance he has given to universities and other research institutions engaged in battery technology. [18772]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Financial support from my Department to universities and other research institutions is by means of science budget allocation to the six UK research councils and subsequently by research grants to individual researchers or research units. Funds are available for research in batteries technology through the responsive grant mode in the Engineering and Physical Science Research Council. Detailed information on project expenditure for specific technologies that rely on a diverse range of underlying science is not collated centrally. The Engineering and Physical Science Research Council—EPSRC—has identified in its February 1996 publication "Response to Foresight" that a number of its programmes contribute to underpinning research in fuel cells and photovoltaics. It is intended that a specific managed programme in energy storage will be developed by the EPSRC across the materials, chemistry, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering and clean technology programme, with a view to launching it in 1997.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what extent the technology foresight initiative focused on battery technology; and what policy changes resulted. [18771]

Mr. Taylor: Battery technology emerged as a technology worthy of emphasis for the energy sector in the technology foresight exercise. The energy panel considered that the challenge to manufacture electricity storage systems with, say, four times the energy density and comparable life cycle of the traditional lead/acid battery at competitive cost, remained formidable. It identified additional requirements for advanced high-energy batteries, including improved state-of-change sensors and electronics for thermal management.

Following the recommendations of the technology foresight panel, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council is proposing a directed research activity in energy storage, particularly batteries, which is expected to be launched in late 1996/early 1997. The main applications will be for uninterruptable power and for transport applications.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will introduce legislation to make it an offence to seek to induce a creditor to delay instituting an action for bankruptcy against a debtor solely for the reason that a successful action would disqualify the debtor from membership of the House. [18863]

Mr. Oppenheim: No. It is for creditors to decide if and when they should institute bankruptcy proceedings.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people have been declared bankrupt in the past three years for debts totalling (a) less than £5,000, (b) £10,000, (c) £20,000, (d) £50,000, (e) £100,000 and (f) £1,000,000 or over or such classification as is available. [18557]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The number of bankruptcy orders in England and Wales in the last three years was as follows:

1995: 21,933.

Information on the size of debts could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18149]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 1 March 1996]: DTI staff may not in general hold directorships in public or private companies, firms or other organisations, although the holding of non-executive directorships in small, private, family-type companies is permitted if no conflict of interest results. Officials consult their line managers on such matters. Any fees paid are an individual matter and no central records are kept.

A number of senior DTI staff hold unpaid developmental non-executive directorships. Details of these, together with those of other Departments, are published in the Cabinet Office's annual report.

British Coal

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines he has issued to the company DTZ regarding the requirement that it approves the sale of British Coal property. [18814]

Mr. Page: British Coal is responsible for the disposal of its property. It is advised by DTZ. My Department has issued no guidelines to DTZ.

Collieries

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contact his Department has had with (a) HJ Banks and (b) the DTZ bank concerning (i) Houghton Main colliery and (ii) Woolley colliery. [18815]

Mr. Page: My Department has had no contact with HJ Banks or British Coal's property advisers DTZ about either colliery.

Faulty Workmanship

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to amend part III of the Fair Trading Act 1973 in respect of redress for faulty workmanship. [19137]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have no plans to do so.

Inward Investment (Merseyside)

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he is taking to improve the management of inward investment inquiries and the delivery of projects on Merseyside. [18842]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The Department of Trade and Industry supports the work of INWARD, the north-west's regional development organisation, in handling inward investment inquiries throughout the region, including Merseyside. In addition, the Government office for Merseyside is working with local partners, including INWARD, to develop and agree an inward investment strategy for Merseyside aimed at improving the region's inward investment performance.

Decommissioning

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's responsibility for the decommissioning costs including site clearance costs of the experimental nuclear reactor previously operated by the Scottish universities research and reactor centre at the former national engineering laboratory site in East Kilbride. [18066]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1996]: Responsibility for the decommissioning of the experimental nuclear reactor at the Scottish Enterprise technology park at East Kilbride lies with the operator concerned, which in this case is the Scottish universities research and reactor centre.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors led to the delay in the announcement relating to the privatisation of the Insolvency Service that occurred on 28 February. [18684]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The announcement on the outcome of the contracting-out exercise undertaken by the Insolvency Service was delayed to provide an opportunity for further ministerial discussion.

Departmental Expenditure (Waveney)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total expenditure by his Department in Waveney in 1994–95; what it will be in 1995–96, broken down by category; and if he will make a statement. [17843]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 4 March 1996]: For 1994–95 none. For 1995–96, Norfolk and Waveney business link has a total budget of £1.4 million to provide a wide range of business support services through all its outlets, including the one in Lowestoft.

TRANSPORT

A46–A47 Link Road

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been (a) awarded and (b) paid to Leicestershire county council for (a) the eastern district distributor road and (b) the A46–A47 link road in each year since the start of the scheme. [17049]

Mr. Norris: No resources have been allocated for EDDR.

The A46–A47 link road has been accepted for the transport supplementary grant since 1985–86. The following amounts have been accepted:

Year	Bid	Accepted	Spend
1985–86	135	135	21
1986–87	681	681	133
1987–88	1,459	1,200	20
1988–89	1,942	1,942	249
1989–90	1,988	1,988	1,910
1990–91	2,184	2,184	209
1991–92	2,601	2,601	38
1992–93	2,314	2,314	327
1993–94	2,026	2,026	90
1994–95	741	741	150
1995–96	1,348	750	[1]315
1996–97	3,740	[2]0	—

TSG is paid at a rate of 50 per cent.of accepted expenditure, with the remainder being allocated as credit approvals. Grant may be adjusted downwards because of underspending in earlier years, but this is calculated on the authority's programme as a whole. It is not possible to say how much of Leicestershire's grant adjustments relate to underspending on this scheme.

[2] Although no resources were sanctioned, the scheme was accepted for TSG and remains eligible for further support.

Paloma (Seaman's Death)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the circumstances surrounding the death of a seaman on a Cypriot-registered coaster in the Humber on 22 February; and if he will make a statement. [17991]

Mr. Norris: The marine accident investigation branch is investigating the explosion which took place on the Paloma and the chief inspector of marine accidents will take appropriate action once the investigation has been completed.

Milford Haven

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ship-system failures and serious incidents involving tankers have happened at Milford Haven since January 1993. [17891]

Mr. Norris: There have been 10 incidents reported to the marine accident investigation branch involving tankers in Milford Haven since 1993.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish for each of the last three available years (a) the number of tanker movements into Milford Haven and (b) the total tonnage of oil and oil products unloaded, loaded and carried by sea. [17981]

Mr. Norris: The figure requested for Milford Haven are as follows:

	Tanker movements (Number)	Oil traffic million tonnes
		Inwards	Outwards
1992	2,964	20.8	14.3
1993	2,858	21.1	14.2
1994	2,738	20.2	13.7

Petroleum Coke

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the procedures governing the transportation of pet coke. [17925]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about the procedures governing the transportation of PET Coke.

The procedures governing the transportation of petroleum coke are contained in the Code of Safe Practice for Solid Bulk Cargoes (the BC Code) adopted by the International Maritime Organisation.

I enclose the relevant extract from this Code for your information.

Appendix B: Petroleum coke[1] calcined or uncalcined

040	MHB	311	1.25 to 1.67	B7

[1] For comprehensive information on transport of any material listed refer to sections 1–10 of this Code.

Properties

Black, finely divided residue from petroleum refining in the form of power and small pieces.

Observations

The provisions of this appendix should not apply to materials having a temperature below 55°C when loaded.

Segregation and stowage requirements

"Separated from" foodstuffs.

"Separated longitudinally by an intervening complete compartment or hold from" all goods of class 1, divisions 1.1 and 1.5.

"Separated by a complete compartment or hold from" all other dangerous and hazardous materials (goods in packaged form and solid bulk materials).

Special requirements

1. Should not be loaded when the temperature exceeds 107°C.

2. In cargo spaces over tanks containing fuel or material having a flashpoint under 93°C, a layer of 0.6m to 1.0m of the material at a temperature not greater than 44°C should first be loaded into the cargo space. Only then may the material, at 55°C or above, be loaded into that cargo space.

3. The loading of the material should be as follows:

(1) for shipments in cargo spaces over fuel tanks, the loading of the 0.6m to 1.0m layer at a temperature not greater than

44°C (as required in 2) should be completed prior to the loading of the material at 55°C or above in any cargo space of the ship;

(2) upon completion of the loading described in 3.1, a layer of 0.6m to 1.0m of the material at 55°C or above should first be loaded in each cargo space (including those cargo spaces, if any, already containing a layer of the material at a temperature not greater than 44°C) in which the material is to be loaded in accordance with this entry;

(3) upon the completion of the loading of the 0.6m to 1.0m layer of the material at 55°C or above in each cargo space (as required in 3.2), the normal loading of the material at 55°C or above may proceed to completion; and

(4) personnel should be warned by the master of the ship that calcined petroleum coke loaded and transported under this entry is hot and that injury due to burns is possible if precautions are not taken.

Transport Policies and Programmes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place copies in the Library of all the decision letters for transport policies and programme bids submitted by local authorities in 1995. [18164]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to ensure that HGVs and other vehicles with restricted rear views, have correctly fitted and aligned rear-view mirrors. [18094]

Mr. Norris: Mirrors fitted to vehicles on the road are already required to meet specific standards in respect of installation and field of vision. It is the driver's responsibility to ensure that the mirrors are adjusted correctly.

Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the involvement of UK airports in the process of air service negotiations. [18443]

Mr. Norris: Where a UK airport has an interest in the outcome of air services negotiations, representatives from that airport are involved in the Department's internal briefing meetings where tactics and objectives are reviewed and a negotiating strategy agreed. At those briefing meetings, the Department also considers the case for the airport representatives attending the air services negotiations.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what rights have been negotiated for (a) UK and (b) foreign airlines to initiate new international services for UK regional airports in the last six months; [18445]

(2) which airline services have been unable to operate to UK regional airports as a result of failure to achieve a successful negotiation of traffic rights in the last six months. [18444]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom already has a very large number of bilateral agreements with foreign partners which allow the airlines of both sides access to regional airports in both countries. In most cases, it is solely a lack of demand that inhibits the provision of services under these agreements. In the past six months, new rights have been negotiated successively for:

(i) Air Mauritius (Manchester);

(ii) Gulf Air (Manchester and other UK regional airports);

(iii) Air Seychelles (Manchester);

(iv) Pakistan International Airways (any UK regional airport);

(v) El Al (a third ex-gratia Manchester service).

Under the agreements with Mauritius, Bahrain, the Seychelles and Pakistan, UK airlines can serve any UK regional airport. However, the agreement with Israel specifies London as the only UK point for both sides. El Al's Manchester rights have been granted ex-gratia.

The only service which has been unable to operate to a UK regional airport because of a failure to achieve a successful negotiation of traffic rights in the last six months is a service to Jamaica applied for by Air Jamaica.

EC Aviation Directives

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the EC directives issued over the last two years relating to aviation. [18441]

Mr. Norris: Council directive 94/56/EC of 21 November 1994 establishing the fundamental principles governing the investigation of civil aviation accidents and incidents.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many transport supplementary grant projects in England this year are for schemes individually costing less than £5 million; and what proportion of the total spending on transport grants is represented by schemes of less than £5 million each. [18297]

Mr. Norris: Transport supplementary grant is paid in support of major road schemes costing more than £2 million, bridge assessment and strengthening, and structural maintenance of principal roads. Of the £688.9 million expenditure accepted for TSG in 1995–96, £267.4 million—38.8—was for expenditure on bridges and structural maintenance, and £421.5 million—61.2 per cent.—was for major road schemes. Out of this £421.5 million, £60.3 million—14.3 per cent.—was for the 66 major schemes costing less than £5 million.

For 1996–97, the equivalent figures are: total accepted expenditure of £551.1 million, of which £190.9 million—34.6 per cent.—is for bridges and structural maintenance, and £360.2 million—65.4 per cent.—for major road schemes. Of this latter figure, £37.6 million—10.4 per cent.—is for the 36 major schemes costing less than £5 million.

Disabled People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many national mobility centres there are in Great Britain; and how many of those are in Coventry. [18545]

Mr. Norris: There are 19 independent mobility centres in Great Britain. None of those is in Coventry, but the city does have a commercial centre which, I understand, offers a similar service. The Department publishes information on the service provided by all the centres in the UK in its "Guide to Services in the UK offering Advice, Information and Assessment to Disabled and Elderly Motorists". A new edition is being prepared and I will send a copy to the hon. Gentleman when it is available.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many disabled people require specialised transportation. [18541]

Mr. Norris: There are about 6 million disabled adults in this country, of whom around 4 million have a disability which is likely to affect their mobility. Many are already using accessible mainstream public transport while others rely on specialist door-to-door services. Under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, regulations will be introduced requiring all future public transport to be fully accessible. This should mean that, increasingly, special services are seen as a complement to, rather than a substitute for, accessible public transport.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to make accessible to disabled people information about transport suitable to their specific mobility needs; [18544]

(2) what representations he has received from organisations concerned with access to disability transport information. [18543]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport already provides a wide range of information to disabled people about accessible public transport services, special services and personal mobility. This information is generally available in print and alternative media including Braille, tape and large print.

A new edition of the Department's comprehensive guide "Door to Door—A Guide to Transport for Disabled People" will be published shortly.

All the Department's information is produced in consultation with disabled people, including our statutory advisers the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee.

Passenger Rail Services

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the progress of the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising towards securing by 1 April the transfer to franchise agreements of 51 per cent. or more of passenger services previously operated by the British Railways Board. [18488]

Mr. Watts: The franchising programme is making good progress. Fourteen of the 25 train operating companies, representing 61 per cent. of passenger revenue in the financial year 1994–95 have either been franchised or are in the process of being sold.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which subsidiaries of the British Railways Board he estimates will be in public ownership at 1 January 1997. [18484]

Mr. Watts: The current subsidiaries of the board presently expected to be in public ownership on 1 January 1987 are British Rail Savings Co. Ltd., British Rail International Ltd. and Southdowns Village Ltd. A number of other subsidiaries may be formed between now and 1 January 1997, the majority of which are expected to be sold by that date.

Some passenger train operating companies may remain in public ownership on 1 January 1997. The precise number will depend on the progress which the franchising director makes in selling railway franchises this year.

The following are dormant subsidiaries of the board. They seem likely to remain subsidiaries at 1 January 1997:

British Transport Hotels Ltd.
Freightliners Ltd.
British Rail Engineering Ltd.
Advanced Passenger Trains Ltd.
RFD (Channel Tunnel) Ltd.
Europabus Ltd.
Oil Rail Terminals Ltd.
Railway Finance Ltd.
Masterhaul Ltd.
The Pullman Car Co. Ltd.
Railway Sites Ltd.
British Rail Investments Ltd.
British Rail Hovercraft Ltd.
British Rail Maintenance Ltd.
Britravel Nominees Ltd.
Mastertank Ltd.

Sea Empress

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests for assistance have been received by his office in respect of clear-up operations following the Sea Empress disaster. [18358]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 March 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about personnel involved in clear-up operations following the 'Sea Empress' disaster.

On 29 February the total number of personnel involved in clear-up operations was 806.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if animal welfare organisations involved in the rescue operations arising from the Sea Empress disaster will be able to claim compensation from the ship's insurers. [18353]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Yes. Compensation for cost incurred and economic loss suffered as a result of the oil pollution damage for the Sea

Empress including the costs of reasonable measures taken to prevent or minimise the damage, will be available from the shipowner's insurer and from the international oil pollution compensation fund, which is funded by levies on the oil industry.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what accounts he has received from (a) the Milford Haven port authority or (b) other sources of the grounding of the Sea Empress; and if he will make a statement. [17980]

Mr. Norris: The investigation into the causes of the Sea Empress accident will involve the gathering of information from all relevant sources. The establishment of the inspector's inquiry has been advertised formally inviting all parties with material facts to come forward.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons no heavy duty salvage tug was available at Milford Haven on the day the Sea Empress went aground; and if he will make a statement. [17982]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C.J. Haris to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about tugs.

The Coastguard Agency has two emergency towing vessels stationed at Stornoway and Dover during the winter months. It has an arrangement by liaison with a tug operator to provide, on an availability basis but without guarantee, a tug in the South West Approaches (Penzance/Lands End). This vessel was not available during the Sea Empress incident.

The availability of heavy duty tugs is otherwise a matter for the commercial market; their provision is arranged by professional brokers to meet the requests of the masters or owners of ships, or salvors.

Lighthouse Keepers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lighthouse keepers there are in (a) Great Britain and (b) Northern Ireland. [18774]

Mr. Norris: There are 105 lighthouse keepers in Great Britain and six in Northern Ireland.

East Coast Main Line

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the contract between Stagecoach Holdings plc and British Rail with regard to its operations on the east coast main line. [18573]

Mr. Watts: The contract between InterCity West Coast and Stagecoach Holdings plc, under which Stagecoach provided overnight seated train services from Aberdeen, Dundee, and Edinburgh to London and return, is commercially confidential.

Road Construction

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the planned expenditure on road construction in the years (a) 1995 to 1996 and (b) 1996 to 1997; and if he will make a statement. [18741]

Mr. Watts: Expenditure on new construction in England, net of capital receipts and design, build, finance and operate current costs, is estimated at £1,169 million in 1995–96 and £973 million in 1996–97 in cash terms. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made two announcements on 28 November 1995 to detail the background to this expenditure.

InterCity

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the accounts of InterCity at the time of its break-up. [18572]

Mr. Watts: The accounts of InterCity for this period are incorporated in the British Railways Board's annual report and accounts for 1993–94, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Channel Tunnel (Inspections)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates of inspections undertaken by his Department on the channel tunnel for the last 12 months, indicating the deficiencies found at each inspection. [18676]

Mr. Watts: Safety inspections of the channel tunnel are carried out by inspectors of national authorities of UK and France and other experts authorised by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority. These inspectors visit the tunnel several times a month and report to the safety authority on a range of matters; no major deficiency has been reported. Where problems have been identified, they have been raised with Eurotunnel which has taken corrective action.

Herald of Free Enterprise

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the recommendations of the report into the loss of the Herald of Free Enterprise that have not yet been implemented; and when he expects these to be implemented. [18674]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the House of 16 October 1995, Official Report, columns 83–84.

Accident Statistics

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by police force the number of accidents involving (a) heavy goods vehicles, (b) passenger service vehicles and (c) minibuses for each of the last five years. [18668]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the following three tables. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Personal injury road accidents involving an HGV by year and police authority: Great Britain 1990–1994

Accidents

Car Sharing

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards car sharing; what guidelines he issues to (a) insurance companies and (b) the public on the scale of contributory fares which can be accepted as (i) non-profit-making by the Inland Revenue and (ii) non-commercial in respect of third party insurance cover; and what plans he has to give increased publicity and encouragement to such schemes. [18856]

Mr. Norris: The Government support the concept of car sharing and brought forward the Transport Act 1980 which legalised non-profit-making car sharing schemes. Following the 1980 Act, the Department of Transport issued advice which, amongst other points, covered the calculation of the sharing of costs with regard to the relevant requirements of the Inland Revenue and the insurance companies.

Marine Safety

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he requires the Marine Safety Agency to carry out with the fishing industry; and what proposals he has for improving the system of consultation. [18785]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the Marine Safety Agency's consultation with the fishing industry and proposal for its improvement.

The existing consultation framework comprises principally of meetings of the MSA's Fishing Industry Safety Group (FISG), of FISG Sub-Groups and of Steering Groups set up by FISG to oversee particular developments, together with informal and formal written consultation on legislative and other proposals. A meeting has been arranged with representatives of the fishermen's federations on Tuesday 26 March to discuss industry's concerns about current arrangements and to seek agreement on a framework for future consultation.

London and Continental

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what individual value he has put on each of the assets and debt write-offs which are to benefit London and Continental. [19094]

Mr. Watts: The value of the assets and businesses to be transferred to London and Continental is that which has been determined by the open and keenly fought competition which London and Continental won. It is not for me to second-guess the market price.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he decided to use public funds to subsidise the channel tunnel rail link. [19097]

Mr. Watts: The then Secretary of State announced on 14 June 1990, Official Report, columns 482–500, that he was prepared to consider a capital grant for the channel tunnel rail link, but that the terms then on offer were not acceptable. On 24 January 1994, Official Report, columns 19–34, my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State announced in an oral statement that the Government were willing in principle to provide substantial public sector support, in recognition not only of the significant domestic transport and regeneration benefits from the new line but of some of the very large benefits to international passengers.

Emergency Towing Study Team Report

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he first received a copy of the report of the emergency towing study team; and what action he has taken to implement its findings to date. [18892]

Mr. Norris: The chief executive of the Coastguard agency received a copy on the Secretary of State's behalf on 25 May 1995. The report recommended that priority for providing emergency towing vessels should be given to two areas, the Dover strait and north-west Scotland. The Coastguard agency chartered emergency towing vessels for these two areas for the six-months winter period.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 28 February, Official Report, column 581, what consultations he has conducted on the report of the emergency towing study team. [18901]

Mr. Norris: The Coastguard agency, through the government shipping broker, invited tenders for two emergency towing vessels for the Dover straits and north-west Scotland. This involved discussions with the Government broker, with tugowners and brokers and with the British Tugowners Association. The agency also had regard to the recommendations of Lord Donaldson's report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas", which itself drew on extensive discussions with those who presented evidence to his inquiry.

Oil-handling Ports

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for the latest available year the 10 main oil-handling ports in the British Isles, indicating the total tonnage (a) disembarked and (b) embarked in each case, and the appropriate proportion for each port. [17984]

Mr. Norris: The top 10 oil-handling ports in the United Kingdom for 1994 are as follows:

	Thousand tonnes
Port	Total	Inwards	Outwards	Proportion of UK total percentage
Forth	40,476	2,400	38,076	15.0

Drivers (Pass Plus)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many newly qualified drivers have taken pass plus since February 1995; what percentage of such drivers this represents; and what has been the success rate on pass plus in percentage and number terms. [19201]

Mr. Norris: As at the end of February 1996, 12,383 certificates had been issued to drivers completing a pass plus course. This represents about 1.5 per cent. of newly qualified drivers. It is too early to determine what effect pass plus will have had on the accident record of those that have taken the course.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers have taken pass plus; what percentage have passed; and if he will make a statement. [19200]

Mr. Norris: As at the end of February 1996, 12,383 certificates had been issued to drivers completing a pass plus course. Pass plus which is designed for newly qualified drivers, is not a pass/fail course although the approved driving instructor giving the training has to be satisfied that the pupil has reached a satisfactory standard on all six modules.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will now institute an inquiry into how the decision that the millennium exhibition should be sited in Greenwich was announced by the policy chairman of the Corporation of London before her statement in Parliament. [19073]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 5 March. [17169]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 5 March. [17171]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is carrying out official engagements in the far east.

Sir Gerrard Neale

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister when Sir Gerrard Neale last visited 10 Downing street; and if on that occasion he telephoned UCB from there. [19098]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

I have nothing further to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 29 February, Official Report, column 672.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Prime Minister what facilities have been extended to Sir Gerrard Neale to have access to 12 Downing street in the last 12 months; and what access he has had to office and telephones there. [18864]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

It is not the practice of my right hon. Friend to indicate what meetings he has with Members of Parliament or former Members of Parliament. No office or telephone facilities have been made available to Sir Gerrard Neale at 12 Downing street.

Iraq (Exports)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister when he was first informed of the 1988 amendments to the 1985 Howe guidelines for defence-related exports to Iraq. [18538]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

The first time that my right hon. Friend learnt that a change in the guidelines had been considered in 1988 was in a minute from his private secretary dated 13 November 1992.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 169, if he will approach the companies and individuals to which he refers to ascertain whether they are prepared for their names to be disclosed. [18536]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

No.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to implement the recommendation made at page 1797 of the Scott report on the use of intelligence by Government Departments. [18530]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the speech made by my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade on 26 February, Official Report, column 589.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Prime Minister which officials from which Departments contributed to the preparation of the press briefing issued by the Cabinet Office on 15 February; what guidance they were given in regard to the matters within the Scott report on which to produce a digest and commentary; which recommendations by Sir Richard Scott according to the digest have already been accepted; and when these recommendations will be implemented. [18554]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

Successive Governments have not disclosed the nature or the specific sources of the advice that they receive from the civil service on their discussions with them. The Government's proposals in response to the recommendations of the Scott report were set out in the speech made by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, on 26 February, Official Report, columns 589–604.

Export Control Licences

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out Her Majesty's Government's definition of lethal and non-lethal military equipment as used in the consideration of export control licences. [18552]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

Any defence equipment which was designed to kill would clearly fall within the category of lethal equipment. Other equipment has to be considered individually according to its nature and specifications.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Officials (Interests)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the officials in his Department who have declared a current interst; what requirements are placed on officials to declare relevant interests; in what form records of such declarations are kept; and if he will establish a central register of officials's interests. [16890]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Civil servants faced with a conflict of interest are required to declare their interst to senior line management so that a decision can be taken on how best to proceed. These rules are set out in section A10.1 of the Scottish Office staff handbook.

Staff who disclose a relevant interest do so on the understanding that the declaration, like all employment matters, is confidential between them and their employer.

We do not plan to establish a central register of officials' interests.

Invest in Britain Bureau

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inward investment projects have settled in Scotland as a result of guidance given by the Invest in Britain Bureau over the past three years; and if he will make a statement [17731]

Mr. Kynoch: Locate in Scotland works in close co-operation with the Invest in Britain Bureau and it is therefore very difficult to categorise specific projects as projects which came to Scotland as a result of involvement by IBB.

In the three years to March 1995, Locate in Scotland helped to attract to Scotland a total of 257 inward investment projects involving planned investment of over £2 billion and the expected creation or safeguarding of more than 31,000 jobs.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representation Scotland has on the Invest in Britain Bureau; and if he will make a statement. [17768]

Mr. Kynoch: The Invest in Britain Bureau is a division of the Department of Trade and Industry and Locate in Scotland works in close co-operation with it. Both IBB and LIS are represented on the committee on overseas promotion, which is an interdepartmental committee which exists to co-ordinate the UK's inward investment activity and, in particular, to ensure that the activities of individual bodies are complementary and incremental to the overall UK effort.

Chungwha Picture Tubes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost of the package offered by his Department to Chungwha Picture Tubes; and if he will make a statement. [17736]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West on 29 November 1995 at column 580.

Fire Brigades

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many incidents the fire brigades in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland attended in (i) 1980, (ii) 1994 and (iii) 1995. [18052]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is given in the table. Data for 1994 are provisional and for 1995 are not yet available.

Incidents attended by local authority fire brigades in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland and in (i) 1980 and (ii) 1994

[2] Provisional data which comprise fire incidents attended between January and December 1994 and special service incidents attended between April 1994 and March 1995.

Fire Services

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review his allocation of funds to the fire services consequent on the formation of the new local government unitary authorities; and if he will make a statement. [18053]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The allocation of revenue funding to the fire service in Scotland is a matter for local authorities. As to capital allocations, in consequence of the reorganisation of local government there will be a separate programme for fire service capital allocations, starting at a level significantly about average spending in previous years.

Retail Premises Burglaries

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many retail premises burglaries in (a) Inverclyde and (b) Strathclyde resulted in a conviction in each of the past five years. [18050]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information held by the Scottish Office covers only recorded crimes of housebreaking for all non-domestic property and convictions where housebreaking was the main offence. It is not possible, therefore, to provide the information requested.

Young People (Full-Time Education)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many men and women aged between 16 and 18 years in (a) Inverclyde and (b) Strathclyde are in full-time education; and if he will give the figures (i) in real terms and (ii) as a percentage of the total number of 16 to 18-year-olds in (a) and (b). [18051]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The available information for 1994–95 is:

Psychiatric Beds

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many psychiatric beds have closed in each year since 1980–81 in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland. [18049]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of beds closed is not centrally available. The pace of change in this sector is directed by patient needs. The organisation of long-stay care and community services are determined by continuous assessment of local needs involving health boards and local authorities. The aim is to secure the most effective package of services, both in hospital and in the community, that meet the specific needs of patients and carers.

The table shows the net average available staffed psychiatric beds available as at 31 March from 1981 to the latest available year.

Scottish Pre-School Play Association

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure the Scottish Pre-School Play Association is grant aided to an extent no less than similar groups elsewhere in the United Kingdom. [17539]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In providing grants to voluntary organisations under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 we are bound to take account of the resources available for that programme and the range of demands on it. We have funded the Scottish Pre-School Play Association to the fullest extent possible within available resources. We have made available a grant of £140,000 for 1996–97. This represents an increase of over 85 per cent. in two years, making SPPA the most highly core-funded organisation of all the children's organisations which receive section 10 support.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am pleased to announce that I am allocating the painting "The Return from the Flight into Egypt" by the 16th century artist Paris Bordone to the national galleries of Scotland. SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of recipients receiving family credit (a) in Wales, (b) in Mid Glamorgan and (c) in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney. [17929]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 4 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what is the latest estimate of the number of recipients receiving Family Credit (a) in Wales, (b) in Mid Glamorgan and (c) in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are not kept which are specific to Mid Glamorgan, Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney but are available for Benefits Agency Offices. The figures have been produced by a computer scan and the latest available is for 10 November 1995. The figures are provisional and subject to change.

	Families in receipt of Family Credit
Wales	38,247
Mid Glamorgan[1]	6,722
Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney Benefit Offices	1,491

[1] The figure for Mid Glamorgan has been compiled using figures for the Benefit Offices at Aberdare, Bargoed, Bridgend, Caerphilly, Merthyr Tydfil, Pontypridd, Porth and Tonypandy.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons individuals who have detachment orders have received arrears notices from the Child Support Agency when their employers have failed to pay the CSA. [17706]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. John Heppell, dated 4 March 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the issues of Child Support Agency arrears notices.

You asked about the issue of arrears notices by the Agency where an absent parent's method of payment is by Deduction of Earnings Order (DEO). The reason such notices are currently issued is that employers, even when complying with a DEO, can vary the date of their payments; but arrears notices are issued automatically to the absent parent by the Child Support Computer System (CSCS) when payments are more than eight days late.

The Agency has recognised that this process needs to be amended where a DEO is in force and the employer is complying with it. In April 1996, CSCS will be updated and enhanced. As part of this enhancement CSCS will no longer issue arrears notices to absent parents whose method of payment is DEO. Instead, a monthly analysis will be introduced to identify those cases where the absent parent's employer has not operated the DEO correctly. The Agency will follow these up with the employer concerned.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Advertising and Public Relations

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the total spending by his Department on advertising and public relations in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96; and if he will list the major advertising campaigns executed or planned indicating the expenditure on each. [18252]

Mr. Burt: The information is as follows:

1995–96[1]: £4,400,000

[1] Estimated figure to the end of the year.

The above figures are for advertising only and include expenditure by the Department's executive agencies. The Department does not incur expenditure on public relations.

The major[1] adverting campaigns, executed and planned by this Department and its agencies are as follows:

Some aspects of the 1995–96 costs have yet to be finalised.[1] The term "major" has been defined as campaigns costing more than £100,000.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what modifications have been made to his Department's computers to accommodate bringing the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996, into effect; and what other costs have been incurred in respect of their implementation. [19112]

Mr. Roger Evans: The introduction of this legislation has not required modification to any of the Benefits Agency's computer systems.

Details of other costs involved are set out in the table:

Information on additional costs arising from the introduction of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 for 1995–96

[1] Reflects the additional administration costs arising from the introduction of this legislation.

[2] Reflects the costs arising from the development and delivery of training to operational staff; the redesign and printing of revised claim forms; the development and distribution of revised procedural guidance.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applicants have been refused benefit under the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 because (a) their cases have been determined since 5 February and (b) they did not claim asylum at the port; and how many of these cases involve children. [19116]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines he has issued to local authorities in respect of the implementation of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 with particular reference to children. [19117]

Mr. Evans: The Social Security (Persons From Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 came into force on 5 February 1996. Guidance to accompany the amending regulations was issued by this Department to all local authorities in January 1996, in advance of the implementation date. The guidance does not specifically refer to children as the new arrangements do not affect social service departments' responsibilities under the Children Act 1989.

Residential Care

Mr. MacGregor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many family homes were sold in the last year for which figures are available to help pay for nursing home and other residential long-term care. [17772]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not available centrally.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further measures he proposes to introduce to reduce the level of benefit fraud. [19338]

Mr. Lilley: As part of the five-year security strategy which I announced last July, and in the light of the results of benefit reviews of income support and housing benefit which suggest that around 10 per cent. of benefit claims are fraudulent, I propose;

(a) to double to 600,000 the number of home visits to check new claims for entitlement and review existing ones.

(b) to increase cross-checking of information about benefit claimant, both within DSS and with local authorities through a new computerised housing benefit central register, to detect fraud.

(c) to introduce from this autumn the benefit payment card which will virtually eliminate fraud in the payment system.

(d) to initiate a series of month-long local anti-fraud drives in major urban areas round the country, designed to give people who have just drifted into abusing the benefit system the chance to put their claim right and to catch those who choose not to do so. The drives will be preceded by two weeks of intensive local publicity, leading up to the launch of a "freephone" hotline to tell DSS staff in confidence about suspected fraud; local data-matching exercises; increased numbers of visits to claimants; use of bar-code scanners in post-office to detect stolen order books; and special drives on categories of employers and self-employed likely to be involved in benefit fraud.

(e) to launch three initiatives involving local authorities. First, a study of a unified computer system to share information with the Benefits Agency, which would help prevent housing benefit fraud. Secondly, a study looking at how best to prevent fraudulent housing benefit claims from entering the system, through improved, standardised methods and checks. Thirdly, encouraging local authorities to set up teams to work alongside the Benefits Agency to tackle organised housing benefit and council tax benefit fraud, sharing the expertise of the Benefits Agency in this field.

(f) to establish the benefit fraud investigation service on 1 April, through the merger of Employment Service and Benefits Agency security staff. About 1,100 Employment Service investigators will join the Benefits Agency.

I expect these changes to contribute to a new target for savings from anti-fraud activities of £1.5 billion in 1996–97.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nigeria

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations the British high commission in Lagos made to other European embassies in Lagos regarding action to be taken by European Governments over the death sentence passed on Ken Saro-Wiwa; [18595]

(2) what discussions the British high commission in Lagos had with other European embassies in Lagos regarding the death sentence passed on Ken Saro-Wiwa. [18594]

Mr. Hanley: The British high commission in Lagos has regular meetings with European partners in Lagos. We consult closely on a wide range of human rights issues and continue to monitor the situation closely.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's plan to raise the violation of human rights in Nigeria at (a) the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and (b) other inter-governmental conferences; and if he will support at the Commission on Human Rights the creation of a special rapporteur on violations of human rights in Nigeria. [18470]

Mr. Hanley: We are working with our EU and Commonwealth partners to secure a resolution on Nigeria at the UN Commission on Human Rights, including the appointment of a special rapporteur. In addition, we are members of the Commonwealth ministerial action group, which is considering a range of options to ensure that Nigeria takes steps to respect human rights.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of States for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the British high commissioner in Nigeria has made to the Nigerian Government relating to the judicial process faced by the 19 Ogonis currently on trial for murder. [18472]

Mr. Hanley: Our high commissioner has repeatedly made it clear to senior Nigerian Ministers that the international community expects the 19 Ogonis facing trial to be brought before a properly constituted court that respects their basic legal rights.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is being taken (a) by his Department and (b) in co-operation with other Commonwealth countries to promote the improvement of human rights in Nigeria. [18471]

Mr. Hanley: We are working with our EU and Commonwealth partners to secure a resolution on Nigeria at the UN Commission on Human Rights, including the appointment of a special rapporteur. In addition, we are members of the Commonwealth ministerial action group, which is considering a range of options to ensure that Nigeria takes steps to respect human rights.

National Resources Institute

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what future progress there has been in deciding the future ownership of the National Resources Institute. [19551]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I announced on 14 December that final bids for the NRI were being invited from three groups. Two final bids were received. Following detailed consideration of these in relation to the Government's objectives for the transfer, I have decided to give preferred bidder status to a consortium of the university of Edinburgh, the university of Greenwich, Imperial college of science, technology and medicine and Wye college of the university of London. Subject to the satisfactory conclusion of negotiations, I intend that the NRI should transfer to the new owners as soon as practicable.

Iraq

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring of food and humanitarian aid by British or multilateral agencies has taken place in Iraq. [19059]

Mr. Hanley: Food and humanitarian aid is monitored by the Overseas Development Administration through visits to northern Iraq and through regular reporting by non-governmental organisations and multilateral agencies working in Iraq. The ODA also funds monitoring of multilateral water and sanitation projects in Baghdad-controlled Iraq.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of sanctions on the health of the population of Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [19058]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Food and medicines are exempt from sanctions. However, Saddam Hussein's refusal either to comply with the requirements of relevant UN Security Council resolutions or to spend enough of the regime's resources on humanitarian supplies has caused much suffering in Iraq. He has also so far refused to implement UN Security Council resolution 986, which would allow the sale of Iraqi oil for humanitarian supplies, bringing much-needed relief to millions of Iraqis. Since 1991, we have provided £73 million of humanitarian aid to Iraq.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current value of Iraqi assets frozen in Britain; what the value was in 1991; and if he will make a statement. [19110]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The value of Iraqi assets on 1 January 1991 was US$1,363 million. The value at the end of September 1995, the latest figures available, was US$769 million. The figures for the value of Iraqi deposits in UK banks include private as well as Iraqi Government assets. Iraqi assets are frozen under the provisions of UN Security Council resolution 661, which was adopted on 6 August 1990.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts have been established with representatives of parties in northern Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [19057]

Mr. Davis: We maintain regular contacts with all the main parties in northern Iraq. We welcome the continuing ceasefire between the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan and the Kurdish Democratic party, and support efforts to achieve a lasting agreement that has the backing of the parties in northern Iraq.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he had with the Secretary to the Cabinet concerning the Government's response to the Scott inquiry; and where and when such consultations took place. [16606]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 22 February 1996]: Successive Governments have not disclosed the nature of the specific sources of the advice they receive from the civil service.

Asia House

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Government funding has been given to support the work of Asia House. [18567]

Mr. David Davis: None, but the Government fully support the work of Asia House and works closely with the organisers to promote the project. In particular, the Deputy Prime Minister will soon host a reception in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to mark the project's launch.

British Military Equipment (Exports)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries currently subject to embargoes on the export of British military equipment; when in each case the embargo was imposed; which equipment is covered; and if he will make a statement. [18742]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 27 November 1995, Official Report, column 426–27, which lists the embargoes we currently apply and the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 30 January 1996, Official Report, column 654–55, which gives details of the equipment covered by each of these embargoes. For ease of reference, the following is a list of embargoes and the date of their imposition:

Country	Date of imposition
United Nations embargoes
Iraq	6 August 1990
Libya	31 March 1992[1]
Somalia	23 January 1992
Liberia	19 November 1992
UNITA[2] (Angola)	15 September 1993
Rwanda[3]	17 May 1994
Former Yugoslavia[4]	25 September 1991
EU embargoes
China	26 June 1989
Burma	9 July 1991
Zaire	7 April 1993
Sudan	15 March 1994
Nigeria[5]	11 November 1995
Former Yugoslavia[4]	26 February 1996
National embargoes
Iran	1 March 1993
Argentina	5 April 1982
Voluntary embargoes agreed by the (then) Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE)
Armenia	28 February 1992
Azerbaijan	28 February 1992

[1] Came into force is April 1992.

[2] In the case of Angola, there is a mandatory embargo on UNITA. However, UN Security Council 976 of February 1995, calls on both parties to cease any acquisition of arms and war material during the presence in Angola of the UN Peacekeeping Force, UNAVEM III.

[3] In the case of Rwanda, Security Council resolution 1011 of 16 August 1995, decided that restrictions imposed by paragraph 13 of resolution 918 (1994) shall not apply with regard to the sale or supply of arms and related material to the Government of Rwanda.

[4] For the Former Yugoslavia: UN Security Council resolution 1021 of 22 November 1995 established a timetable for phased lift of the arms embargo. Specific details of this can be found in Official Report Lords Column WA71 of 24 January 1996. This has been followed by the adoption of a Common Position on the Former Yugoslavia by the EU on 26 February 1996 at the Foreign Affairs Council.

[5] In the case of Nigeria, the PM announced a UK arms embargo on 11 November. The EU-wide arms embargo against the Nigerian regime came into effect from 20 November 1995.

Winston Churchill Speech, Missouri

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Winston Churchill's speech at Fulton, Missouri; and if he will make a statement. [16854]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: A series of events to mark the 50th anniversary of Sir Winston Churchill's speech is being planned by Westminster college in Fulton, Missouri, in collaboration with the Churchill memorial and the international Churchill societies. Baroness Thatcher will speak at the college before a banquet in the room where Sir Winston gave his address. Her Majesty's Government will be represented by the British consul-general from Chicago. There are no plans for any separate commemorations by Her Majesty's Government.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to recall the Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands; and if he will make a statement. [18945]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The original petition to my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary from members of the Legislative Council in the Turks and Caicos Islands, requesting the governor's removal, was received in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on Monday 4 March. It is being studied and a response will be issued in due course.

Convention on Human Rights

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of which other signatory states to the European convention on human rights maintain similar laws and practices to those where the United Kingdom has been found in breach. [18971]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: No such assessment has been made following findings of breach. Finding of a violation relates to the particular circumstances of the individual case and binds the state concerned. In preparing their response in particular cases, the Government not infrequently draw on a comparative analysis of law and practice in other Council of Europe countries where they are similar to the matter under challenge.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Kingdom embassies or high commissions have assisted, funded or commissioned events or meetings of publications to put the case for Northern Ireland being part of the United Kingdom; and what plans he has to (i) expand and (ii) initiate innovative and pro-active programmes to make the case for the Union abroad. [18972]

Mr. Rifkind: British missions overseas undertake a wide variety of proactive work in disseminating and explaining British Government policy on Northern Ireland, which includes our commitment to Northern Ireland's status as part of the United Kingdom as long as a greater number of its population so wish. Examples of such work are: regular briefing of host Governments, media and other contacts; dissemination of detailed background information, including video and radio material; arranging visits to Northern Ireland by public or press figures to increase their understanding; and arranging overseas visits by British Ministers who take the opportunities to explain Government policy on Northern Ireland.

Contributing to a clearer understanding overseas of Northern Ireland remains a high priority for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, its embassies and high commissions.

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

I understand that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office informed the hon. Member on 7 February that this application has not been referred to the Home Office. That remains the case.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Enterprise and Higher Education Initiative

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total expenditure in (a) actual and (b) current prices on the enterprise and higher education initiative in each year since 1988; how many higher education institutions have participated in the initiative; and what was the total funding per higher education institution. [17661]

Mr. Forth: The total figure for expenditure on the enterprise in higher education initiative in Great Britain is £60 million. It is not possible at this time to give year on year figures for Great Britain but those for England and Wales are given.

All prices £000

Mrs. Gillan: The average length of time between the lodging of an appeal to the special educational needs tribunal and the hearing of the appeal is five months.

Further details are in the SEN tribunal president's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many appeals which have been lodged with the special educational needs tribunal are currently pending. [18093]

Mrs. Gillan: I understand that some 800 appeals which have been lodged with the special educational needs tribunal are currently pending.

I have asked the president of the tribunal to write to the hon. Member with up-to-date figures for appeals.

Local Education Authorities (Costs)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were (a) the numbers of staff and (b) the administrative costs incurred by each education authority in England for the year 1994–95. [18855]

Higher Education (Funding)

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the level of funding allocated by the Government to the Higher Education Funding Council for England in respect of indirect costs relating to research projects for each of the financial years from 1990–91 to 1994–95. [18661]

Mr. Forth: The Government notify the Higher Education Funding Council for England of a total figure for funding for teaching and research. The funding council advises on the split between resources for teaching and research and allocates block grant to institutions. Funding for research from the funding council is intended to contribute to the indirect costs associated with specific projects funded by the research councils and to support basic research undertaken at institutions' direction. Universities are expected to charge full costs to industrial and other sponsors of research.

The funding council was established under the provisions of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 and assumed responsibility for paying grant to institutions on 1 April 1993. In the academic year 1993–94, it allocated a total of £618,150,500 for research. In 1994–95, that figure was £626,664,907. It is not possible to identify an element in respect of indirect costs.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils aged three and a half will lose their reception places under the Government's nursery voucher scheme. [18798]

Mr. Robin Squire: No three-year-old should lose a school place as a result of the nursery voucher scheme because there will be no deduction from resources local education authorities are currently making available for such places.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is (a) the estimated number of four-year-olds eligible, (b) the number of full-time equivalent places already available for (i) each existing category of provider and (ii) in total, (c) the additional number of full-time equivalent places expected from existing and new providers by category and total and (d) the estimated deficit or surplus number of places, in each of the areas of local education authorities participating in the voucher scheme for early age education. [19109]

Mr. Squire: The best estimates of the number of four-year-olds in January 1995, with and without a place in the maintained sector in each of the phase 1 local education authorities are given. Estimates of participation are less reliable when broken down by both year group and LEA area. The Department does not hold information on the number of places in the private and voluntary sectors.

LEA	Estimated number of 4 year olds	Estimated number of 4 year olds without a place in the maintained sector in January 1995	Estimated number of 4 year olds in maintained provision at January 1995
Wandsworth	3,300	700	2,600
Westminster	1,900	800	1,100
Kensington and Chelsea	1,650	850	800
Norfolk	9,300	3,000	6,300

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 280, if she will estimate the shortfall in places available relative to the number of children whose parents require places under the nursery voucher scheme. [18942]

Mr. Squire: Based on estimated population and participation figures, some 145,000 four-year-olds in England were not in nursery education places in the maintained sector in January 1995. Many of these have places in the voluntary or private sectors.

Project Work

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances a claimant participating in a part-time education or training course will not be required to attend the compulsory work experience element of project work; and, where such attendance is, required, what protection will be afforded to the claimant's rights in respect of course attendance. [18752]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 4 March 1996]: Claimants who are participating in part-time education and training will not be exempted, for that reason, from the requirement to attend project work for a 21-hour week. Providers of work experience will be required, however, to tailor the pattern of hours in order to accommodate the claimant's studies.

Travel-to-interview Scheme

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place a copy of the review report on the travel-to-interview scheme and the date on which the report was based in the Library.[19102]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about placing a copy of the review report on the Travel to Interview Scheme and the raw data upon which the report was based in the House of Commons Library.

It is anticipated that a copy of the report will be placed in the House of Commons Library. Research reports are designed to be comprehensive in their content so it is not normal practice to place copies of the raw data in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people unemployed for between four and 13 weeks, by region, have applied for, and how many have been granted, assistance from the travel-to-interview scheme since its inception. [19100]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on how many people unemployed for between four and thirteen weeks, by region, have applied for, and how many have been granted, assistance from the Travel to Interview Scheme since its inception.

I am unable to provide the information you ask for, as my Jobcentres do not record how long people who apply for TIS have been unemployed. However, during a recent evaluation it was recorded that 26% of applications were from people unemployed for less than 13 weeks.

I hope this is helpful.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many days were taken to carry out European social fund audits on each TEC in Greater London. [18517]

Mr. Paice: Since September 1992, five visits have been carried out by auditors from the Department's ESF unit and from European institutions to TECs in Greater London looking specifically at European social fund activity. A total of 10 man days have been spent by Department staff on site visits, and a total of six days have been spent by European institution auditors.

In addition to the site visits, time has been spent on preparatory and follow-up work. The amount of time spent on this activity is not recorded on an individual case basis.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many different types of audit each TEC in Great Britain has undergone. [18519]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils in England are private limited companies and, since they were established in 1990–91, they have been audited each year by their statutory auditors. They are also required to have an effective internal audit function.

Government office financial appraisal and monitoring teams check contract compliance regularly and each TEC is also subject to Government office audits on health and safety and quality assurance arrangements with its suppliers.

The Department's internal audit team also visits a small sample of TECs each year as part of a biennial examination of Government office expenditure. Their role is to provide the necessary assurance to the DFEE accounting officer that moneys voted by Parliament have been properly disbursed. They also undertake work on behalf of other Government Departments to minimise the number of different Government auditors visiting TECs.

The National Audit Office visits a small sample of TECs each year as part of its examination of the Department's appropriation account. The NAO may also from time to time pay visits to TECs as part of its wider role in researching, for example, value-for-money issues.

Where TECs are in receipt of funding from the European Commisison, they are under an obligation to grant access to representatives of the Commission of the European Court of Auditors to examine its records at any reasonable time. The Department also conducts specialised monitoring of TEC claims from the European social fund.

Responsibility for auditing arrangements for TECs in Wales and local enterprise councils in Scotland rests respectively with the Secretary of State for Wales and the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many days were taken to carry out quality and health and safety audits on each TEC in Greater London. [18516]

Mr. Paice: Government office for London staff spent 14 person days on quality and health and safety audits in each training and enterprise council in London.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many days were taken to carry out financial control audits on each TEC in Greater London. [18518]

Mr. Paice: The number of person days spent on financial controls audits in London training and enterprise councils during the last 12 months was as follows:

AZTEC: 216
CENTEC: 208
CILNTEC: 163

[19337]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce the award of a three-year licence to Essex, North London and North West London training and enterprise councils and Northamptonshire chamber of commerce, training and enterprise which have now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standards we set.

GCSE Results

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will provide the GCSE average point score (A*=7) per 15-year-old pupil of each secondary comprehensive school in England by local education authority in each year from 1991 to 1995 as calculated by her Department, together with the number of such pupils per school in each year and the percentages of those pupils achieving at least five GCSEs at grades A to C, at least five GCSEs at Grades A to G, at least one GCSE at grades A to C and at least one GCSE at Grades A to G; [18887]

(2) if she will provide figures for the average number of GCSE subjects entered per pupil, to three decimal places, in each year since 1991 for each individual 20th group of all 15-year-old pupils ranked according to their average point scores (A*=7), for the cumulative 20th groups, indicating the numbers of each group and of the whole cohort in each case, in respect of (a) all such pupils in England, (b) all such pupils in the local education authority maintained sector, excluding those of grant-maintained schools, (c) all such pupils in the grant-maintained sector, (d) all such pupils in the maintained sector excluding those from independent schools and (e) all such pupils from the independent sector. [18891]

Mrs. Gillan: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the answer in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans the Office for Standards in Education has to introduce a method of assessing the comparative effectiveness of secondary comprehensive schools in terms of their pupils' GCSE achievements in relation to their capabilities, as measured by statistically estimated GCSE scores derived from social characteristics, in all its inspections from April 1996; to what extent these will apply the method and characteristics set out in Ofsted's report of July 1995 "Assessing Schools' GCSE Performance"; and if she will make a statement; [18888]

(2) if she will list (a) Ofsted's comparative school effectiveness indicators alongside the name of each school and its local education authority for each of the secondary comprehensive schools included in the analysis of its report "Assessing Schools' GCSE Performance" of July 1995, (b) Ofsted's expected three-year average of the annual GCSE point score (A*=7) for each of these schools for 1992 to 1994, (c) each school's actual three-year average of its point scores in the same period and (d) such information for the period 1993 to 1995 as is available; [18889]

(3) if she will make a statement on the Ofsted report of July 1995 entitled, "Assessing Schools' GCSE Performance", in respect of the findings of its research on the indicators of the comparative effectiveness of all English secondary comprehensive schools in terms of the standards of GCSE achievements in relation of Ofsted's statistically estimated assessments of pupils' capabilities. [18890]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

HEALTH

After-school Clubs

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he proposes for vetting staff in after-school clubs and play schemes after their deregulation. [18039]

Mr. Bowis: We are currently considering this.

Childless Couples

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which health authorities provide NHS treatment for (a) assisted and (b) surrogate pregnancy for childless couples; and if he will make a statement; [17965]

(2) what plans he has to designate (a) assisted and (b) surrogate pregnancies for childless couples on the NHS as clinically essential; and if he will make a statement. [17964]

Mr. Horam: Information on which health authorities provide national health service treatment for assisted and surrogate pregnancies is not available centrally.

The Department of Health does not designate which services are clinically essential. This is a matter for clinicians. Decisions about the availability of infertility services are for clinicians and individual health authorities to determine, as they are in the best position to decide priorities in the light of local needs and circumstances.

GP Fundholders

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what rights community health councils have to make representations on the medical care decisions taken by general practitioners involved in total fundholding; [17958]

(2) what obligations are placed on general practitioners involved in total fundholding to consult with representatives of patients to identify community needs for medical care. [17957]

Mr. Malone: Total purchasing pilot projects operate under devolved purchasing arrangements from health authorities. In the same way as health authorities, they are required to consult community health councils about significant service changes. Similarly, in accordance with the priorities and planning guidance for the NHS and the accountability framework for general practitioner fundholding, total purchasing projects are expected to involve patients in the planning and development of services. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Tameside Acute Care Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the cost of severance payments made by Tameside Acute Care trust to achieve its proposed reduction in the number of managers; [17933]

(2) if he will publish a complete schedule of the severance costs of health authorities and trusts incurred to meet the management reduction targets for 1996–97. [17944]

Mr. Malone: These are local matters and this information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Maggie Aikman

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to recover a proportion of the severance payment made to Mrs. Maggie Aikman by the Burnley Health Care trust following her appointment as finance director to Gwent health authority. [18036]

Mr. Malone: I am taking no such action.

Population Statistics

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current Office of Population Censuses and Surveys estimate of the population of England and Wales. [18330]

Mr. Horam: The mid-1994 estimate of the resident population for England and Wales is 51,620,500. This is the latest available.

Vacant General Practitioner Posts

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received criticising the Medical Practices Committee's power to decide whether vacant general practitioner posts should be abolished or advertised. [18348]

Mr. Malone: None.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in each of the last five years the Medical Practices Committee has decided to disperse the patient list of a vacant general practitioner post following a recommendation by a health authority that the post be advertised. [18457]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Medical Practices Committee

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the preparation of the day-to-day casework of the Medical Practices Committee is done manually. [18437]

Mr. Malone: The preparation of day-to-day casework of the Medical Practices Committee is a matter for the chairman and members of the Medical Practices Committee.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made as to whether it is appropriate that the Medical Practices Committee may disperse a patient list regardless of a family health services authority recommendation to the contrary. [18331]

Mr. Malone: Decisions on whether patient lists should be advertised or dispersed are made by the Medical Practices Committee in pursuit of its statutory function to maintain an even distribution of general medical practitioners throughout England and Wales. The committee should take the views of health authorities into account.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the overall computerisation of the Medical Practices Committee has taken place. [18473]

Mr. Malone: The committee's secretariat has access to the Department's computerised office information system. Further computerisation will be subject to the committee submitting a full business case.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost to his Department of financing the Medical Practices Committee in each of the last five years. [18332]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Year	Budget £
1991–92	408,000
1992–93	358,000
1993–94	357,000
1994–95	394,000
1995–96	383,000

The budgets for 1991–92 and 1994–95 included money for one-off requirements.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health within what time scale a health authority must present its recommendations to the Medical Practices Committee when a general practitioner post falls vacant. [18349]

Mr. Malone: Regulation 11(5) of the General Medical Services Regulations 1992, as amended, requires family health services authorities to consult with the local medical committee before submitting any recommendation to the Medical Practices Committee on the need to fill vacant posts. No formal time scale is laid down.

HIV (Anti-viral Medicines)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the Delta trial in the United Kingdom and (b) the protease inhibitor trials in the USA; and what steps he is taking to ensure that patients with HIV have ready access to combination therapies of dual or triple anti-viral medicines. [18489]

Mr. Horam: Preliminary results from the recent Delta trial on combination therapy were very encouraging for patients who have not taken AZT previously and publication of the full results is expected this summer. The American trials on protease inhibitors are showing promising results. The Government have made substantial sums of money available for HIV and AIDS services. Where different drug regimes are available, it is a matter for individual clinicians to discuss with patients and decide on the best form of treatment.

NHS Trust Chairpersons (Crown Cars)

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has recently changed the guidelines relating to the issue of crown cars to chairpersons of NHS trusts. [18345]

Mr. Malone: There have not been any recent changes to the guidelines on the issue of crown cars to chairmen of national health service trusts. The crown car scheme relates only to those staff employed by NHS bodies and there are no comparable provisions for chairmen and non-executive directors of NHS trusts.

NHS Trusts (Administration Costs)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in rank order the amount spent on administration in each NHS trust in England. [18288]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many successful applications for section 64 grant aid funding for 1996–97 went to (a) non-London organisations and (b) new applicants. [18340]

Mr. Bowis: Ministers are currently in the process of considering applications for grants under the section 64 general scheme in 1996–97. Individual organisations will be notified of the outcome as soon as consideration of their application is complete.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public and private beds there (a) were in 1985, (b) were in 1990 and (c) are currently in the Leeds general infirmary, St. James hospital and in the Leeds Healthcare region as a whole. [18343]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally is shown in the tables. Organisational changes that have taken place over the 10-year period mean that data are not directly comparable.

Information on numbers of amenity beds ceased to be collected centrally from 1 April 1991 when the power of authorisation for private beds was delegated to health authorities and trusts.

Patient Numbers

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are registered by the family health services authorities in England and Wales. [18367]

Mr. Malone: The available data are contained in the general medical services statistics for England and Wales (April 1995), copies of which are available in the Library.

Legal Costs

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on the collection of legal costs he is awarded by the courts following an individual's litigation against him and his Department. [18478]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has no specific policy on enforcement of costs orders. Each case is decided on the basis of the costs incurred and the difficulty and cost of enforcement. Where a case is struck out at an early stage, the costs involved are minimum and although an order for costs may be sought, the costs of enforcement are rarely justified.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what occasions the chief medical officer has discussed the control of MRSA with Houghs Healthcare. [18826]

Mr. Horam: The chief medical officer has had no discussions with Houghs Healthcare. He is aware of the leaflet about MRSA which Houghs Healthcare has sent to all Members of Parliament and considers it inaccurate.

Dorset Community Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ascertain and publish the reasons for the resignation of Ms Vanessa White, the chief executive of Dorset community trust, and the amount of severance payments made to her. [18827]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for the trust.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the medicines listed in the Prodigy project are (a) generic and (b) brand-named; and how this balance was reached. [18736]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 19 December 1995, columns 1154-55.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on the establishment of a national formulary for prescribing, and if he intends the Prodigy project to be a pilot for a formulary. [18727]

Mr. Malone: There are no plans to establish a national prescribing formulary. General practitioners including those using the Prodigy system, are free to prescribe the drugs of their choice.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the aim of the Prodigy project. [18734]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 18 December 1995, columns 946.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list how the money allocated by his Department to the Prodigy project is being spent; and what sums are being contributed by the participating IT software companies. [18770]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield on 18 December 1995, column 946. Information relating to expenditure by the participating information technology software companies is commercially confidential.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the IT software companies participating in the Prodigy project. [18733]

Mr. Malone: AAH Meditel; EMIS; Genisyst; Medical Care Systems (in conjunction with Digitalis of the Netherlands) and VAMP.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the numbers and types of general practices participating in the Prodigy project, (b) their locations by region or district and (c) their fundholding status; and if he will make a statement on how the practices were chosen. [18769]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield on 18 December 1995, column 945.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations, and from whom, he has so far received on the Prodigy project. [18735]

Mr. Malone: Representations have been made by a number of bodies including patient organisations, pharmaceutical companies and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry. In addition, views have been expressed by professional medical bodies, including the General Medical Services Council and the Royal College of General Practitioners as part of the consultation process.

Live Births

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many live births were registered in England and Wales during 1995. [18860]

Mr. Horam: The provisional count of the number of live births registered in England and Wales during 1995 is 646,511.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting for in-patient treatment at the end of each of the last five years. [18828]

Mr. Horam: The information available is contained in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England at 31 March 1991–95", copies of which are available in the Library.

Lindane

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on links between lindane usage and population cancer clusters. [18728]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health's independent expert advisory Committee on the Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment reviewed the available epidemiological data on breast cancer in women and levels of lindane in serum and breast fat tissue at its meeting on the 16 March 1995. The committee concluded that there was no clear evidence of an association between serum and levels of lindane in fat and breast cancer at the present time, and recommended that the matter be kept under review. No research has been specifically commissioned by the Department.

Neurological Services, Sussex

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last assessed plans for neurological services in Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [18660]

Mr. Horam: The provision of neurological services in Sussex is a matter for the health authorities concerned, which are currently considering options for the development of neurosciences and neurosurgery services. Their decision may require to be referred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Residential Care

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assumptions he has made in his calculation of the cost to local authorities of implementing the changes to capital asset levels for long-term care of (a) the cost of local authority residential care (i) in London and (ii) outside London, (b) the cost of private and voluntary residential care (i) in London and (ii) outside London, (c) the cost of nursing home care (i) in London and (ii) outside London, (d) the average client contribution to each type of residential care, (e) the number of current residents who will be affected by the proposed changes in capital asset levels, (f) the number of self-funders who will now become eligible for assistance in (i) nursing homes and (ii) residential homes and the consequent additional costs to local authorities and (g) the number of new entrants to residential care who will receive local authority support in 1996–97. [18963]

Mr. Bowis: A range of factors and assumptions was used in calculating this cost, including consideration of a survey conducted by the local authority associations.

Emergency Care Services

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make an announcement on the future of emergency care services. [19552]

Mr. Dorrell: Tomorrow.

Capital Limits (Residential Accommodation)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the final allocation in 1996–97 to social services authorities in England in respect of costs incurred as a result of the raising from 8 April of the capital limits for charges for residential accommodation. [19553]

Mr. Dorrell: Following consultation with the local authority associations about the implications of the changes to the capital limits, the Government have decided, subject to parliamentary approval of the 1996–97 main estimates, to make available £64.487 million for English social services authorities in 1996–97. The increase compared with the element for England underlying the figures published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report, 1996–97", will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure for 1996–97. Subject to parliamentary approval, this provision will be made available to local authorities through a special grant in 1996–97; thereafter these resources will be taken into account in the calculation of the revenue support grant in the normal way. Consequential provisions will be made for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Capital Disregard Rules (Residential and Nursing Homes)

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he plans to announce the distribution formula for additional funding to local authorities as a consequence of the changes in capital disregard rules for assessment for residential and nursing homes; [18974]

(2) what estimate he has made of the total reductions of income to local authorities as a result of changes to capital disregard rules for assessment for residential and nursing homes; [18975]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) today.

Capita Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those private finance initiative schemes in which the Capita Group is (a) expressing an interest and (b) bidding. [19178]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally. It is for individual national health services trusts and health authorities to determine the private sector companies that they negotiate with when preparing a private finance initiative scheme.

GP Prescribing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the annual average cost of prescriptions per patient prescribed by (a) general practitioner fundholders and (b) non-fundholding general practitioners for each year since the introduction of fundholding for which the figures are available for (i) England, (ii) each regional health authority and (iii) each family health service authority. [14967]

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1996, c. 562]: I regret that there was an error in the information provided. The correct information available is shown in the table.

Prescribing costs (£ NIC/PU)—England

	GP fundholders	Non GP fundholders
1991–92	36.92	38.84
1992–93	41.40	43.64
1993–94	45.88	48.20
1994–95	50.24	52.28
1995–96 (to Q2)	52.16	54.48

1. NIC/PU=net ingredient cost per prescribing unit.
2. NIC is essentially the cost of prescriptions before allowing for pharmacists' discounts and container costs.
3. PUs are a weighting used to adjust for the higher cost of drugs for older people. Each person counts as 1 PU for under 65-year-olds, 3 PUs for 65-years-olds and older.
4. The two groups (Fundholding GPs/Non-Fundholding GPs) are not exclusive—during the period some non fundholders will have become fundholding and vice versa.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Football Hooligans

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were listed on the National Criminal Intelligence Service's database of suspected football hooligans at the end of each season since 1990–91; and how many are currently listed; [17851]

(2) how many foreign nationals from each of the countries participating in the Euro '96 championship are listed on the National Criminal Intelligence Service's database of suspected football hooligans. [17852]

Mr. Maclean: The National Criminal Intelligence Service football unit's computer system does not retain information about the number of people listed on the database on a season-by-season basis. The names of 6,010 suspected or known football hooligans are on the system at present. The database does not hold information concerning foreign nationals.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure that foreign nationals convicted of football-related offences in their home country are prevented from attending the Euro '96 championships. [17850]

Mr. Maclean: The police are working closely with the Immigration Service to ensure that foreign nationals convicted of football-related offences coming to the United Kingdom for Euro '96 are identified on arrival and, if appropriate, refused entry.

The majority of those attending the championships will be nationals of the European Economic Area, EEA—which comprises the 15 member states of the European Union, Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein—who can be refused entry to the United Kingdom where information on their past conduct, which can include previous convictions, suggests that they pose a genuine and serious threat to public safety. Non-EEA nationals can be refused entry to the United Kingdom under the relevant provisions of the immigration rules.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the Premier league and Football league clubs together with the number of people arrested and subsequently given an exclusion order under the Public Order Act 1986 for each season since 1990–91. [17849]

Mr. Maclean: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The total number of exclusion orders made since part IV of the Public Order Act 1986 came into force on 1 August 1987, is 6,303; 308 orders are currently extant.

Private Security Industry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will make available to hon. Members the review of the case for statutory regulation of the private security industry. [17950]

Mr. Maclean: Our review is a continuing exercise to examine the case for regulation of the private security industry. The Home Affairs Committee report has made a valuable contribution to our considerations and the Government's response will reflect our conclusions.

Foundation for Business Responsibilities

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Charity Commission investigated payments to Efficiency in Local Government Ltd. from the Foundation for Business Responsibilities as part of its inquiries into the foundation. [18095]

Mr. Sackville: The Charity Commission has not carried out any such investigation.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Department on what dates the Charity Commission's second inquiry into the payments by the Foundation for Business Responsibilities to Marketforce Communications (a) began and (b) ended; when the Charity Commission received the list of donors to the foundation; if he will make a statement on the Charity Commission's access to the research projects and leaflets which were produced by Marketforce Communications on behalf of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities; and if he will make a statement on the activities of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities since 1992. [18201]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The Charity Commission's second inquiry began on 18 November 1993 and ended on 31 March 1995. It is regretted that the answer given to the hon. Member on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 697–98, mistakenly referred to this as a period of four and a half months. A list of donors to the foundation was received by the commission on 23 December 1991. The commission has a copy of one leaflet produced by Marketforce Communications Ltd., which was provided in connection with the first inquiry. It is understood that, since 1992, the foundation has been involved in the sponsorship of and participation in research and educational activities covering subjects such as health issues of employees, insider trading, business ethics and responsible global marketing.

Drugs (Searches)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of people stopped and searched for possible drugs in the Metropolitan police area during 1995. [18263]

Mr. Maclean: Statistics on stops and searches for 1995 are not yet available.

Fire Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of setting up a national committee of inquiry into the structure, funding and organisation of the fire services. [18289]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend has no such intention at present. The Fire Service has recently been subject to a major value-for-money study by the Audit Commission. The resulting report made important recommendations which are being pursued by the organisations concerned through the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council and elsewhere.

National Joint Unit

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to integrate the national joint unit with (a) the National Criminal Intelligence Service and (b) the proposed national crime squad for England and Wales. [18335]

Mr. Maclean: There are no plans to integrate the national joint unit with the National Criminal Intelligence Service or a national crime squad.

Metropolitan Police (Ethnic Minority Officers)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of ethnic minority police officers in the Metropolitan police area; and what ranks such officers hold in respect of (a) men and (b) women. [18295]

Mr. Maclean: The information below, obtained from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, is correct as at 29 February.

Ethnic minority officers in the Metropolitan police

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of drug finds in each of the prisons in the Greater Manchester area in each of the last 12 months. [18257]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of drug finds in prisons in the Greater Manchester area in each of the last 12 months.

John Porter Charitable Trust

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations into the John Porter Charitable Trust have been carried out by the Charity Commission since 1990; what prompted these investigations; and what were their conclusions. [18203]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 29 February 1996]: An inquiry by the Charity Commission into the John Porter Charitable Trust was conducted between August 1992 and March 1993 and prompted by the commission's own programme of monitoring charity accounts. It did not reveal any material issues which required further investigation.

Fire Service College

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the proposals for dealing with the Fire Service College and its existing debt; and if he will make a statement on the future plans for maintaining the service training provision. [18731]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 13 February, Official Report, column 517.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the Government's response to the report on the options necessary for the continuation of the Fire Service College. [19108]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 13 February, Official Report, column 512.

Jury Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the restrictions on persons excusable from jury service as of right (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in other EU countries. [18767]

Mr. Maclean: The entitlement to be excused from jury service as of right is restricted to Members of Parliament, the forces, and medical and other similar professions. It has long been accepted that these groups should have a right to be excused on the ground of their special and personal duties to the state, or because of their special and personal responsibilities for the immediate relief of pain or suffering. The royal commission on criminal justice considered the arrangements for selection of jurors but made no recommendation to change the restrictions. We have no present plans to assess the practice in other European Union countries.

Pat Molloy (Dental Records)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement of 28 February, Official Report, column 841, if he will make an oral statement on the dental records of Pat Molloy. [18957]

Mr. Kirkhope: No. The relevant information has been disclosed to the solicitors acting for the late Mr. Molloy's estate.

Prisoners' Brains

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have had their brains removed for medical research in the last year for which figures are available. [18909]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question on the number of prisoners who have had their brains removed for medical research in the last year for which figures are available.

When an inmate dies in the custody of the Prison Service the disposal of the body becomes a matter for the coroner and the next of kin. Prison Service staff would not be involved in soliciting body parts either for organ donation or medical research whatever the wishes of the inmate might have been.

Stalking

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to make stalking a criminal offence; and if he will make a statement. [16380]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) on 6 February, Official Report, column 111.

Disabled Prisoners

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the guidelines issued to prison governors on what provision should be made for prisoners who are physically disabled. [18321]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will place in the Library of the House the guidelines to prison governors on what provision should be made for prisoners who are physically disabled.

Relevant guidance is contained in Prison Standing Orders 1A 46–47 and 7F 6–7 and 15, copies of which are held in the Library of the House. In addition, all prison governors received in March 1995 a copy of research report "The Deaf in Prison" by a former prison officer which was a helpful exposition of the problems and needs of deaf prisoners. Copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Arrangements for the management of prisoners with physical disabilities are currently under review in consultation with organisations representing those with hearing, sight and other physical disabilities. We expect to issue revised guidance during 1996–97.

Peter Clowes

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons no decision was made by his Department in relation to the application for parole by Peter Clowes by the time of the deadline on 20 February. [18323]

Miss Widdecombe: Mr Clowes's case, like many other parole applications, had to be given full and careful consideration on its merits. Every effort was made to complete the various stages of the process by 20 February, but the need for additional information and advice in the final stages meant that a decision could not be reached until two days later.

Young Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners aged 15 and 16 years were being held in young offenders institutions and remand centres in England and Wales on the most recent date for which information is available; and if he will list the establishments concerned and the numbers held in each (a) on remand and (b) following sentence; [18373]

(2) how many young people aged 15 and 16 years were being held in establishments other than young offender institutions on the most recent date for which information is available; and if he will list the establishments concerned and the numbers held in each (a) on remand and (b) following sentence; [18374]

(3) how many young people aged 15 and 16 years were being held in private prison establishments institutions on the most recent date for which information is available; and if he will list the establishments concerned and the numbers held in each (a) on remand and (b) following sentence. [18375]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General of the Prison Service, to reply to your recent Questions asking, how many persons aged 15 and 16 years were being held in young offenders' institutions and remand centres, private prisons and those held in establishments other than young offender institutions in England and Wales on the latest available date; in which establishments they were held; and if they were held on remand or under sentence.

The latest information is for 31 January 1996 and is given in the attached table.

Remand Prisoners (Drug Offences)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were being held in prisons in England and Wales (a) on remand regarding alleged drugs offices and (b) following sentence for trafficking in drugs on the last date for which information is available. [18377]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who as been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, how many people were being held in prisons in England and Wales (a) on remand regarding alleged drugs offences and (b) following sentence for trafficking in drugs on the last date for which information is available.

On 31 January 1996 there were 1,150 remand persons held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for drug offences.

An analysis of the sentenced prison population by principal drugs offence on 30 June 1994 is given in the Table 1(d) of Prison Statistics England and Wales 1994 (Cm 3087) a copy of which is available from the library. On that date 800 persons were held for unlawful supply, 1,100 for possession with intent to supply unlawfully and 1,200 for unlawful import/export.

Prisoner Repatriations

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he received a response from the Republic of Ireland concerning the application by seven prisoners detained in the United Kingdom to be repatriated to prisons in the Republic; when he intends to reach a decision in each case; when he expects the prisoners to be repatriated; and if he will make a statement. [18899]

Miss Widdecombe: The Council of Europe convention of the transfer of sentenced persons came into force for the Republic of Ireland on 1 November 1995. The first seven requests made by prisoners in England and Wales seeking repatriation to the Republic were referred to the Irish authorities on 21 December. A response on five of these requests was received on 14 February; an response in respect of the two remaining requests is awaited.

All repatriation requests require careful consideration and repatriation is subject to both jurisdictions and the prisoner concerned consenting to the arrangements for the continued enforcement of the sentence concerned. Decisions will be made on the individual merits of each request and notified to the prisoner concerned as soon as is possible.

Children's Certificates (Public Houses)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many public houses have been issued with children's certificates. [18634]

Mr. Kirkhope: The latest available statistics are that, as at 30 June 1995, 1,669 children's certificates had been granted in respect of licensed premises in England and Wales. Statistics on the type of licensed premises concerned are not collected, but most are likely to be public houses.

Prevention of Terrorism Legislation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of people held for (a) 48 hours or under and (b) over 48 hours under the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism legislation for each year since 1975. [19069]

Mr. Howard: The number is set out in the table.

In Great Britain

	Under 48 hours	Over 48 hours
1974 (from 29 November)	13	46
1975	930	137
1976	1,006	60

1993	113	39
1995	16	18

Figures for Northern Ireland prior to 1989 are not readily available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures from 1989 to 1994, the last full-year figures are available, are as follows:

In Northern Ireland

	Under 48 hours	Over 48 hours
1989	1,119	1,580
1990	1,140	1,550
1991	1,186	1,681
1992	1,384	1,795
1993	1,252	1,638

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of people in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) England and Wales and (c) Scotland for each year since 1974 who have been (i) questioned, (ii) charged, (iii) prosecuted and (iv) convicted under the prevention of terrorism legislation. [19068]

Mr. Howard: From 29 November 1974 until 22 March 1984, 141 people were charged with offences under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts 1974 and 1976 following detention under those Acts. Fifteen cases were not proceeded with, 21 were acquitted and 105 were found guilty.

From 22 March 1984 until 31 December 1995, 94 people had been charged with offences under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts 1984 and 1989. Seventy-one were found guilty, four were acquitted and 19 cases were not proceeded with.

There are no figures available for the total number of people questioned under Prevention of Terrorism legislation.

Figures are not kept separately for England and Wales and for Scotland, and a year-by-year breakdown of charges could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Figures for Northern Ireland are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the administration and future of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [19070]

Mr. Howard: Since the Act was last renewed, one letter has been forwarded by a Member of Parliament.

In his report on the operation of the Act in 1995, the reviewer, Mr. J. J. Rowe QC, has recommended that the Act be renewed in its entirety. This view is support by the police.

Lord Lloyd has invited public comments on his inquiry into the continued need for counter-terrorism legislation and is receiving a considerable response.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants are accompanied by a child or children. [19115]

Mr. Kirkhope: In 1995, 43,965 principal applicants applied for asylum in the United Kingdom. Of these, approximately 5,400—12 per cent.—were accompanied by dependants. The estimated total number of dependants was 11,000 of which approximately half were minor children.

The figures quoted include dependants accompanying or subsequently joining the principal applicant prior to an initial decision on the application being made.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the weekly cost to the public funds of maintaining an asylum seeker in (a) a detention centre (b) a prison. [19113]

Mr. Kirkhope: For financial purposes, no distinction is made between people who have applied for asylum and others detained under Immigration Act powers. The average cost of detaining a person in a centre in the immigration service detention estate is currently estimated at £540 per week. This figure includes the cost of administrative support from headquarters.

The majority of asylum applicants detained in Prison Service accommodation will normally be housed separately in specially designated establishment, where the average cost per place in 1994–95 was £449 per week. This figure excludes headquarters costs.

The large majority of those who are detained who have claimed asylum at some stage have already had their applications rejected.

Zinc-lined Coffins

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the specification of zinc-lined coffins for the disinterment and re-interment of those hanged and buried on HM prison premises became standard practice; and if he will review it. [19154]

Mr. Sackville: A requirement for zinc-lined coffins has been specified, on health grounds, in licences for the removal of human remains in certain circumstances for very many years. The requirement would be reassessed in any case where we could be satisfied that the precaution was not needed.

Key Performance Indicators (Prisons)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent the costs of support from the parent company are contained in the cost per in-use certified normal accommodation place in accordance with published key performance indicators for privately run gaols. [18939]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 5 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking to what extent the costs of support from the parent company are contained in the cost per in-use certified normal accommodation place in accordance with published key performance indicators for privately run gaols.

The figures used to report cost per place at privately managed prisons are based on payments made to the contractor for operating the prison. Payments are made on the basis of a contract agreed as a result of the competitive process. It is a matter for the contractor to what extent any parent company costs are borne on the contract price.

Fire Authorities' Budget

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the average budget for Metropolitan fire brigades and (b) the budget for the west midlands fire and civil defence authority in 1996–97. [19050]

Mr. Sackville: The information for 1996–97 is not yet held centrally. For 1995–96 the position is as follows:

	£million
London	254.12
Greater Manchester	74.34
Merseyside	49.54
South Yorkshire	32.93
Tyne and Wear	36.18
West Midlands	71.85
West Yorkshire	55.08
Average	82.01

West Midlands Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the pension deficit of (a) the west midlands fire service and (b) the west midlands civil defence authority for each of the last five years; and if he will give the estimated figures for 1996 and 2000. [19054]

Mr. Sackville: Net payments under the firefighters' pension scheme by west midlands fire and civil defence authority are given for the latest year for which central figures are available. The figures do not differentiate between fire and civil defence.

1989–90: £4.3 million 1990–91: £4.5 million 1991–92: £4.8 million 1992–93: £5.9 million 1993–94: £6.2 million

No estimates of actual expenditure have been made by my right hon. and learned Friend in respect of the west midlands brigade for future years.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the efficiency of the community fire safety initiatives implemented by the west midlands fire and civil defence authority; [19049]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of (a) preventable fire deaths and (b) preventable child fire deaths in the west midlands fire and civil defence authority in each of the last five years. [19051]

Mr. Sackville: The west midlands fire service is to be commended for the priority which it has given to the work of its community relations department since 1991.

While it is difficult to establish a causal link between fire safety publicity and reductions in casualties, the fact that fire deaths are at their lowest level nationally for 30 years points to the effectiveness of fire safety campaigns and fire prevention work carried out by fire brigades.

Information on deaths is not available in the form requested. The available information is contained in table 60 of the Home Office publication "Fire Statistics—United Kingdom 1993", and previous years, which is available in the Library.

Theft (Walworth Town Hall)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many officials of Southwark council, the relevant trade unions, and the contract cleaning companies have been interviewed by the Metropolitan police in respect of the theft of street sweeping documents from Walworth town hall; [19060]

(2) if reference has been made to the Crown Prosecution Service in respect of theft of street sweeping documents from Walworth town hall; and if he will make a statement; [19062]

(3) to which Metropolitan police station the theft of documents relating to Southwark street sweeping contracts from Walworth town hall was reported; and on what date. [19061]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that this theft was reported at Walworth police station in September 1995 and that, following an interview with a sentenced offender, the commissioner regards the offence as cleared up. The Crown Prosecution Service has not been involved.

Newbury Bypass (Arrests)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made at the site of the proposed Newbury bypass; and how many people have (a) been charged, (b) appeared in court and (c) been convicted. [19071]

Mr. Maclean: As at 1 March 1996, there had been 345 arrests at the site of the Newbury bypass and, by 29 February, 287 people had been charged. To date, four people have appeared in court, receiving conditional discharges, and 13 have been cautioned by the police.

Exclusion Orders

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of persons (a) who are currently subject to exclusion orders under the prevention of terrorism legislation and (b) from whom exclusion orders have been removed since 1983. [19047]

Mr. Howard: There are currently 33 exclusion orders made under the of terrorism Act; 29 relate to people who have been excluded from Great Britain and four to people from the United Kingdom.

On 31 December 1982, there were 248 exclusion orders in force for which the Home Secretary was responsible. Information on the cumulative number of orders made, lapsed or revoked since that time is not readily available and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

In Northern Ireland, 33 exclusion orders have been removed since 1983.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have (a) been detained, (b) been charged, (c) been convicted, (d) been acquitted and (e) become subject to exclusion or had exclusion orders withdrawn under powers provided by the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 since August 1994; and if he will make a statement. [19048]

Mr. Howard: In Great Britain, 53 people have been detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act PTA—since August 1994. Thirteen were subsequently charged with an offence. Of these, eight have been convicted and two acquitted; the remaining three are currently awaiting trial. A further six detainees were released under the PTA then redetained under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. They have all since been released on police bail. None of those charged was charged with an offence under the PTA. One of those detained was later made the subject of an exclusion order.

In Northern Ireland, there were 682 detentions under the PTA from 1 September 1994 to 31 December 1995. One hundred and seventy-two were subsequently charged with an offence, but figures on convictions and acquittals are not readily available. None of the detainees was subsequently made the subject of an exclusion order.

Offender Tags (Sweden)

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the progress of the Swedish Government's trials of the offender tag system; and if he will make a statement. [17255]

Mr. Sackville: We have kept in touch with the Swedish Government about the trials, and noted that a substantial number of offenders have been electronically monitored, although within a different sentencing framework. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State plans to visit Sweden shortly.

WALES

Job Vacancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many job vacancies there are in the jobcentres at (a) Shotton and (b) Flint. [17377]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The numbers of unfilled vacancies notified to jobcentres in the Shotton and Flint jobcentre areas were 286 and 82 respectively at 5 January 1996, based on Central Statistical Office figures.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many foreign companies have applied to his Office or the Welsh Development Agency for grants during the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [17739]

Mr. Hague: Since March 1991, 224 foreign-owned companies have applied for regional selective assistance.

University of Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many students attended the university of Wales in the sessions (a) 1974–75, (b) 1984–85 and (c) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement; [17560]

(2) what was the total of Welsh students who attended the university of Wales in the sessions (a) 1974–75, (b) 1984–85 and (c) 1995–95; and if he will make a statement. [17561]

Mr. Richards: The information requested us as follows:

	1974–75[1]	1984–85[2]	1994–95[3]
Welsh domiciled students[4]	5,642	5,380	15,053
All students	16,681	20,486	41,522

[1] At March.
[2] At December.
[3] At December. Provisional.
[4] Information on domicile is only available for full-time students in 1974–75 and 1984–85, but they represent over 90 per cent. of the enrolment.

Banking, Insurance and Finance Sector

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his Department's latest estimates of (a) full-time and (b) part-time females in employment in banking, insurance and finance in (i) 1995, (ii) 1992 and (iii) 1990 within the areas covered by the valleys initiative; and what percentage change in each category level occurred in 1995 against (1) 1992 and (2) 1990. [17564]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on Friday 1 March, Official Report, columns 785–86.

Student Funding

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students received funding from Mid Glamorgan county council for courses outside the county in (a) 1974–75, (b) 1984–85 and (c) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [17527]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Wales Tourist Board

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of members of the Wales tourist board, the area of home residence of each member, the date of first appointment to the board, and the date on which the current appointment expires in each instance. [17887]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows:

Name	Area	First appointment made	Current appointment expires
Mr. A. R. Lewis	Mid Glamorgan	1 October 1992	30 September 1998
Mrs. G. T. Bevan	South Glamorgan	13 October 1992	12 October 1998
Mr. C. R. Jackson OBE	Clwyd	19 December 1990	18 December 1996
Mr. T. O. S. Lloyd	Dyfed	2 June 1995	1 June 1998
Mr. J. G. McAllister	Clwyd	5 May 1995	4 May 1998

Welsh National Opera

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange to meet officials of the Welsh national opera company to discuss the implication for the future of their work in Wales of the rejection by the Millennium Commission of his proposal for a national opera house for Wales. [17879]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to meet officials of Welsh national opera. The WNO is funded by the arts councils and any discussions should be held with them.

General Practitioners

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many doctors there are currently employed by the national health service as general practitioners in Wales; how many vacancies there are at present waiting to be filled; and if he will make a statement. [17880]

Mr. Hague: At 1 April 1995, the latest date for which data is available, there were 1,833 general medical practitioners in Wales of whom 1,710 were unrestricted principals. Information on the number of vacancies is not collected centrally.

Homeworkers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest available estimate of the number of homeworkers in Wales; how many of these are regarded as self-employed; and how many as employers. [17881]

Mr. Hague: Information on homeworkers is available from the labour force survey. Estimates for spring 1995 indicate that there were 30,000 people in Wales who worked from their own homes. Some 19,000 of these were self-employed. No reliable estimate for Wales is available of the number of homeworkers who were employers.

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with Invest in Britain ways in which the recent decline of inward investment in Wales can be reversed. [17883]

Mr. Hague: The absolute number of inward investment projects recorded for Wales with the Invest in Britain Bureau has, at between 60 and 70 per annum, remained relatively constant for a number of years. Our percentage share of the Great Britain total was lower in 1994–95 than in previous years, but the competition has become more intense and, at 11 per cent, it was more than double Wales' percentage share of the Great Britain population. The Welsh Office, the Welsh Development Agency, local authorities and other bodies such as the Development Board for Rural Wales and Cardiff Bay development corporation, are working together to achieve further successes. The recent announcements by Halla of Korea; STS of Japan; and Newport WaferFab of Hong Kong show that these efforts are bearing fruit.

New Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many projects for the establishment of new manufacturing industry have been financially assisted by his Department during (a) 1994–95 and (b) the present financial year; and how many of these were located in (i) Gwynedd and (ii) Dyfed. [17888]

Mr. Hague: The number of new manufacturing projects coming forward where my Department was able to make an offer of financial assistance under the regional selective assistance scheme was as follows:

	1994–95	[1]1995–96
Wales	56	45
Gwynedd	2	2
Dyfed	5	1

[1]1995–96 to end February.

Transport Grant

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons there is a lower limit of £5 million on transport grant projects in Wales; and what estimate he has made of the number of schemes to strengthen road bridges in Wales to meet the new European Union requirements that fall into a category of less than £5 million. [18296]

Mr. Hague: The £5 million transport grant threshold has been agreed with the local authority associations in Wales. They are of the view that smaller schemes are properly for the discretion of local authorities and should be funded from unhypothecated resources. Local authorities are responsible for identifying the bridges which need strengthening on non-trunk roads.

Cardiff Royal Infirmary

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the University of Wales Healthcare NHS trust concerning the transfer of elderly patients from the Cardiff royal infirmary to the University hospital of Wales on the night of 28 to 29 February; and what reasons were given for the transfer. [19149]

Mr. Hague: Although I have not spoken to the chairman of the trust about this matter, I understand that all patients transferred agreed to the move given that beds were needed at the Cardiff royal infirmary for patients requiring emergency treatment. The trust has apologised to the patients involved and will make every effort to avoid a repetition.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultation he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning the resignation of John Jasper from the chairmanship of Capita Managed Services and its effects on the bidding by the management buy-out group for the EstateCare Group of the authority; [19148]

(2) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning the suspension of the bidding process for the EstateCare branch of the authority and the suitability of the Capita Group as a partner of the management buy-out team in that bidding process. [19147]

Mr. Hague: None. The privatisation of the EstateCare Group is proceeding as planned. The two remaining bids by the management buy-out/Capita plc and Pell Frischman Group are currently being evaluated and this process will take account of their financial standing.

European Structural Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh local authorities in the European Union objective 2 and 5 regions concerning the setting up of an independent secretariat for the monitoring and assessment of European structural fund applications. [19179]

Mr. Hague: The proposal for a free-standing executive to manage European structural fund work was included in documentation tabled by the authorities and discussed at my meeting with representatives of the counties and districts in November 1995. Following my announcement to the House on 29 February 1996, Official Report, columns 1024–40, I shall be issuing a consultation document as a basis for further discussions on this subject with the local authorities and the wider partnership.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those private finance initiative schemes in respect of which the Capita Group has (a) expressed an interest and (b) submitted a bid in (i) the health sector and (ii) other sectors. [19176]

Mr. Hague: Information of this nature is treated as commercially confidential.

European Social Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the European Commissioner responsible for the European social fund concerning the administration of the social fund in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [19180]

Mr. Hague: I announced on 29 February, Official Report, columns 1024–40, that responsibility for management of the European social fund in Wales would transfer from the Department for Education and Employment to the Welsh Office in January 1997. My Department will be considering with the European Commission and with the partnership detailed arrangements for this work after that date, including the possibility of delegation to the free-standing executive body it is proposed should be established to manage structural fund programmes. I discussed the matter with Commission officials during my visit to Brussels yesterday.

TRANSPORT

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many speed restrictions have been imposed for a period greater than six weeks since 1 April 1994 on the west coast main line. [17153]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that there are currently 50 speed restrictions in place on the west coast main line. Details of past restrictions are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Northolt

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress his Department has made in developing new proposals to extend and improve the services offered at RAF Northolt for business users. [18456]

Mr. Norris: Following the decision in April 1995 not to proceed with a separate civil enclave at RAF Northolt, and the further consultation with business users and operators, my Department and the Ministry of Defence have been actively assessing what improvements might be implemented.

Royal Train

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 145, what was the operating cost of the royal train per mile travelled including overheads, maintenance and security when a member of the Royal Family was on board or when the train was being positioned. [17932]

Mr. Watts: Rail Express Systems Ltd. has supplied information that the cost of the royal train in 1994–95 including overheads, maintenance and British Transport police security, when a member of the royal family was on board or when the train was being positioned, was £136.30 per mile. This consisted of £21.30 per mile operating costs and £115 per mile for overheads, maintenance and security. Corresponding information for the calendar year 1995 is not yet available.

M66

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates his Department has made of future traffic flows for the M66 between Denton and Middleton in both directions. [18254]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about future traffic flows on the M66 Manchester Outer Ring Road.

The traffic levels do vary along the length of the motorway, so I have set out below the flows for the sections between the junctions. These forecasts are based on 16 hour daily flows.

M66 motorway section	Opening year		Design year
	Low growth	High growth	Low growth	High growth
A57 to A635	81,000	90,000	94,000	113,000
A635 to A62	73,000	82,000	85,000	101,000
A62 to A663	38,000	42,000	44,000	53,000
A663 to A664	43,000	48,000	50,000	60,000
A664 to A576	57,000	64,000	67,000	81,000
A576 to M62	70,000	77,000	83,000	100,000

Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sites other than existing airports his Department has in the south-east for airport development. [18452]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport does not itself hold any sites for airport development in the south-east, or elsewhere in the country.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the development of (a) the Lydd and (b) the Manston sites as additional airport capacity in the south-east. [18446]

Mr. Norris: Following identification by the Civil Aviation Authority as potential sites for development in air traffic control terms, Lydd and Manston were two of the sites considered by the working group on runway capacity to serve the south-east. RUCATSE concluded that neither Lydd nor Manston would be suitable as sites for providing additional runaway capacity to serve the south-east and should not be subject to detailed assessment.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional work his Department has undertaken in relation to potential development of Heathrow and Gatwick airports following the publication of the RUCATSE report. [18453]

Mr. Norris: The Government's response to the RUCATSE report, announced on 2 February 1995, said that the Secretary of State was asking the CAA, in conjunction with the British Airports Authority and others, to carry out further work to examine the gains that might be achieved and the environmental impact involved in making better use of existing runway infrastructure at Heathrow. He also invited BAA to investigate the possibility of less environmentally damaging options for runway development, such as a close parallel runway at Gatwick. In addition, I chair the steering group for the London airports surface access study, which is examining the opportunities for improvements in access to and between London's main airports by rail and through traffic management measures.

Ferry Inspections (Dover)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the names of ferries inspected in the port of Dover in the last 12 months, indicating the defects found aboard each vessel. [18675]

Mr. Norris: In my answer to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 27 April 1995, Official Report, columns 614-15, I stated the Government's belief that there is no benefit to the travelling public to be gained from the release of the results of routine inspections. The technical content of the report would not be easily comprehensible and could be open to misinterpretation.

In cases where an inspection of a foreign-registered roll-on roll-off ferry reveals serious deficiencies which lead to its detention, the details would be included in the list of ships detained in the UK ports, which is published monthly by the Marine Safety Agency.

Airport Security

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each major UK airport for each of the last five years the number of security inspections undertaken by his Department. [18677]

Mr. Norris: The six major airports in the UK were subject to the following number of security inspections in each of the last four years:

Airport	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	Total
Heathrow	89	124	136	115	464
Gatwick	46	80	83	105	314
Manchester	18	31	24	32	105
Glasgow	14	27	35	25	101
Birmingham	18	11	16	22	67
Stanstead	12	22	18	14	66
Total	197	295	312	313	1,117

The information is not available for 1991–92.

Inspectors visited these airports on many other occasions, mainly to audit and test their operations and to inspect, audit and test the operations of the airlines using them.

Salvage Agreements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances and under what powers (a) his Department and (b) port authorities may override a salvage agreement. [18602]

Mr. Norris: Under section 137 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, the Secretary of State may give directions to the owner, master or any salvor in possession of a ship requiring any of them to take, or refrain from taking, any action for the purpose of preventing or reducing oil pollution. The power may be exercised where an accident has occurred to or on a ship, and in the opinion of the Secretary of State, oil from the ship will or may cause pollution on a large scale in the United Kingdom or in United Kingdom waters, and in his opinion the use of the powers is urgently needed.

Under the Dangerous Vessels Act 1985, a harbour master may give directions prohibiting the entry into, or requiring the removal from, the harbour of any vessel if in his opinion the condition of that vessel, or the nature and condition of anything it contains, is such that its presence in the harbour might involve a grave and imminent danger to the safety of any person or property or that it might seriously prejudice the use of the harbour by other vessels. Directions may be given to the owner, master or any salvor in possession. Under section 3 of the Act the Secretary of State may give directions on those lines to the harbour master, in effect overriding any directions the harbour master has given. The Dangerous Vessels Act does not affect the exercise by the Secretary of State of his powers under section 137 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995.

Harbour authorities generally also have statutory powers to remove a vessel which is sunk, stranded or abandoned, so as to avoid interference with navigation. Some authorities may also have powers to direct a master or other persons having control of a vessel with the object of preventing or reducing pollution.

Air Accident, Dominican Republic

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what dates the aircraft involved in the accident off the Dominican Republic on 7 February flew into the United Kingdom. [18672]

Mr. Norris: At the time of the crash the Boeing 757 aircraft involved was being operated by the Dominican airline Alas Nacionales on lease from the Turkish carrier Birgenair. Neither airline has operated services to the United Kingdom.

Between May 1992 and April 1993 the aircraft was one of eight of its type operated by the Canadian carrier Nationair. During that period Nationair operated many charter services to the United Kingdom. Our records do not show whether or not this aircraft was used on any given flight.

Agency Chief Executives

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the annual salary for the chief executive of each of his Departments' agencies for each year of their operation. [18671]

Mr. Norris: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 4 July 1995, Official Report, columns 119–21.

The following changes have taken place subsequently to some of the chief executives salaries:

Vehicle Inspectorate Executive Agency

1 August 1995: £55,802

Vehicle Certification Agency

1 August 1995: £48,193

Driving Standards Agency

1 August 1995: £59,044

The Coastguard Agency

1 August 1995: £52,230

Marine Safety Agency

1 August 1995: £47,427

Airport, Redhill

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the possibility of the creation of a feeder or reliever airport at Redhill. [18673]

Mr. Norris: None. On 5 April 1995, the Secretary of State for the Environment refused planning permission for an application for development of Redhill as a feeder-reliever to Gatwick.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much (a) has been and (b) remains to be paid to the unsuccessful consortia which bid for the channel tunnel rail link contract. [19096]

Mr. Watts: The Government announced in March 1994 that they would be prepared to contribute to the costs of unsuccessful bidders in the channel tunnel rail link competition. That contribution would be £1.5 million or 33 per cent. of costs properly incurred in the preparation of bids submitted in March 1995, whichever was the less. Claims have been settled from the two consortia which were not shortlisted—Union Link and Green Arrow. The Government also indicated in 1994 that an additional contribution might be available in respect of costs incurred after tenders had been submitted. An offer of £1 million or 33 per cent. of costs, whichever was the lower, was subsequently made in respect of the period after shortlisting in July 1995. A claim has not yet been received from Eurorail CTRL Ltd. The decision to reimburse a portion of the bidders' costs reflected their large investment in preparing bids and the benefits derived by maintaining competitive pressure throughout the process. The amounts involved are small in the context of the size of the CTRL project.

Aircraft (Iceballs)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of iceballs from aircraft hitting houses occurred in the last five years; and how many injuries were caused by such incidents. [19085]

Mr. Norris: There have been 51 incidents of icefall from aircraft hitting houses over the last five years. One incident resulted in bruising when ice hit a roof showering the injured party with debris.

Late Trains

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much compensation has been paid by operating companies of the former British Rail to passengers in respect of late running trains. [19245]

Mr. Watts: Under British Rail's passengers charter, compensation is paid in respect of late running and cancelled trains. Between April 1994 and February 1996, British Rail's train operating companies have paid £7.9 million to passengers in the form of season ticket discounts and ex-gratia compensation.

Highways Agency Information Line

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many calls have been made to the Highways Agency information line in each month since September 1995 on the subject of (a) cones and (b) other matters; and what was the average cost to the agency for each call in each category. [19275]

Mr. Watts: The number of calls that have been received in the Highways Agency information line since September 1995 are as follows. The Highways Agency's records distinguish between (a) complaints covering a range of issues on roadworks and (b) general inquiries about roadworks.

	Complaints	Inquiries	Totals
October	485	650	1,135
November	331	746	1,077
December	158	356	514
January	166	65	231
February	105	406	511
	1,245	2,223	3,468

The Highways Agency does not keep a separate record of costs by category. The average cost to the agency for each call is about £2.50.

Trans-European Network

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now support the designation of the Penzance-Bristol mainline railway as a high-speed trans-European network route at the Council of Ministers. [18624]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The Department has relied on advice from British Rail and Railtrack on the categorisation of TENs rail routes in the UK. The TENs maps are not a wish list; they must reflect current realities or investment priorities. The Bristol-Penzance line does not meet the criteria for designation as high-speed and Railtrack has no current plans to upgrade it. It is therefore rightly categorised as a conventional rail link. The feasibility studies for which we are now seeking TENs funding will examine the options for improving journey times on both the Penzance-Bristol and Reading-Taunton routes and form a basis for investment decisions in the future. This is a positive step towards securing the improved rail infrastructure that the west country is seeking.

Marine Accidents

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he first received a copy of the marine accident investigation branch report into the grounding of the Borga; and what action he has taken to date to implement its recommendations; [18893]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 28 February, Official Report, column 583, if he will place in the Library a copy of the marine accident investigation branch report into the grounding the Borga; [18902]

(3) what amendments he has made to the report of the marine accident investigation branch on the grounding of the Borga originally delivered to him. [18894]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The report of the Marine Accident Investigation Branch into the grounding of the Borga has not yet been sent to Ministers. A copy of the report will be placed in the Library when it is published. The content of the report is entirely a matter for the MAIB, which is independent of Ministers; Ministers have no part in the drafting of the report.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on which dates a heavy duty salvage tug was (a) present and (b) absent from the vicinity of Milford Haven during the last three months; and if he will make a statement. [17985]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 5 March 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about tugs.

A heavy duty salvage tug was in the vicinity of Milford Haven on the following dates:

14–15 December 1995

25 December 1995

24 January 1996

16–29 February 1996

ENVIRONMENT

Cement Kilns

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to require that the maximum permissible concentration of heavy metals in secondary liquid fuel burnt in cement kilns shall be no more than the maximum permitted concentration in coal burnt in cement kilns. [18867]

Mr. Clappison: There are no limits set for heavy metals in coal. Limits on the heavy metals in the secondary liquid fuels are set on the basis of trial results and the requirement to meet emission limits.

Secondary Liquid Fuels

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which waste regulation authorities in England have classified secondary liquid fuel as waste; what plans the Environment Agency has to apply the duty of care provisions of part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to secondary liquid fuels (a) in the area covered by each such authority and (b) in other areas of England. [18873]

Mr. Clappison: Whether or not a substance is waste must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts. The Department has provided guidance on the interpretation of the definition of waste in DOE circular 11/94. No central record is held of waste regulation authorities' view on the definition of waste in relation to particular substances.

The duty of care is an essentially self-regulatory system and the Environment Agency will not have a specific duty to enforce it. The effect of regulation 4 of the Environmental Protection (Duty of Care) Regulations 1991 will be to require a person on whom the Environment Agency serves a notice to provide a copy of the written description of the waste and the transfer note which those involved in the transfer of waste are required by regulation 3 to keep.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the cases where Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has used its powers under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to revoke an authorisation granted under part I of that Act or under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974, together with the reasons for each such revocation. [18865]

Mr. Clappison: A total of 96 cases have been revoked. However, of these 93 have been at the instigation of the operator. The three cases revoked at Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's instigation are listed as follows:

Company	Date issued	Reason for revocation
A W Stokes and Sons (Drums) Ltd., West Bromwich	28 November 1994	Failed to effect improvement conditions in authorisation
Beacon Waste (Hanley Swan Incinerator), Hanley Castle, Worcester	10 February 1995	Failed to meet authorisation conditions. Company appealed successfully against revocation
Birds Commercial Metals Ltd., Stratford upon Avon, Warwickshire	1 March 1996	Plant not built, therefore never operated

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Greater Manchester Waste Regulation and Disposal Authority in regard to membership of his regional enviornment protection advisory committee; what reply he is sending; what action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement. [18947]

Mr. Clappison: The Greater Manchester Waste Regulation and Disposal Authority has nominated a councillor for membership of the Environment Agency's north-west regional environment protection advisory committee. The Secretary of State will shorly be taking a decision on the membership schemes proposed for the REPACs by the agency, but decisions on individual members are a matter for the agency itself.

Air Quality

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities chosen to implement phase one of the air quality duties under part IV of the Environment Act 1995. [19202]

Mr. Clappison: The 14 areas chosen for first phase implementation comprise the following authorities:

The London boroughs and the City Corporation

Cambridge county council, Cambridge city and South Cambridgeshire district councils

Hampshire county council, city councils of Portsmouth, Southampton and Winchester; borough councils of Basingstoke and Deane, Eastleigh, Fareham, Gosport, Havant, Rushmoor and Test Valley; district councils of East Hampshire, Hart, New Forest and the Isle of Wight unitary authority

Cornwall county council, district councils of Caradon, Carrick, Kerrier, North Cornwall and Penwith and Restormel borough council

Bristol city council, Bath and North East Somerset unitary authority—currently Bath city council and Wansdyke district council—South Gloucestershire unitary authority—currently Northavon district council and Kingswood borough council; North West Somerset unitary authority—currently Woodspring district council

City councils of Birmingham and Coventry; metropolitan borough councils of Dudley, Sandwell, Solihull, Walsall and Wolverhampton

District councils of Bolsover, Derbyshire Dales and North East Derbyshire; borough councils of Chesterfield and High Peak

Ribble Valley borough council

Liverpool city council and the metropolitan borough councils of Knowsley, Sefton, St. Helens and Wirral

Metropolitan borough councils of Barnsley, Doncaster and Rotherham

Newcastle upon Tyne city council and the metropolitan borough councils of Gateshead, North Tyneside, South Tyneside and Sunderland

Glasgow city council

Aberdeen city council

Swansea and Neath and Port Talbot unitary authorities

Sustainable Development

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the outcome of the UK round table meeting on sustainable development on 22 February; and if he will make a statement. [19808]

Mr. Gummer: The UK round table met on 22 February, having published in January three initial reports—on freight transport, the domestic energy market, 1998 and beyond, and environmental management and audit. At the 22 February meeting, the round table agreed its first year annual report, which will be published shortly and to which the Government will respond formally. The meeting also discussed the Sea Empress oil spill, progress in the OECD ministerial environment committee and issues arising from the Newbury bypass.

Emergency Night Shelters

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of (a) the current number of people in emergency night shelters in London, (b) the impact on that number of the implementation of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations and (c) the current number of unoccupied places in the shelters. [19114]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Information is not held centrally about the numbers of people and of unoccupied places in emergency night shelters in London. The impact on the number of people using night shelters of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 will depend on future inflows of people from abroad, the number of those people who choose to seek asylum, when they choose to do so, the lengths of time they choose to stay in this country, and the accommodation options open to them.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what performance targets have been set for the Ordnance Survey executive agency in the year 1996–97. [19341]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following performance targets have been set for Ordnance Survey in 1996–97:

1. To recover at least 83 per cent. of the costs incurred by the agency.
2. To ensure that by 31 March 1997, 96 per cent. of existing major details is surveyed and available to customers in the national topographic database at any one time. The target will increase to 99 per cent. by the year 2000.
3. In order to provide a quality service to customers, to despatch products in response to orders as follows:

   95 per cent. of all Land-Line digital map units within six working days;

   90 per cent. of small-scale maps within five working days.

To increase by 5 per cent. the annual revenue earned per member of staff employed.

These targets, some of which are being incrementally increased, are closely associated with the key corporate aims of Ordnance Survey and demonstrate the agency's continuing commitment to customers and to improved value for money for all its stakeholders.

PRIME MINISTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the content of all briefings given by his press office on the subject of the Scott report since 15 February. [19283]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

This would be neither customary nor practicable.

Hong Kong (Visit)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out his programme during his recent visit to Hong Kong. [19214]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

It is not my right hon. Friend's normal practice to do so.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister if all his engagements during his recent visit to Hong Kong related to public duty. [19215]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

Yes.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Prime Minister (1) on how many occasions car based and mobile phones allocated to the use of his office have been cloned; to which officers these phones had been allocated; and when this cloning was discovered, in each of the last five years; [18949]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 45, to which officer in his personal office the phone cloned in 1994 was allocated; when it became apparent that this phone had been cloned; and what action has been taken by his office to improve the security of the mobile phone in the use of his office; [18950]

(3) on how many occasions mobile phones allocated for the use of (a) himself and (b) his office have been cloned since his appointment. [18951]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend on 22 January, Official Report, column 45. I have nothing further to add.

Arms Exports

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister which Departments hold information relative to the financing by British banks, since 1980, using their customers' balances, of arms supplied to Iraq and Iran; which British banks were involved; what proportion of such financing went on the supply of Valmara 69 anti-personnel land mines; and if he will make a statement. [17934]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 29 February 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

Exports of lethal equipment including anti-personnel land mines from the United Kingdom to Iraq or Iran would require an export licence. No such licences have been issued since 1980. The financing by British banks of arms sales from other countries to Iraq and Iran would be a matter for Government Departments only if breaches of United Nations' sanctions were involved. Government Departments hold no evidence of such breaches by British banks. If the right hon. Member has any information regarding possible breaches of United Kingdom export controls or United Nations' sanctions, he should pass it to the relevant authorities.

Public Appointments (Women)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Prime Minister how many appointees to public offices in the list of public appointments were women for each year since 1990; and what proportion these represented of the total for each office. [18249]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

Information about the annual number of women appointed to public office is not maintained centrally. However, it is known that in 1990 and 1991, women held 23 per cent. of the total number of appointments to public bodies. In October 1991, at the launch of Opportunity 2000, my right hon. Friend announced a Government initiative aimed at increasing this figure further. Good progress has been made and the percentage of such posts held by women, at 1 September 1995, is 30 per cent. The following table gives the figures for the intervening years:

	Total number of public appointments	Held by women
		Number	Per cent.
1990	44,057	10,256	23
1991	39,122	9,135	23
1992	41,011	10,701	26
1993	42,606	12,007	28
1994	42,876	12,686	30
1995	40,170	11,898	30

European Courts

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages to the United Kingdom of membership of (a) the European Court of Justice and (b) the European Court of Human Rights; and by what mechanism the United Kingdom can withdraw from membership of each. [17766]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

Accepting jurisdiction of the European Court of Justice is an essential element of European Union membership, the advantages and disadvantages of which have been discussed many times in this House. The UK could withdraw from the jurisdiction of the ECJ only by withdrawing from the EU.

Our policy in respect of the European convention on human rights was set out by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 13 December 1995, Official Report, column 647.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Stott: To ask the Prime Minister if his negotiations with the constitutional parties in Northern Ireland to determine the electoral process will include the Progressive Unionist party and the Ulster Democratic party. [18943]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 5 March 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

Letters of invitation to the round of intensive consultations with the parties were sent on 28 February and the leaders of the Progressive Unionist party and the Ulster Democratic party were among the recipients.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Employment (Irish Nationals)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of persons resident in the Irish Republic who work in Northern Ireland, broken down by gender; how many of each sex are employed in each sector of the economy; and how many are employed in each council area. [18224]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not available.

Watercourse Management

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for the future organisation of the watercourse management division of the Department of Agriculture. [19739]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Having recently completed the prior options study which was announced to Parliament on 20 July 1994, Official Report, columns 341–42, the Government have decided that the watercourse management division should become a next steps agency from 1 October 1996.

The division is responsible for the provision of flood defence and river drainage systems and for promoting the sustainable development of inland navigation and water recreation facilities.

Making the watercourse management division a next steps agency will give it the flexibility to operate within a framework of appropriate efficiency targets and performance indicators, while remaining a part of the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland.

Inward Investment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many inward investment projects have settled in Northern Ireland as a result of guidance given by the Invest in Britain Bureau over the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [17732]

Mr. Ancram: I am not aware of any inward investment projects having settled in Northern Ireland over the past three years as a result of guidance given by the Invest in Britain Bureau.

School Teachers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will request the Irish Republic's Minister for Education to extend to secondary school teachers her concession on Northern Ireland trained primary school teachers without an Irish language qualification; and if he will seek legal advice on whether the Scrudu Cailiochta sa Ghaeilge requirement breaches European employment law. [18521]

Mr. Ancram: These are matters for the Irish Government.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what legal advice he has taken on the compliance of a decision to end the exemption in the Fair Employment Act permitted for the appointment of school teachers with article 2 of the first protocol to the European convention on human rights. [18522]

Mr. Ancram: No legal advice has been taken regarding this issue.

Census Questions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make representations to the Home Secretary to include a question about Ulster origin in the pilot census on a question on Irish origin. [18523]

Sir John Wheeler: As part of the Great Britain small-scale census question testing programme, it has been decided to test various changes to the ethnic origin question, including incorporating a separate Irish category. To date, no case has been made by users to classify people from Ulster separately and therefore this is currently not being considered.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration is being given to (a) including an ethnic origin question and (b) re-wording the religious affiliation question in the Northern Ireland census; and if he will make a statement. [18524]

Sir John Wheeler: It is planned that an ethnic origin questions will be tested in the 1997 census in Northern Ireland. The wording of all census questions, including a religious affiliation question, will be subject to review before final decisions are made. The finalised census question will be laid before Parliament by way of a Northern Ireland Order in Council, before the census.

Orders in Council (Debate)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those Orders in Council requiring an affirmative resolution of the House that have been debated in a Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation to date; from what date the current procedures in respect of (a) Orders in Council and (b) consideration in Standing Committees commenced; and which orders he intends to be debated in a Standing Committee in the current Session of Parliament. [18525]

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Act 1974 enables the Government to legislate for Northern Ireland by way of Order in Council. In December 1994, the House agreed that all affirmative statutory instruments would be referred automatically to a Standing Committee, but could be de-referred on a Government motion, with the Government acceding to any reasonable Opposition request for de-referral. This was initially on an experimental basis but was incorporated into Standing Orders at the start of the current Session.

Since then, the following Northern Ireland Orders in Council have been debated in Standing Committee—prior information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost;

Rathgael Centre

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents of the Rathgael centre in Bangor left without permission in each month of 1995; and how many were (a) charged and (b) cautioned with offences committed while out of bounds. [18526]

Sir John Wheeler: Rathgael is an "open" training school and the information requested about those absent without leave is as follows:

1995	Care[1]	Offenders	Total
January	19	16	35
February	20	16	36
March	29	22	51
April	24	12	36
May	19	15	34
June	29	16	45
July	25	24	49
August	25	15	40
September	12	14	26
October	23	21	44
November	23	19	42
December	19	24	43

[1] Residents requiring care, protection or control are accommodated separately from those given a training school order following a finding of guilt of a criminal offence.

A total of 70 children who absconded from Rathgael in 1995 were charged with offences. Of these, 15 were there for care reasons and 55 for offending.

A total of nine children who absconded from Rathgael in 1995 received a caution. Of these, eight were there for care reasons and one for offending.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Access to Work

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of those who applied for access to work before 18 December, but have not yet had their applications processed, will have their applications considered under the criteria used when they applied. [11485]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how people who applied for Access to Work before 18 December will have their applications considered.

The Secretary of State's announcement said that we would meet existing commitments. Thus everyone who made an application for Access to Work before 18 December will have had their applications considered under the criteria used when they applied.

I hope this is helpful.

EDS Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those contracts her Department currently holds with EDS, indicating for each the (a) date of inception, (b) value and (c) duration. [17447]

Mr. Robin Squire: I have been unable to identify any contracts between the Department and the company EDS.

Further Education (Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what change there has been in enrolments on further education courses in the Greater Manchester area from 1987 to 1995. [18260]

Mr. Paice: Enrolments on full-time further education courses in Greater Manchester rose from 29,700 in 1986–87 to 44,100 in 1994–95, an increase of 48 per cent. Part-time enrolments fell by 22 per cent., from 104,100 to 81,100. The number of full-time equivalent students rose by 20 per cent. from 49,000 to 58,500.

Nursery Education Provision

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the level of provision per pupil under the Government's proposed nursery scheme for (a) year 1, (b) year 2 and (c) year 3, for those pupils (i) aged three-and-a-half-years, (ii) in reception class and (iii) aged four years; and how this figure compares with the current provision. [18799]

Mr. Robin Squire: Local education authority budgets will be reduced only by the voucher value for every four-year-old in maintained provision. They will receive £1,100 for every full voucher redeemed at a local authority-maintained school. If LEA-maintained schools recruit the same number of four-year-olds as now, then their budgets will be unaffected. Moreover, if they currently spend above the voucher value on places for four-year-olds, or on provision for three-year-olds, the funding mechanism ensures that they retain the funds to continue doing so. They will, therefore, continue to be able to fund pre-school places at existing levels.

The expansion of provision will be largely driven by parental choice and is expected to become universal for four-year-olds within a reasonable time.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many local education authorities will suffer financial penalties under the provision of the nursery voucher scheme. [18797]

Mr. Robin Squire: No local education authority will lose any funding if it continues to recruit the same number of four-year-olds as it does now. Moreover, the voucher scheme will leave LEAs with funds to make grants to the voluntary sector, and for other related purposes.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from the Manchester Diocesan Board for Education in regard to her proposals for nursery vouchers; what reply she is making; and if she will make a statement. [17212]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received one letter from the Manchester diocesan board of education, dated 21 February, about the nursery voucher scheme. My right hon. Friend will shortly send a full reply.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and employment if the calculation of the number of weekly guided learning hours using the criteria set out in the Further Education Funding Council's document "How to Apply for Funding 1996–97," para 164 by a claimant of jobseeker's allowance will be accepted by the Employment Service; and if she will make a statement. [19044]

Mr. Forth: Yes, it will.

Access to Work

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects the review of access to work to be completed; and if she will make a statement. [19146]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the review of Access to Work.

Further to my earlier reply to you on this subject printed in Hansard, 24 January, column 285, the review of Access to Work is nearly complete, following discussions with organisations principally concerned about the programme's operation.

I hope this is helpful.

Equal Opportunities

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on her Department's implementation of the European Union's third medium-term equal opportunities programme for men and women. [17269]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government supported the third Community action programme on equal opportunities for men and women, which ran from 1991 to 1995. The programme had three broad objectives: the implementation and development of legislation; integration of women in the labour market; and improving the status of women in society. The Government have taken a wide range of actions in all these areas.

Grant-maintained Schools (Funding)

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made about the projected savings to the Funding Agency for Schools in respect of the introduction of private sector funding for grant-maintained schools' capital expenditure. [18836]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The contribution of private sector funding to capital expenditure on grant-maintained schools will depend upon the decisions of individual school governors and the private sector. We have made it clear that capital grant from the Funding Agency for Schools will continue to ensure that essential work is funded at GM schools.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cable and Wireless

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what use the Government have made of their golden share in Cable and Wireless in respect of the appointment of foreign nationals. [17154]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government accepted a request in December from Cable and Wireless to change article 119 of that company's articles of association to facilitate the appointment of a new chief executive. Article 119 relates to the managing and executive directors—paragraph B specifically to the nationality of senior executives—and the Government's agreement as special shareholder is required to amendments to this article. I announced the Government's agreement in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink), on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 862.

Argentina (Arms Sales)

Mr. Cann: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new guidelines were placed on arms sales to Argentina between May 1979 and March 1982; and when and what were the nature of the guidelines. [18091]

Mr. Lang: There were no special guidelines on arms sales to Argentina in the period specified. Export licence applications for the sale of defence equipment to Argentina were circulated to the MOD and the FCO, and were considered on the basis of consistency with our strategic, security and foreign policy interests.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) arms and (b) arms-related contracts with the Argentine Government were approved by Her Majesty's Government between the years 1979 and 1982. [19352]

Mr. Lang: No substantial contracts for defence equipment were signed and completed after 1978. Some contracts signed before 1979 were fulfilled in 1979–81, and some contracts or spares for existing UK equipment were fulfilled.

Jordan (Exports)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will now provide information on compliance by Jordan with end user certificates covering goods exported between 1985 to 1993, referred to in his answer of 5 May 1993, Official Report, column 106. [18540]

Mr. Lang: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend on 5 May 1993, Official Report, column 106.

Telecommunications (Key Escrow)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to introduce a key escrow into Britain's telecommunications industry. [18482]

Mr. Ian Taylor: While there are no specific plans to introduce key-escrow services into our telecommunications system, discussions are taking place between Government Departments on the provision of encryption services on these networks. Such discussions will seek to balance the legitimate commercial needs of the business community, for secure and confidential communications, with those of the law enforcement authorities. Key retrieval services therefore, via a network of trusted third parties, are one of the issues being considered.

Medical Research Council

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what degree of independence the Medical Research Council has in determining the subjects of its research projects. [19173]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The responsibilities and powers of the Medical Research Council are as defined in the Science and Technology Act 1965 and its supplemental royal charter, dated 16 December 1993.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the statutory role of his Department or agencies of his Department in deciding the subjects of research projects conducted by the Medical Research Council. [19174]

Mr. Taylor: My statutory role in relation to the Medical Research Council is as set out in the Science and Technology Act 1965, as amended by the Transfer of Functions (Science) Order 1992 and the Transfer of Functions (Science) Order 1995.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received alleging erosion of independence of the Medical Research Council by his Department or agencies of his Department. [19175]

Mr. Taylor: None.

Launch Aid

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been awarded in launch aid in each year since 1990; and how much has been repaid in each year. [19093]

Mr. Eggar: Following is a table showing the amount of launch aid awarded and repaid since 1990.

£ million

Financial year	payments	Receipts
1990–91	141.1	51.8
1991–92	78.7	83.0
1992–93	31.4	74.7
1993–94	0.6	56.9
1994–95	2.0	47.0

Launch aid financial information is collated within the Department in financial rather than calendar years.

Rolls-Royce (Tupolev Aircraft)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance he has given to Rolls-Royce to secure contracts for the supply of Rolls-Royce engines for Tupolev aircraft. [19095]

Mr. Eggar: The Export Credits Guarantee Department has invited the Russian Ministry of Finance to nominate Rolls-Royce RB211 aeroengines for the Tupolev 204 as a priority for ECGD cover if it wishes to do so. However, the order or priorities is for the Russian authorities to decide.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Government published their strategy for the aerospace industry. [19092]

Mr. Eggar: The Government work with the Society of British Aerospace Companies, which published its national aerospace framework in January. The SBAC and DTI set out the areas on which they are working together in a joint statement, which I announced on 29 November 1995.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions he has had about the future of British Coal Enterprise; and if he will make a statement. [18946]

Mr. Page: My ministerial colleagues and I have discussions about British Coal Enterprise as necessary. Officials in my Department remain in close touch with British Coal about the future of BCE.

Nigeria (Arms Sales)

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the types of export licences granted for the sales of arms products to Nigeria since November 1993. [17281]

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Science and Technology on 10 May 1995, Official Report, columns 517–18 and the answer my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry gave to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 27 February 1996, Official Report, column 459. On 11 November 1995, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced a full UK arms embargo against Nigeria and, subsequently, on 20 November the European Union introduced a full scope arms embargo against the country.

My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will write to the hon. Member when the statistical analysis of export licences granted for military, para-military and security equipment during 1995 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Arms Manufacturers

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the number of companies who are manufacturing arms under licence in the United Kingdom for a foreign parent company. [17282]

Mr. Lang: No such estimate has been made.

Radio and Television Interference

Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes will occur in respect of the Radiocommunications Agency's charge for investigating interference to domestic television and radio reception. [19809]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The agency's charge to visit householders to diagnose their reception arrangements will be increased from £35 to £40 with effect from 1 April 1996. This will bring it more into line with the private sector's charges for this type of work. The agency will continue to check specific sources of interference to television and radio reception free of charges as part of its regulatory duties.

Fire Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when he will publish the Government's response to the recommendations of the interdepartmental review of fire safety legislation and enforcement in the United Kingdom, which reported to Ministers in June 1994; [18966]

(2) what plans he has to transfer the functions of the Fire Service in respect of general fire safety legislation and enforcement, to (a) local authority bodies, (b) private inspectors and (c) the Health and Safety Executive; and if he will make a statement. [18967]

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have been considering the findings of the review and the views expressed by interested parties, including the deregulation task force. We have also been further considering the fire safety aspects of the EC framework and workplace directives. An announcement on both will be made soon.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what has been the cost of the installation of telephones; and how many were installed for the use of hon. Members' staff at (a) Stirling, (b) Inverness, (c) Aberdeen and (d) Kilmarnock in respect of meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee. [17119]

Mr. Beith: Telephones are installed for Members' use at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee when there are insufficient existing lines. These telephones may also be used by Members' staff. Additional telephone lines have been installed as follows:

Stirling: six

Inverness: nil

Aberdeen: three

Kilmarnock: six (ordered for 4 March)

The cost for the installation at Stirling was £919.60. Costs for the other locations are not yet available.

DEFENCE

Departmental Inquiries

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) internal and (b) MOD police inquiries have been carried out within his Department since 1993. [17806]

Mr. Soames: Information on the number of internal inquiries carried out within my Department since 1993 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Details of the numbers of MOD police inquiries are contained in the Chief Constables's annual report for 1993–94 and 1994–95, which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Deterrent

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual cost of maintaining the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrent. [18088]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The running costs of the Polaris boats in 1994–95 was £65 million. The average annual operating cost of Trident over its life is expected to be about £200 million.

Military Equipment Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes he has made to his policy relating to the release of information concerning the export of military equipment to Iraq in the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [18534]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is contained in the background note, "Ministerial Accountability and the Release of Information on Defence Related Exports", which was placed in the Library of the House on 26 February 1996.

Sea Water (Charted Depths)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to revise chart datum; on how many occasions since 1 January the charted depth has been lower than the lowest astronomical tide; and by how much charted low water depths were below chart datum during the storms and spring tides of early 1996. [18608]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Hydrographic Office. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Clarke to Mr. Barry Field, dated 6 March 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question (0528H) to the Secretary of State for Defence about chart datum as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office Defence Agency.

There are no plans to revise chart datum in UK waters. Chart Datum (CD) is defined as a level so low that the tide will not frequently fall below it. In the United Kingdom this level is taken as approximately the level of Lowest Astronomical Tide (LAT). LAT is defined as the lowest level which can be predicted to occur under average meteorological conditions and any combination of astronomical conditions.

The UK Hydrographic Office (UKHO) maintains and monitors records for three permanently established tide gauges, at Plymouth (Devonport), Portsmouth and Rosyth. These records show that at all three ports the water level has fallen below CD/LAT on one occasion since 1 January 1996. In each case this occurred on 20 February 1996 when at Plymouth the recorded level was 0.18 metres below CD, at Portsmouth 0.10 meters below CD and at Rosyth 0.13 metres below CD. Tidal records for other ports are not held by the UKHO on a permanent basis.

I hope this response is of assistance.

Air Vice-Marshall Howard

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 1996, Official Report, column 318, what (a) reprimand or (b) penalty was issued to Air Vice-Marshall Howard for his failure to seek permission for a business appointment. [19046]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None. Air Vice-Marshal Howard retired in October 1988 and the Department did not become aware of his consultancy with Tripod Engineering Ltd. until May 1993.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Ex-service Personnel (Pension Appeal Tribunals)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many ex-service people with attributable hearing loss were on waiting lists for hearings by the pension appeal tribunals at the latest date for which figures are available and at the same date in each of the preceeding 10 years; what action he is taking to reduce the average waiting time; and if he will make a statement. [18955]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Specific information about hearing loss cases is not available as the pensions appeal tribunals do not record appeals by the type of disability or injury which is subject to appeal.

In order to reduce waiting times in all cases, extra staff and judicial officers have been appointed which has enabled an increase in tribunal sittings and cases heard. A scheme has been introduced to give priority to appellants aged over 68 and those who are terminally ill. Administrative changes are being made to enable more hearings in the absence of the appellant and more flexible listing procedures are planned which will allow appeals to be heard at short notice.

TREASURY

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations underlay the choice of extracts from the Scott report cited at the top half of the second page of the press release 26/96 issued by his Department on 15 February. [18553]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: They demonstrated that the allegations of deliberately misleading Parliament levelled against my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary before publication of the Scott report were not endorsed by Sir Richard Scott.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the memorandum submitted by his Department in appendix A in volume V of the Scott report, for what reasons he included guns in the first heading on the third page of his departmental press release 26/96 issued on 15 February. [18587]

Mr. Clarke: The items included in parentheses were chosen as good examples in general of lethal equipment.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make changes in the personnel of his Department following criticisms contained in the report of the Scott inquiry. [16570]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 22 February 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 February 1996, Official Report, column 239.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he had with the Secretary to the Cabinet concerning the Government's response to the Scott inquiry; and where and when such consultations took place. [16608]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 22 February 1996]: Successive Governments have not disclosed the nature or the specific sources of the advice that they receive from the civil service.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the members of his Department who saw the report of the Scott inquiry before it was presented to the House; and when each saw the report. [16536]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 22 February 1996]: A small number of civil servants in my Departments had access to the report prior to publication for the purpose of preparing the Government's response. Such access was in accordance with the conditions laid down by the Scott inquiry.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer. what assessment he has made of the United Kingdom's capacity (a) to revalue and (b) to devalue sterling in a partial EMU excluding the United Kingdom. [17277]

Mrs. Angela Knight: If the UK exercises its option not to join stage 3 of EMU the Government will continue to decide what exchange rate arrangements for Sterling are in the country's best interests.

In this context, the Prime Minister secured agreement at the Madrid European Council that the ECOFIN Council, together with, in their respective fields of competence, the Commission and the European Monetary Institute, study the range of issues raised by the possibility that some countries may not initially participate in the Euro area, including issues related to monetary stability and exchange rate relations.

National Savings

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his plans for the Department for National Savings. [19740]

Mrs. Angela Knight: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has decided that the Department for National Savings should be launched as an executive agency of the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 1 July 1996.

As a next steps executive agency, National Savings will continue to provide a source of funds for Government and a safe home for savings. The agency will have more freedom to manage its affairs and clearer responsibilities within a framework of objectives, annual performance targets and resources agreed with Ministers. It will be set clear targets to continue to improve value for money for the taxpayer and the level of service to customers.

Barlow Clowes

Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans his Department has to ensure that former small investors of the investment company run by Barlow Clowes are fully compensated for losses caused by fraudulent activity; [18324]

(2) for what reasons the compensation package offered to former small investors of the investment company run by Barlow Clowes was limited to 90 per cent. of losses. [18380]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 5 March 1996]: On 19 December 1989, the Government announced their decision to offer substantial payments, without admission of fault or liability, to investors who suffered loss as a result of the Barlow Clowes collapse.

In determining the levels of the ex-gratia payments, the Government considered it important to maintain the principle of co-insurance. Investors must be expected to have some responsibility for their own decisions and, therefore, bear some of the loss themselves. The payments made by the Government provided for the early relief of hardship caused to large numbers of investors. It also ensured swifter relief than would have been the case had investors pursued their interests through the courts.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent on 21 February 1996, Official Report, column 157, if he will set out the improvements in the way the Customs and Excise handles major prosecutions arising from alleged breaches of export control regulations to which he refers. [18533]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The improvements referred to are encapsulated in guidelines which were first issued in July 1991 and later revised and reissued in June 1995. These guidelines cover the handling of sensitive cases, including those concerning breaches of export controls. They reinforce established procedures and introduce a system of formal reviews to ensure that the strength of the evidence and the overall progress of the case are monitored. They formalise a system of consultation and monitoring between investigators, case solicitor and the policy administrators at an early stage in an investigation.

The guidelines provide for a "case co-ordinator" who is appointed from the administrators. They also specify that responsibility for the conduct of a case falls to the Customs solicitor's office and that the case solicitor must regularly review the evidence, reporting regularly to the case co-ordinator in writing and making additional reports as circumstances and changes in the case require.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishermen

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will instruct the Director of the Marine Safety Agency (a) to meet the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and (b) to provide officials to assist the national federation's safety and training committee in respect of EEC regulations on health, hygiene, safety and medical stores. [18857]

Mr. Baldry: I met Viscount Goschen, the Department of Transport Minister responsible for the Marine Safety Agency, on 16 February, to discuss a number of issues that fishermen have raised with me. I know that he is aware of the needs of the fishing industry and we agreed to meet again soon. I also understand that the Marine Safety Agency has arranged a meeting with representatives of the fishermen's federations on 26 March to discuss the industry's concerns about a framework for future consultation.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what hectarage is given up to (a) set-aside land and (b) each of the 10 highest land area covering crops; and how many kilometres length of river bank runs along set-aside land in (i) the UK, (ii) each other member state of the EU and (iii) the EU in total. [18621]

Mr. Baldry: The latest figures for the area of land set-aside in the EU as of 15 January 1995 are set out in the table.

The latest complete details of the 10 highest land area covering crops are given in section 3.5.2.2. of "The Agricultural Situation in the EU 1994", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The information about the length of river bank that runs along set-aside land in the other member states and the EU in total is not available. In the UK, this information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Fisheries Closures

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what consultations his Department has had with inshore fishermen north of Bridlington in relation to the closure of the Dover sole fishery for boats under 10 m; [19163]

(2) what action he has taken to ensure that future closure of fisheries will not be taken without consultation with the sector of the fishing industry most directly involved. [19164]

Mr. Baldry: Before the closure of the North sea sole fishery to vessels 10 m and under in length from 1 January to 31 March 1996, the Ministry consulted both the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations which represents inshore fishermen in England including those north of Bridlington, and the Yorkshire and Anglia Fish Producers' Organisation based at Bridlington which also includes inshore fishermen among its members. Ministry officials also met with representatives of the NFFO and fishermen from the north-east on 5 February. At the request of the NFFO, the Ministry has agreed to consult directly with the NFFO's constituent organisations on any future proposals to effect a temporary closure of a fishery. Such consultation will not, however, extend to those fishery closures which are necessary because of the full utilisation of quota allocations.

Dredging (The Wash)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to ensure that dredging activities in the Wash will not affect local inshore fisheries. [19165]

Mr. Baldry: MAFF will not agree to any aggregate dredging licence being issued unless it is satisfied that the interests of the marine environment and commercial fishing activities can be adequately protected. Current dredging operations near the Wash are subject to extensive conditions to minimise the effect of the operation including liaison arrangements and post-dredge surveys.

In addition, an extensive monitoring programme is being undertaken to assess the effects of the dredging.

Departmental Suppliers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that his Department identifies the size of its suppliers by the number of their employees. [15607]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 20 February 1996]: It is planned that the Ministry's resource management system will be able to generate the requisite information within the financial year 1996–97.

Arts Council

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent discussions she has had with the Arts Council regarding change to distribution rules to create a stability fund to enable lottery funds to be spent on staff restructuring and if she will make it her policy to resist such a change. [18225]

Mr. Sproat: The Arts Council has approached me with a proposal for a scheme to be financed from the lottery to provide ways of putting arts organisations on a firmer financial basis without entering into continuing commitments for revenue funding. The Arts Council is currently working up detailed proposals in consultation with my Department and others.

Broadcasting Bill

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the consultants employed to advise her Department upon the technical aspects of the Broadcasting Bill, with particular reference to the operation of multiplexes. [17930]

Mr. Sproat: In March 1995 my Department commissioned the National Economic Research Association to prepare a study of methods of media market measurement. The results of this study informed the preparation of Government policy on cross-media ownership which is reflected in the Broadcasting Bill.

My Department did not commission any work from consultants on digital broadcasting, but relied on the technical advice of the Radiocommunications Agency and the broadcasting authorities.

Royal Armouries (International) plc

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what sums have been made available to Royal Armouries (International) plc to create a museum. [19105]

Mr. Sproat: The new Royal Armouries museum, Leeds is being funded by the public and private sectors. My Department is providing £20 million from its existing resources.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which (i) directors and (ii) senior employees of Royal Armouries (International) plc are (a) former public servants, (b) hon. or former hon. Members and (c) Peers. [19107]

Mr. Sproat: General Sir James Glover, formerly Commander-in-Chief, United kingdom Land Forces, is the chairman of Royal Armouries (International) plc. No other director or senior employee falls into any of the categories listed.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what terms armour and other material will be provided to Royal Armouries (International) plc for exhibitions. [19106]

Mr. Sproat: The Royal Armouries is making available a substantial part of its collection to Royal Armouries (International) plc for exhibition in the new Royal Armouries museum, Leeds. Royal Armouries (International) plc will meet the costs of conserving and displaying the collection. The Royal Armouries will retain ownership of the collection.

Oflot (Hospitality Costs)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much has been spent by Oflot on official hospitality since its setting up. [18239]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 29 February 1996]: This is a matter for the Director General of the National Lottery. I have therefore asked the Director General to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18142]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Officials in this Department who are currently directors of companies must under departmental rules declare their interest to senior managers who must be satisfied that there is no conflict of interest between officials' public duties and private activities. Staff who disclose relevant interests do so on the understanding that the declaration, like all employment matters, is confidential between them and the Department.

Tourism

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what advice she has supplied to the know-how funds on tourism projects; and in respect of which projects. [16327]

Mr. Sproat: My Department has not provided advice on tourism projects supported by the know-how funds.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many tourists visited (a) the north-west of England and (b) Lancashire in 1990 and 1995. [16381]

Mr. Sproat: Visitor figures are not yet available for 1995. The figures for 1990 and 1994 are as follows:

Million

	1990	1994
North-West
Domestic visitor trips	7.5	8.6
Domestic visitor expenditure	£755	£1,090
Overseas visitor trips	0.98	1.12
Overseas visitor expenditure	£228	£395
Lancashire
Domestic visitor trips	3.6	3.7
Domestic visitor expenditure	£450	£552
Overseas visitor trips	0.18	0.18
Overseas visitor expenditure	£43	£51

These figures relate to overnight visitor trips and expenditure. The north-west is defined as the area covered by the north-west tourist board—that is, Cheshire, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what figures he has for each year since 1990, of the number of non-United Kingdom citizens granted (a) leave to enter the United Kingdom and (b) the right of settlement in the United Kingdom, on the basis of a personal relationship outside marriage with a United Kingdom based person of the opposite sex; and what representations he has received alleging that these arrangements have been, or can be, abused for the purposes of illegal immigration. [18502]

Mr. Kirkhope: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on 1 May 1995, Official Report, column 102. The corresponding figure for common-law spouses accepted for settlement in 1995 is provisionally 550. The immigration rules do not provide for a person to seek admission to the United Kingdom on the basis of a common-law relationship.

Investigation of applications for leave to remain on the basis of a heterosexual common-law relationship has uncovered abuse of these arrangements.

Crimes Against Children

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account he has taken of the recent extension of the powers of coroners to investigate deaths occurring outside the United Kingdom in the context of his consideration of legislation relating to crimes against children committed by United Kingdom citizens abroad. [18612]

Mr. Maclean: Coroners have jurisdiction to inquire into deaths abroad only where the deceased has been returned to England or Wales and there is reason to suppose that the statutory grounds for holding an inquest are met. The evidential requirements and the procedures applicable in coroners' courts are, of course, different from those of criminal courts and it is difficult therefore to make any meaningful comparisons between the two systems.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what external legal advice he has received about enacting United Kingdom legislation relating to crimes committed abroad by United Kingdom citizens against children of other countries. [18611]

Mr. Maclean: As part of its consideration of what measures might be taken to tackle the problem of British nationals committing offences against children in other countries, the Government have sought advice and information from a number of sources. In particular, we have contacted the relevant authorities in a number of countries, and received from them details about their law, and its application, in this area.

We have also received advice from non-governmental organisations. The Coalition on Child Prostitution and Tourism, for example, submitted independent legal advice in connection with one aspect of our research, and has also undertaken to provide further information in connection with the inter-departmental review of extra-territorial jurisdiction, which was announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary on 1 February.

Fire Service

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account has been taken of the geographic area in which fire brigades have to operate in calculating the size of management teams. [18657]

Mr. Sackville: Responsibility for the management of fire brigade services in their areas is a matter for individual fire authorities.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the percentage shortfall of finance for the provision of fire service pay increases; and what assessment he has made of its impact upon Cheshire county council. [18732]

Mr. Sackville: The impact of national pay awards on individual fire authorities will vary according to their particular circumstances. Like every other fire authority, Cheshire county council has a responsibility to set its budget having regard to all the relevant circumstances, including the size of the nationally agreed pay awards.

Police and Fire Service Pensions

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up a common inquiry into the funding of police and fire service pensions. [18678]

Mr. Maclean: No. The Government are not convinced that any radical change is needed on the funding arrangements for police and fire service pensions. In determining support for police authority and local government revenue funding, the Government already take into account the increasing amount which currently needs to be spent on pensions for police officers and firefighters.

For 1996–97, an additional £80 million is being made available to police authorities to help fund pension costs. A refinement of the model on which the pensions element of the police funding formula is based will help to ensure that money available for pensions goes where it is most needed.

For the fire service, £14 million has been added to the total in 1996–97 to assist fire authorities in meeting the cost of firefighters' pensions. An additional indicator to reflect pension costs has been built into the distribution formula for the standard spending assessment total.

The details of police and fire pension schemes have both been under review. The results will shortly be the subject of consultation with police and fire interests.

Immigration Consultants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines exist for former members of immigration and nationality departments who leave the service to become immigration consultants. [18574]

Mr. Kirkhope: There are no specific guidelines. All former members of staff remain bound by the provisions of the Official Secrets Acts and by their duty of confidentiality to the Crown. In addition, all staff who leave are reminded of their obligations under the business appointment rules.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received concerning the Asylum and Immigration Bill; and how many have been in favour of the proposals and how many against. [18576]

Miss Widdecombe: In the period 23 November 1995 to 1 March 1996, the asylum division recorded 1,037 representations about the Asylum and Immigration Bill: 800 of these representations have been critical of the Bill and 158 have supported it; the views of the remainder are not recorded. A total of 2,134 names have been submitted on petitions against the Bill. Many of the letters were sent by supporters of a campaign which has been mounted by groups opposed to the Bill and I do not regard them as an accurate barometer of public opinion.

Prisoners' Brains

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons Ronald Kray's brain was not buried with his body; and what consents were obtained. [18908]

Mr. Sackville: I understand that at the time of Ronald Kray's funeral the brain was not buried with the body since it was still subject to an investigation to establish the cause of death. I am informed that the necessary consents were obtained from the coroner for East Berkshire.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Children's Certificates

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 158, for what reasons it has not proved possible to move as quickly as originally hoped in respect of children's certificates. [18760]

Mr. Kirkhope: The main difficulties have been divergent practice in different licensing areas, and the absence of firm data on expected take-up rates.

Prisoners' Wives and Families Society

Mr Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide additional financial assistance to the Prisoners' Wives and Families Society; and if he will make a statement. [18948]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Clive Soley, dated 6 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about plans to provide additional financial assistance to the Prisoners' Wives and Families Society.

Although in recent years the Prison Service has made a small number of ex-gratia payments to selected organisations known to be in crisis over funding, there are currently no funds available for financial assistance to organisations supporting prisoner and family ties.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners, having failed to return from authorised leave, are on the run from Buckley Hall prison; and what are the equivalent average figures for other prisons. [18116]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 February 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 6 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about how many prisoners, having failed to return from authorised leave, are on the run from Buckley Hall prison, and what are the equivalent average figures for other prisons.

The number of prisoners who failed to return from authorised leave from HM Prison Buckley Hall from its date of opening on 14 December 1994 until 26 February 1996 and who are still unlawfully at large is 10.

The equivalent average figure for similar establishments, male category C training prisons, for the same period is 1.06.

West Midlands Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the standard spending assessment for the west midlands fire and civil defence authority for each of the last five years; and if he will express the figures in (a) real terms and (b) as a percentage change on the previous year. [19053]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The information is as follows:

£ million

	Actual	Percentage change	Real terms
1992–93	67.29	+7.6	70.55
1993–94	69.07	+2.6	70.36
1994–95	68.35	–1	68.35

1996–97	69.57	+0.9	65.9

1. Standard spending assessment figures include capital financing.
2. Figures up to 1993–94 include civil defence. Subsequent figures do not.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost per in-use certified normal accommodation place in accordance with key performance indicators during the financial year 1994–95 for (a) Blakenhurst, (b) Doncaster, (c) Bullingdon, (d) Holme House and (e) Elmley gaols. [18937]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 6 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the cost per in use certified normal accommodation place in accordance with key performance indicators during the financial year 1994–95 for (a) Blakenhurst, (b) Doncaster, (c) Bullingdon, (d) Holme House and (e) Elmley establishments.

The figures are given in the attached table. The figures for public and private sector establishments are not directly comparable. The costs for training, uniforms, equipment, materials, etc are included in costs to private sector establishments but not in those for public sector establishments.

Establishment	Net current expenditure £ million	Average in use CNA	Cost per in use CNA place £
Blakenhurst	11.6	649	17,874
Doncaster	11.6	589	19,694
Bullingdon/Oxford	14.4	746	19,303
Elmley	11.4	633	18,009
Holme House	11.9	649	18,336

The cost per in use CNA place is calculated by dividing net current expenditure by average in use CNA.

Prison Administration Expenditure

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of headquarters administration expenditure is included in the cost per certified normal accommodation place in public prisons. [18938]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 6 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking what proportion of headquarters administration expenditure is included in the cost per certified normal accommodation place in public prisons.

The costs per baseline certified normal accommodation place quoted in the annual report for individual public sector prisons do not include any element of headquarters administration expenditure.

The cost per place figure for the Service does include headquarters expenditure.

Prison Assaults

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which local prison in England and Wales had the highest assault rate during the period April to September 1995. [18940]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Visa Restrictions (Hong Kong)

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that holders of the new Hong Kong Special Administrative region passport will be able to enter the United Kingdom without visa restrictions; and if he will make a statement. [18941]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 5 March 1996]: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) on 4 March 1996, Official Report, column 62.

Standard Spending Assessment (Fire Services)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what factors the standard spending assessment for fire services is decided; and what plans he has to change them. [19052]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The fire standard spending assessment is distributed in England by means of a formula which takes into account a number of factors including population, population density and fire calls. From 1996–97 it has been adjusted to include factors for firefighters' pensions and fire safety enforcement.

The formula is reviewed each year in consultation with local authority representatives and this process is about to start for 1997–98.

Census Questions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) of 18 December, Official Report, column 940, what consideration is being given to the classification of people from Northern Ireland within a possible Irish category in the next census. [18527]

Mr. Horam: I have been asked to reply.

It has now been decided to test various changes to the ethnic origin question, including incorporating a separate Irish category. To date no case has been made by users to classify people from Northern Ireland separately and therefore this is currently not being considered.

Young Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people aged (a) 15 and (b) 16 years were remanded into prison custody in 1995 and in each of the last 10 years; and how many in each age group and in each year subsequently received a custodial sentence. [18376]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 6 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of 15 and 16 year olds who were remanded into prison custody in 1995 and in each of the last 10 years; and how many subsequently received a custodial sentence.

The available information is given in the attached tables. The remand receptions include those received either as untried prisoners or as convicted unsentenced prisoners; those received both as untried and convicted unsentenced are counted once.

For 1994, separate figures for untried and convicted unsentenced receptions are given in table 3.10 of "Prison statistics England and Wales 1994" Cm. 3087, a copy of which is in the Library.

The information on the proportion of young remand prisoners in England and Wales subsequently receiving a custodial sentence is given in table 2.9 of "Prison statistics England and Wales 1991", a copy of which is also in the Library. This has been extended to include 1992 and 1993 data; later results are not available.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

House of Commons (Cars)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will instruct drivers working in the Government car pool that car engines are not to be kept running while the car is parked within the precincts of the House. [18264]

Mr. Freeman: This is an operational matter on which I have asked the chief executive of the Security Facilities Executive—SAFE—to write to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from J. C. King to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 5 March 1996:

I have been asked by Mr Freeman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (who now has Ministerial responsibility for the Government Car Service (GCS), to let you have a response to your Parliamentary Question concerning the running of GCS car engines within the precincts of the Palace of Westminster. I am the Chief Executive of the Agency with operational responsibility for the GCS.

Government Car Service drivers remain under clear instructions, while parked with in the precincts of the Palace of Westminster, to keep their vehicle engines running to a minimum consistent with passenger and security requirements. To reinforce this, I have arranged for GCS Management to issue a fresh notice to all GCS drivers.

"Guidance on Guidance"

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place a copy of "Guidance on Guidance": "An Index of Useful Documents", in the Library. [18617]

Mr. Freeman: Yes. As soon as the current version of "Guidance on Guidance: An Index of Useful Documents" has been printed, copies will be placed in the Library.

Illiteracy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those areas of public service or activity where illiteracy is a disqualification from participation. [18782]

Mr. Freeman: Information on the public service as a whole is not held centrally. As far as the civil service is concerned, Departments and agencies are responsible for prescribing the recruitment criteria, including literacy skills, necessary to ensure that recruits are able to do the work required.

EU Legislation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library details of fiches d'impact sent to Government Departments by the European Commission. [18738]

Mr. Freeman: Details of fiches d'impact sent to individual Government Departments are not kept centrally.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18144]

Mr. Freeman: Staff in the Departments and agencies for which I am responsible, and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote, are required to declare any business interest, such as directorships, which might conflict with their oficial duties and to comply with any subsequent instructions regarding the retention, disposal and management of such interests. It is not my practice to disclose information on the personal interests of officials.

Non-executive directorships for civil servants for developmental reasons or on an ex officio basis are encouraged under a Government-sponsored scheme. They provide an opportunity for interchange between the civil service and outside organisations, particularly with the private sector. At present, however, no officials of the Cabinet Office hold directorships under this scheme.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18145]

The Deputy Prime Minister: For these purposes, my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office (Privatisation)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy that public libraries will receive a 50 per cent. discount on official publications after the privatisation of HMSO. [19231]

Mr. Freeman: I can confirm that there are no plans to end the current arrangements for subsidising public libraries in this respect. After privatisation, the subsidy will continue to be administered from within Government by the residual HMSO, and will be entirely separate from the privatised business.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy that no restriction will be imposed on the copying of official publications for private study after the privatisation of HMSO. [19233]

Mr. Freeman: The current arrangements for administering Crown copyright allow documents covered by it to be copied for purposes of private study. As I explained in the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 9 February, Official Report, column 370, privatisation of HMSO will not alter these arrangements, and control of Crown copyright will remain in the Government.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the safeguards he proposes to ensure the continued efficiency of the distribution of official publications after the privatisation of HMSO. [19276]

Mr. Freeman: The criteria for selecting the winning bid for HMSO will place great emphasis on the commitment and ability of each bidder to meet customers' requirements.

Arrangements for distributing official publications, whether by HMSO or otherwise, are determined by the originating Department. After privatisation, each customer will have a legally binding contract with the privatised stationery office, or another supplier, for those services. The contracts can specify all aspects of a customer's requirements.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the findings made by consultants to estimate the probable effect of the proposed privatisation of HMSO on the prices to the public of official publications. [19278]

Mr. Freeman: There is no reason to believe that prices of official publications will be adversely affected by privatisation. HMSO's publications business already operates on a fully commercial basis, receiving no subsidy, and meets all of its costs by charging customers. After privatisation, it will remain open to originating Departments to specify cover prices, where necessary, in their contracts with the stationery office or elsewhere.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he will take to ensure that the "Daily List" and other lists of official publications, include the same material and are produced to the same time scales at present, after the privatisation of HMSO. [19277]

Mr. Freeman: The "Daily List" and other HMSO bibliographic information is maintained as it is essential for the operation of HMSO's publication and distribution functions. It is also in the commercial interests of HMSO to make the information generally available as it increases access to its products. The same internal needs and commercial pressures will apply to the new owner.

Civil Servants (Conduct)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the implications for the civil service of the findings of the Scott report. [19287]

Mr. Freeman: The Government's proposals for taking forward the recommendations of the Scott report were set out by the President of the Board of Trade and myself during the debate on 26 February. A number of these will have implications for the civil service.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to inquire into the conduct of individual civil servants following the publication of the Scott report. [19281]

Mr. Freeman: Where civil servants criticised in the Scott report have acted conscientiously, in good faith, and in accordance with Government policy, disciplinary action would not be appropriate. If any civil servants appeared to fall outside this category, disciplinary action would be considered in accordance with normal departmental procedures.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Africa (Criminal and Social Issues)

19. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next meet African heads of state to discuss criminal and social issues affecting their countries. [17279]

Mr. Hanley: Criminal and social issues are a normal feature of our regular discussions with African Governments and, when appropriate, African heads of state.

Jasrrunt Singh Kalra

21. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from the Indian Government regarding the disappearance of Jasrrunt Singh Kalra. [17283]

Mr. Hanley: The Indian Government have told us that the case is sub judice. The Supreme Court has asked the Indian Central Bureau of Investigation to investigate the case. We understand that it is expected to report in the next few weeks.

Former Yugoslavia

23. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his European counterparts concerning the situation in the former Yugoslavia. [17285]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: European Union Foreign Ministers had their most recent discussion on peace implementation in former Yugoslavia at the 26 February Foreign Affairs Council. Discussion will continue at an informal meeting of EU Foreign Ministers on 9 to 10 March.

Intergovernmental Conference

24. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts about the forthcoming intergovernmental conference on the future of the European Union. [17286]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has regular discussions with his European counterparts about the IGC, most recently at the Foreign Affairs Council on 25 to 26 February in Brussels.

32. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the first meeting of the 1996 IGC will take place; and how long it is scheduled to last. [17294]

Mr. Davis: The first meeting of the IGC is scheduled to take place in Turin on 29 March. The IGC has no fixed end-date.

33. Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to propose treaty amendments at the intergovernmental conference to make more open the proceedings of the institutions of the European Union. [17295]

Mr. Davis: We are committed to making the European Union institutions more open and have supported a number of initiatives to achieve this, for example, by making more Council documents publicly available. We are considering how we might take this forward at the IGC.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the content of Her Majesty's Government's proposed White Paper on the intergovernmental conference of the European Union. [17274]

Mr. Davis: The White Paper will set out the Government's approach to the forthcoming intergovernmental conference.

Council of Ministers (Majority Voting)

28. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the advantages and disadvantages of majority voting in the Council of Ministers of the European Union. [17290]

Mr. David Davis: Qualified majority voting already applies to most of the day-to-day decisions taken by the European Community. It has been a useful factor, for example in completing the single market. But the Government see no case for extending qualified majority voting further.

Export Licensing

29. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to change the criteria used for recommending countries for inclusion on the list of countries for which special export licensing procedures are required; and if he will make a statement. [17291]

Mr. David Davis: The list is drawn up in accordance with foreign policy objectives, international understandings or embargoes to which we are party, the non-proliferation credentials of the country concerned and the effectiveness of its export controls. A revised list was published on 19 July 1995 and is printed in the Official Report. The list is kept under constant review. The Government will consider future arrangements for export control legislation in the light of comments by Sir Richard Scott and the responses to the consultation paper announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Political Representation of Women

30. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met members of the European Parliament to discuss the political representation of women. [17292]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary, other Ministers and I regularly meet Members of the European Parliament to discuss a wide range of issues. Our discussions have not included the political representation of women.

Sudan

31. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had with the Government and opposition groups in Sudan. [17293]

Mr. Hanley: We have regular diplomatic contacts in Khartoum and London. In addition, there are regular meetings with opposition groups in London, Cairo, Khartoum and Nairobi. Most recently, in January our ambassador accompanied the Bishop of Bradford to the Nuba mountains where they met the Wali (regional governor), state ministers and provincial commissioners.

United States Relations

34, Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current state of relations between the United Kingdom and the United States; and if he will make a statement. [17296]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Relations between the United Kingdom and the United States are excellent.

United Nations (Financial Position)

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new proposals he is putting forward to improve the financial position of the UN. [17275]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: In his speech to the UN summit last October, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stressed the importance of prompt and full payment of contributions; clearance of arrears; reform of the system of assessment; and greater focus on efficiency. Together with the French Government, we have now developed a package of proposals reflecting these concerns and designed to resolve the UN financial crisis. This package has been endorsed and adopted by the EU.

Greece and Turkey

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to assist in preventing the rise of conflict between Greece and Turkey. [17280]

Mr. David Davis: We are encouraging both sides to eschew provocative actions or statements and look for ways of developing constructive dialogue. We have suggested to both that, on the specific question of Imia, the best way forward must be to submit the dispute to arbitration.

Embassies and Missions (EU)

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the embassies and missions established by the European Union to date, indicating the total cost, including staff and administration costs for the last year for which figures are available. [18768]

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the negotiations on Cyprus's application for membership of the EU. [17266]

Mr. David Davis: We welcome the prospect of accession and think it should contribute to a settlement. The Madrid European Council reaffirmed that accession negotiations will start six months after the conclusion of the IGC and taking account of its results.

East Timor

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to raise the violation of human rights in East Timor by the Indonesian Government at (a) the forthcoming 52 session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and (b) other intergovernmental conferences. [18848]

Mr. Hanley: Together with our EU partners, we shall raise our concerns about the human rights situation in East Timor at the 52nd session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and at all other appropriate international forums.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a Minister of the British Government last visited the Turks and Caicos Islands; and for what purpose. [19140]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The last ministerial visit to the Turks and Caicos Islands was in April 1995, when the Solicitor-General paid a familiarisation visit to the islands, en route to the Caribbean Dependent Territories Attorney-General's conference in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff presently serve in the Turks and Caicos Islands; and of what grades. [19141]

Mr. Hanley: Three Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff are serving in the Turks and Caicos Islands. One diplomatic service grade 4 officer; one diplomatic service grade 7 officer; and one secretary.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received from Ministers in the Government of the Turks and Caicos Islands about the conduct of the governor of the islands; and from which Ministers. [19142]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: On 20 May 1994, the then Chief Minister wrote to the then Foreign Secretary, the right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd). The Chief Minister subsequently wrote on 27 June 1994 to the then Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, claiming that his original letter was meant as a direct criticism not of the governor, but of the balance of constitutional powers.

On 21 February this year, all six Ministers of the Government of the Turks and Caicos Islands, together with the other elected members, and two out of the three nominated members of the Legislative Council, signed a petition to my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary demanding the recall of the governor.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands; and if he discussed with him the incidence of corruption in the islands. [19143]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) the then Foreign Secretary, met the Governor-designate of the Turks and Caicos Islands in May 1993, shortly before Mr. Bourke took up his appointment. They discussed the importance of good government in the islands, but did not discuss specific instances of corruption.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to ensure that the people of Gibraltar are represented at the European Parliament. [19280]

Mr. David Davis: Annex II of the 1976 EC Act concerning direct elections to the European Parliament states that the UK would apply its provisions only in respect of the UK. We are committed to ensuring that Gibraltar's views are fully taken into account through the UK in EU decision making.

Paris Embassy (Meetings)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 March, Official Report, column 758, if staff of Her Majesty's embassy in Paris met Mr. de Kemoularia or Jean Pierrè Macé in 1995 and 1996; who was present at the meetings; and for what purpose they were held. [19279]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Embassy staff had no working meetings with Mr. Kemoularia during the period in question, although he attended several social events at the embassy. The embassy has no record of any meetings with Mr. Macé.

European Parliament

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which areas of the EU residents do not elect representatives to the European Parliament. [19286]

Mr. David Davis: Representation in the European Parliament covers all member states of the EU. For the purposes of EP elections, the UK member state is defined as the United Kingdom only, and does not include those European territories for whose external relations it is responsible.

Angola

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress of the peace process in Angola. [17278]

Mr. Hanley: The UN Secretary-General, in his report to the Security Council of 2 February, acknowledged substantial delays in the implementation of the Lusaka protocol, but considered that sufficient progress had been made to recommend the renewal of the mandate of UNAVEM III. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Overseas Development urged both sides to reach a speedy conclusion to the peace process during her visit to Angola on 19 to 21 February.

India

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government concerning the deaths and injuries suffered by civilians in Azad Kashmir on 26 January from fire across the UN line of control from Indian-occupied Kashmir; and if he will make a statement. [18897]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 5 March 1996]: We have not made any specific representations to the Indian Government about this incident. We regret the tragic loss of life that occurred during an exchange of fire that day. We have repeatedly urged both sides to exercise restraint, and to resolve their difference over Kashmir through bilateral dialogue.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government about assassination attempts made against Kashmir leaders living in Indian-occupied Kashmir with special reference to Yasin Malik; what reports he has received about the identity of those responsible for such attacks; and if he will make a statement. [18896]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The British high commission in India is in contact with the Indian Government about the security situation in Kashmir. The precise identity of those responsible for the attack on Yasin Malik and others in Anantnag on 21 February remains unclear. HMG condemn all such acts of violence in Kashmir.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has requested from the United Nations concerning information from UN observers on the line of control between Kashmir and

Azad Kashmir concerning the shelling on 26 January of Azad Kashmir from Indian-occupied Kashmir; and if he will make a statement. [18898]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 5 March 1996]: We would expect the UN military observers group to report an incident of this nature to the UN Secretary-General in the normal way. The incident has not so far been brought before the Security Council.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if the annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18137]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 1 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 1 February, Official Report, column 854.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answers given in another place on 22 January, Official Report, House of Lords, column 51, by the Minister for State for Overseas Development and on 1 February, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 119–122 by the Under-Secretary of State for Defence. In accordance with Cabinet Office guidance, such non-executive directorships are unpaid.

The Scottish Prison Service

The chief executive, directors, governors, senior managers and members of the Scottish Prison Service communications branch, as appropriate, respond to media inquiries and/or comment about operational matters on a daily basis. No central record is kept of the number of occasions on which this occurs, nor of the specific content of these contacts since this could be done only at disproportionate cost.

EDS Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those contracts his Department currently holds with EDS, indicating for each the (a) date of inception,(b) value and (c) duration. [17454]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has no contracts with EDS.

Pupil Exclusions

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schoolchildren were excluded (a) permanently and (b) temporarily from schools in (i) Inverclyde and (ii) Strathclyde in 1995. [18047]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information on the number of school children excluded temporarily from schools is not available. The available information, consistent with that set out in the report on attendance and absence in Scottish schools 1994–95, published by the audit unit of HM inspectorate of schools, is as follows.

	Number of pupils permanently excluded from schools in 1994–95	Number of half days of temporary exclusions from schools from January–July 1995
Inverclyde	0	4,515
Strathclyde	0	110,060

Infertility

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) which health authorities provide NHS treatment for (a) assisted and (b) surrogate pregnancy for childless couples; and if he will make a statement; [17966]

(2) what plans he has to designate (a) assisted and (b) surrogate pregnancies for childless couples on the NHS as clinically essential; and if he will make a statement. [17968]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information about which health boards provide NHS treatment for all assisted and surrogate pregnancies is not available centrally. It is for individual health boards to decide whether to purchase high technology infertility procedures and surrogate pregnancy services.

Waste Disposal

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the number of landfill sites by district council; [18277]

(2) if he will list by district council area, the number of tonnes of special waste arising and deposits for each of the last four years; [18281]

(3) if he will list, for each year, for the last four years, by district council area, the number of tonnes of special waste arising (a) within the district and deposited within the district, (b) within the district and exported out of the district and (c) outside the district and deposited within the district. [18276]

Mr. Kynoch: Data on waste management in Scotland are published in the Scottish Office Statistical Bulletin, "Waste Collection, Disposal and Regulation Statistical". The most recent issue of this document, containing data for 1993, was published in December 1995. A copy is in the House Library.

Table B18 of the bulletin shows the number of waste management facilities by district and islands councils. Landfill operations form the bulk of these numbers but are not specifically identified. Of the 1,054 licences and resolutions in table B18, a total of 635 were associated with landfills—458 licences and 177 resolutions.

Table B9 of the bulletin shows the quantity of special waste arisings and deposits in Scotland for 1993. Corresponding information for 1992 is detailed in table B9 of the 1992 bulletin, a copy of which is in the House Library. There is no district level information available before 1992. Table A2.2 of the 1993 bulletin provides a time series of data over the five-year period 1989 to 1993 for the total quantities of special waste arising, imported, exported and retained in Scotland. Table B22 of the 1993 bulletin and table B21 of the 1992 bulletin also contain relevant information on special waste.

Household Waste Recycling

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the percentage of household waste recycled for each year in Scotland over the past five years; and if he will make a statement regarding the target of recycling 25 per cent. of all household waste by the end of the century; [18279]

(2) which Scottish local authorities currently operate recycling schemes; and what was the expenditure for each. [18280]

Mr. Kynoch: The table shows the reported rate of household waste collected for recycling over the four-year period 1990 to 1993 in the form of a percentage of all household waste.

	Household waste collected for recycling (percentage of all household waste)
1989	No data
1990	2.5
1991	3.3
1993	4.1

As regards the target of recycling 25 per cent. of all household waste in the UK by the end of the century, it should be noted that provision of local recycling facilities is a matter for local authorities and the private and voluntary sectors. The Government's initiative on producer responsibility for waste packaging will play a key role in developing local infrastructure and encouraging higher rates of recycling, together with other factors, such as the rising costs of waste disposal, including the proposed landfill tax, and improved markets for secondary raw materials.

There are recycling activities in all district and islands councils areas. There are no current data available on expenditure relating to these schemes.

Monofilament Nets

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to seek a Europe-wide agreement on the use of monofilament nets; and if he will make a statement. [18287]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government have no plans to seek such an agreement, but I have written to the European Commission to notify it of our proposal to allow a derogation for the carriage of large-mesh monofilament nets in Scottish waters.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he will be taking to ensure that lifting the ban on the use of large mesh monofilament nets by Scottish boats will not conflict with Government commitments to the conservation of marine wildlife under the agreement on conservation of small cetaceans in the Baltic and North seas, the European Union wild birds directive (79/409/EEC) and the European Union habitats directive (92/43/EEC); and if he will make a statement. [18286]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Arrangements for monitoring by-catches of marine mammals are already in place and will be extended to any large mesh monofilament nets that are used. These nets are unlikely to pose a threat to marine bird species as we expect the nets to be bottom set in deep water.

Forestry Commission (Legal Advisers)

Mr. McFall: To ask, the Secretary of State for Scotland for what length of time Pearsons has been the principal legal advisers to the Forestry Commission; and for how long he estimates this relationship will be maintained. [18566]

Mr. Kynoch: Pearsons has provided legal services to the Forestry Commission in Scotland for some 70 years. The Commission recently invited tenders for this work and has appointed another firm of solicitors with effect from 1 April.

Further Education Colleges

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funds are being made available to further education colleges for the administration costs that will be incurred from the transfer of responsibility for bursary administration from local authorities. [18615]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Following consultation with local authorities and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, £45 million was transferred from the aggregate external finance settlement to fund the provision of further education bursaries in colleges in Scotland in 1996–97. This settlement is based on historic trends of local authority expenditure and includes an element to reflect administrative costs.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what transfer arrangements have been made for bursary administration staff in local authorities in respect of the transfer of this function to further education colleges. [18614]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: It is the responsibility of each college's board of management to determine its staffing requirements for this new responsibility. The Association of Scottish Colleges has encouraged its members to ensure that local authorities and their bursary staff are made aware of opportunities as they arise. Liaison has also been maintained with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

NHS Dentists

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients were registered with NHS dental practices in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990 and (d) 1995, showing this as a percentage of the population of Scotland. [17986]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Registration of patients with a dentist was introduced in October 1990. Patients are registered with an individual dentist, not a dental practice. The information requested is in the table.

Patients registered with general dental practitioners in Scotland

Year[1]	Number of registered patients at 31 December	Registered patients as a percentage of population

[1] Registration was introduced only from October 1990.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dental practices in Scotland have accepted new NHS patients in 1993, 1994 and 1995. [17987]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No information is held on dental practices. General dental practitioners are independent contractors who are free to decide whether to offer NHS treatment to each individual patient. The table shows the number of individual dentists who accepted new NHS patients or NHS patients on referral during each of the years in question.

General dental practitioners in Scotland who accepted new or referred NHS patients

	Dentists
1993	1,749
1994	1,773
1995	1,799

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the Minister of Agriculture, Forestry and the Environment's letter to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 12 January, what conclusions he has reached in respect of the official study of the Scottish Crop Research Institute report on the computation of safe isolation distances for field-grown genetically modified crops. [17907]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The findings contained in the final report of Scottish Office funded research projects are normally published to inform the wider scientific community and the industries which might benefit. Research conclusions may also have a bearing on policy or legislative considerations and provide a justification for further study.

The conclusion from this particular four year project is that viable pollen will disperse to distances of up to 1.5 km from source. This broadly supports the accepted views on pollen dispersal which are taken into account in each relevant case for the release of genetically modified crops.

Homeworkers

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of (a) the number of homeworkers in Scotland and (b) how many are (i) self-employed and (ii) employers. [19167]

Mr. Kynoch: The Labour Force Survey estimates that in spring 1995 there were 44,000 homeworkers in Scotland working at their own homes. Of these, 27,000 were self-employed. No reliable estimate is available for Scotland for the number of homeworkers who were employers.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department which (a) have a statutory base, (b) admit members of the public to all board or committee meetings and (c) hold open meetings for the public; and if in each case this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntarily. [16179]

The following bodies hold on a voluntary basis open meetings or open days which may be attended by members of the public: Crofters' Commission, Edinburgh New Town Conservation Committee, National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for Scotland, Scottish Natural Heritage and Scottish Sports Council.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department publish (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) the minutes of meetings, (d) the agendas of meetings and (e) a register of members' interests, indicating in each case if this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntary. [16828]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 27 February 1996]: The information required is as follows.

No executive NDPB sponsored by my Department is required to publish the minutes of its meetings on a statutory basis. Livingston development corporation voluntarily makes available for public inspection the minutes of those parts of its meetings which it opens to members of the public.

No executive NDPB sponsored by my Department is required to publish the agenda of its meetings and none does so.

Information about members' interests is available from Companies House in relation to executive NDPBs which are covered by the Companies Acts and the Friendly Societies Acts. These bodies are:

Although registers of members' interests are held by a number of other executive NDPBs none is required to publish them. The National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for Scotland and Scottish Homes voluntarily publish a register of members' interests. The Scottish Legal Aid Board will be publishing a register in its annual report, which will be available about July. Some other bodies hold registers which are, or will be during the course of this year, available for inspection at the offices of the body. These are: Highlands and Islands Enterprise—financial decisions relating to registered interests are published in the annual report; National Museums of Scotland—available from August 1996; Scottish Arts Council, Scottish Enterprise—summary available at time of annual report and financial transactions involving board members published in annual report and accounts; Scottish Film Council and Scottish Higher Education Funding Council.

Holyroodhouse

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by job title and salary the staff of the palace of Holyroodhouse. [17899]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The staff of the palace of Holyroodhouse paid for by Historic Scotland are:

Post	Salary £
Head of security	16,023
16 security officers	[1]12,836
3 craftsmen	[1]15,386
2.5 porters	[1]8,624

[1] Average.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply of 13 February 1996, Official Report, column 566, if he will give details of the professional and central administration costs connected with the palace of Holyroodhouse in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94 and (c) 1994–95. [17977]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Administrative and professional input to the conservation and maintenance of the palace forms only a part of the duties for a wide range of staff. Records are not collated in a manner which allows the specific palace costs to be extracted without incurring disproportionate costs.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people visited the palace of Holyroodhouse in each of the last three years; and what income was derived from visitors. [17901]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The Number of visitors to the palace of Holyroodhouse and the income derived from them in each of the last three years was as follows:

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The Red Deer Commission provides advice to land owners and their representatives in Scotland on deer matters and the Commission has been involved in discussions from time to time in connection with the Balmoral and Dalnadamph estates. In addition, the Deer (Scotland) Act 1959 prescribes the permitted methods for culling red deer in Scotland.

Experimental Nuclear Reactor Sites

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on land ownership and lease arrangements applying to the experimental nuclear reactor sites operated by the Scottish universities research and reactor centre at the former national engineering laboratory in East Kilbride. [18065]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 4 March 1996]: Ownership of the site of the former National Engineering Laboratory at East Kilbride now rests with Scottish Enterprise. The lease arrangements which apply to that site are an operational matter for that organisation. I will ask the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to write to the hon. Member.

European Social Fund

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the funding contribution (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of total funding from the European social fund to each local enterprise company for the (i) youth training, (ii) youth credits, (iii) modern apprenticeships and (iv) training for work programmes. [18745]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Drug-related Deaths

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many heroin-related deaths have occurred in each of the past five years in Wales; and if he will make a statement; [17529]

(2) how many deaths have occurred in Wales in each of the past five years as a result of Ecstasy use; and if he will make a statement; [17515]

(3) how many deaths have occurred in Wales in each of the past five years as a result of LSD use; and if he will make a statement. [17557]

Mr. Richards: The table, provided by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys from information on death certificates, shows the number of deaths to residents of Wales registered between 1990 and 1994 with mention of heroin, Ecstasy and LSD.

Investors in People

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many employers, and of what size, hold investor in people status; and what percentage of all employers of that size these constitute (a) in Wales and (b) in Mid Glamorgan [17931]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office's records show that, in Wales, 142 organisations employing fewer than 200 people and 54 organisations with 200 employees or more have achieved the investors in people standard. The equivalent figures for Mid Glamorgan are 24 and 13 organisations respectively.

These achievements represent 18 per cent. of eligible organisations in Wales employing 200 or more people and almost 20 per cent. in Mid Glamorgan. Percentage figures for those with fewer than 200 employees are not yet available.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he will take to compensate the local seafood sector following the tanker disaster in Milford Haven; and if he will make a statement. [17597]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the oral statement made by my right hon. Friend on 29 February 1996, column 1024–98.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the loss of life among each species of wild bird for the spillage from the Sea Empress; what support he is providing for those agencies seeking to save the bird populations; and if he will make a statement; [17938]

Mr. Jones: The latest estimate—28 February—on bird kills and birds oiled, by species is given on the following list. Compensation for cost incurred as a result of the oil pollution damage from the Sea Empress is available from the shipowners insurer and from the International oil pollution compensation fund, which is funded by levies on the oil industry.

Notes:

These are minimum figures as the complete data set is not yet available. There may also be birds which have been picked up and cared for my members of the public, or taken to other bird hospitals which are not included in the RSPCA figures.

Many dead birds will remain at sea, or come ashore in inaccessible places, and not be counted.

Caution should also be noted with regard to the identification of oiled birds.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what additional financial assistance he will make available to maritime local authorities in Wales to enable them to minimize the pollution impact of the Sea Empress disaster. [17885]

Mr. Hague: While local authorities are responsible for the clean-up of any oil which comes ashore, the clear principle is that the polluter must pay. The costs will be reimbursed by the ship's insurers and by the International oil pollution compensation fund. In the intervening period, as I said on 29 February Official Report, column 1033, the Welsh Office will consider sympathetically any representations from local authorities about covering costs incurred.

South-East Wales Ambulance Trust

Mr Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what severance payments have been made to the former chief executive of the South-east Wales ambulance trust. [18080]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) on 28 February 1996, Official Report, columns 603–04.

Higher Education Inquiry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what involvement his Department will have in the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education; and if he will make a statement. [18450]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend will be fully involved in deciding on the composition of the committee, and on its terms of reference. The Welsh Office will ensure that the committee is fully appraised of the features of the higher education sector in Wales. It will be for the committee to decide on its methods of proceeding but the Welsh Office will be involved in presenting evidence and information to the committee. In due course, my right hon. Friend will be involved in deciding on the Government's response to the committee's report.

German and French Companies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are employed by (a) German and (b) French companies in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [18266]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: French-owned manufacturing companies employ 4,620 people in Wales and German-owned manufacturing companies in Wales employ 5,630 people in Wales. They make a valuable contribution to the Welsh industrial base.

Wind Farms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received since 1990 (a) for and (b) against proposals for wind farm developments in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [18268]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since 1990, my right hon. Friend has received numerous representations about proposals for wind farm developments. The majority of representations have been against the proposals.

Teachers' Pay Award

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the impact of the teachers' pay award on class sizes; and if he will make a statement. [18449]

Mr. Richards: Class sizes will depend upon decisions taken by local education authorities about the allocation of funding, the decisions taken by schools about the deployment of resources and by parents choosing the school they wish their child to attend. If local authorities decide to give priority to schools, we see no reason why class sizes should rise on average.

Bala-Dolgellau Main Road

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received during the past two years on the Bryncoedifor section of the Bala-Dolgellau main road. [18620]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There has been one item of ministerial correspondence and 10 letters from the public addressed to the Highways Directorate about the temporary traffic lights near Drws y Nant on the A494 trunk road.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when work will commence on the Bryncoedifor section of the Bala to Dolgellau main road; and if he will make a statement. [18609]

Mr. Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 24 January 1996, column 297. The Drws y Nant improvement on the A494 trunk road is programmed to start in 1997, subject to the satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures and the availability of finance.

New Patients

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many NHS family doctor practices have accepted new NHS patients in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement; [18820]

(2) how many dental practices in Wales have accepted new NHS patients in each year since 1993; and if he will make a statement. [18658]

Mr. Richards: The information is not available centrally.

NHS Dentists

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients were registered with NHS dental practices in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990 and (d) 1995, showing this as a percentage of the population of Wales. [18659]

Mr. Richards: Information on the number of patients registered with general dental practitioners in Wales was collected centrally—by the Dental Practice Board—for the first time at the end of 1990. However, as it took some time for patients to register, meaningful data were not available until 1991. The available information is given in the following table:

	Number of patients registered	Percentage of population
30 September 1991	1,229,875	43
30 September 1995[1]	1,622,426	56

[1] 1994 population figure has been used to calculate the percentage as 1995 data is not yet available.

Eye Tests

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many NHS eye tests were given in Wales in (a) 1991, (b) 1993 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [18805]

Mr. Richards: Information on sight tests paid for by family health services authorities during the period in question is given in the following table:

	Number of NHS sight tests
1991–92	332,240
1993–94	397,310
1994–95	420,900

GP Practice Charters

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of family doctor practices in Wales at present produce their own charters; and if he will make a statement. [18804]

Mr. Richards: As at December 1995, 59 per cent. of GP practices in Wales had practice charters.

Rhondda Healthcare Trust

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations his Department has received from the Rhondda Healthcare NHS trust during the past year; and if he will make a statement. [18619]

Mr. Richards: Routine discussions between my Department and the Rhondda Healthcare NHS trust have taken place during the normal course of business. I have received one formal representation in response to the consultation on the formation of the North Glamorgan NHS trust.

Charter Mark

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many NHS Wales organisations were awarded the charter mark for outstanding service in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995, and if he will make a statement. [18806]

Mr. Richards: The information is as follows:

	Number of awards to NHS Wales
1993	3
1994	1
1995	7

Schoolchildren (Exclusions)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schoolchildren were excluded (a) permanently and (b) temporarily from (i) junior and (ii) secondary schools in Wales in (1) 1993, (2) 1994 and (3) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [18818]

Mr. Richards: Information on pupil exclusions has not been collected centrally in the past. Returns to the January 1996 schools census, which asked how many boys and girls were excluded in the 1994–95 academic year, will provide information in due course and supplementary data have also been sought recently from local education authorities.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which applications from schools for grant-maintained status are being considered. [18922]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend is currently considering an application for grant-maintained status from St. Brigid's independent school, Denbigh, Clwyd.

Special Education, Flintshire

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what additional funds he will make available to assist special educational needs in infant and primary schools in the new Flintshire county council. [18915]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend's final decisions on the Welsh local government revenue settlement for 1996–97 were approved by Parliament on 8 February. It is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources that are made available are allocated between services, including education, in the light of their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18638]

Mr. Hague: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people living overseas applied to be registered to vote in the general election of 1992 in each of the Welsh parliamentary constituencies; and if he will make a statement. [18618]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

Information on numbers of overseas applicants is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the numbers of overseas electors by constituency on the 1992 election register is given in table 1.4 of "Electoral Statistics 1993" (Series EL no. 20), a copy of which is in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the reasons for the low outturn of payments of the non-contributory pensioners' Christmas bonus in 1994–95. [17803]

Mr. Heald: The estimates for non-contributory Christmas bonus were based on previous projections of the demographic and case load data. The forecasts proved to be too high, resulting in an underspend against provision. However, the outturn for contributory Christmas bonus was greater than forecast, with the result that total out-turn on contributory and non-contributory Christmas bonus was in excess of forecast.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many written parliamentary questions were passed for answer to executive agencies and non-governmental departments in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [14985]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

Session	Written answers provided by agency chief executives
1992–93	495
1993–94	442
1995–96 to date	155

Note:
Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter.
Source:
Departmental archive of written answers; figures were obtained by a clerical count and may be subject to error.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 30 January concerning a constituent. [17440]

Mr. Roger Evans: A reply was issued on 23 February.

Contributions and Benefits Agencies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) contributions and (b) benefit agencies there have been in Scotland in each of the past 10 years; and how many are located in rural districts. [17105]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables:

1990	63 (including 20 rural)
1991	55 (including 18 rural)
1992	39 (including 17 rural)

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of staff working for (a) benefits agencies and (b) contributions agencies in Scotland for each year since 1993. [17108]

Mr. Evans: This information is set out in the table.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from the Industrial Injuries advisory council on the draft regulations on reduced earnings allowance. [18275]

Mr. Roger Evans: The council was content with the substance of the draft regulations, but suggested an amendment to the wording of the prescription for carpal tunnel syndrome and a delay in implementation of the provisions limiting to 12 months the backdating of new awards of reduced earnings allowance. A copy of the council chairman's letter and my response have been placed in the Library. The regulations have now been laid before Parliament as the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Diseases) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are (a) the total costs of administering the cold weather payment scheme and (b) the annual value of the contract with Meteorological Office for forecasting in respect of the scheme; and what proportion of the total budget for the scheme each of these sums represented in 1994–95. [18301]

Mr. Roger Evans: A detailed breakdown of the administration costs of the cold weather payment scheme is not available. Payments are issued automatically, so, administration costs are comparatively low.

The cost of the cold weather payment scheme is dependent on weather conditions in any particular year. During the mild winter of 1994–95, 10,969 payments were made at a total cost of £76,786. Administration costs were therefore minimal.

Out of a total of £15,806 charged by the Meteorological Office for the cold weather payment scheme during 1994–95, £7,755 was for forecasting. These costs are negotiated annually and are fixed costs regardless of actual weather conditions.

As a breakdown of the total budget for the scheme, including administration, is unavailable, it is not possible to say what proportion of the total the charge for forecasting represents.

Note:
1. This figure will not sum as a multiple of the 1994–95 £7 cold weather payment figure, due to clerical awards made at amounts other than £7.

Retirement Pensions and Income Support

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the percentage by which the state retirement pension and income support were uprated in April 1995 and will be uprated in April 1996; and if he will provide figures on (a) the amount and (b) the percentage that the applicable amount for income support for a single pensioner aged under 75 years has changed relative to the level of the state retirement pension. [18337]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	Percentage by which retirement pension uprated (Column A)	Percentage by which income support uprated (Column B)	Amount by which retirement pension increased (Column C)	Amount by which income support increased (Column D)	Column D as a percentage of column C (Column E)
1995	2.2	1.8	£1.25	£1.15	92 per cent.
1996	3.9	3.0	£2.30	£1.95	85 per cent.

1. Amounts are for a single pensioner aged under 75 who is not disabled.
2. Figures in column E are to the nearest whole number.

Hearing Loss

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will meet representatives of the Royal British Legion to discuss the effects on the ex-service community of the abolition of lump sum payments for attributable hearing loss below 20 per cent.; [18952]

(2) if he will meet representatives of the Royal British Legion to discuss the effects for the ex-service community of the abolition of lump sum payments for attributable hearing loss below 20 per cent. [18954]

Mr. Heald: The removal of payment of gratuities for service-attributable noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss of less than 20 per cent. was part of a package of measures which included an increase from April 1993 of up to £5 a week above the rate of inflation for all war disablement pensioners. The most severely disabled gained most. Almost 265,000 war pensioners are now gaining from this increase at an estimated annual cost of over £26 million. The package was therefore of considerable benefit to the disabled ex-service community.

This matter has been discussed on several occasions at meetings between Ministers and representatives of ex-service organisations, including the Royal British Legion. I see no point in a further meeting at this time.

Social Fund (Southampton)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of (a) social fund grants and (b) social fund loans which were (i) claimed and (ii) granted in each year since 1989 in the area covered by Benefits Agency offices serving Southampton; and what was the expenditure in each year on each benefit. [18844]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Denham, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what was the total number of (a) Social Fund grants and (b) Social Fund loans which were (i) claimed and (ii) granted in each year since 1989 in the area covered by Benefits Agency offices serving Southampton; and what was the expenditure in each year on each benefit.

The information requested is not available for the financial year 1989–90.

When the Benefits Agency was formed in April 1991, existing Local Offices were grouped into Districts. Annex A gives the figures for the Southampton Local Office prior to the change. Southampton Office forms part of Solent and New Forest District, which also includes the Fareham and New Forest Branch Offices. Annex B, gives the figures for Solent and New Forest District from April 1991 to date. Figures are only available for the District as a whole.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Family Credit, Southampton

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of households claiming family credit in each year since 1989, in the area covered by Benefits Agency offices serving Southampton; and what was the expenditure in each year in current prices. [18843]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Denham, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what was the total number of households claiming Family Credit (FC) in each year since 1989, in the area covered by Benefits Agency (BA) offices serving Southampton; and what was the expenditure in each year in current prices.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because the FC computer system holds records of the total number of claims received, awarded and disallowed on a national basis. Details are not broken down into individual towns or areas. The information is only available from 1993 as details relating to FC claims are normally destroyed after 18 months.

However, statistics are available which indicate the number of families in receipt of FC within a BA office area at a particular date. Unfortunately, the scan does not identify at what stage of the 26 weeks entitlement the awards are at that date. The statistics available for the Southampton Branch Office are as follows. They are provisional and subject to change.

Date of scan	Families in receipt of family credit at that date
20 August 1993	1,966
15 April 1994	2,051
10 November 1994	2,224
13 April 1995	2,292
10 November 1995	2,462
16 February 1996	2,534

Details of benefit expenditure is only available on a national basis.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Benefits, Southampton

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of households in receipt of benefits in the area covered by Benefits Agency offices serving Southampton in each year since 1989. [18845]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Denham, dated 5 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate he has made of the number of households in receipt of benefits in the area covered by Benefits Agency (BA) offices serving Southampton in each year since 1989.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are collected on the number of benefit recipients and not by household. Information relating to centrally administered benefits such as Attendance Allowance, Disability Living Allowance, Disability Working Allowance, Family Credit, Invalid Care Allowance and Retirement Pension are only collated on a National basis.

Annex A gives details of the number of benefit recipients whose claims are administered by the BA Solent and New Forest District. The District consists of the Southampton, Fareham and New Forest Branch Offices. It should be noted that customers may receive more than one benefit. The information is only available from 1991 when the BA was formed.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Solent and New Forest District
Number and types of benefit recipients from November 1991 to November 1995

Severe Disability Allowance	2,729	2,795	2,897	3,057	3,065

Sickness Benefit figures include customers who claimed but were not awarded Sickness Benefit as they had paid insufficient National Insurance contributions, but were awarded National Insurance credits only.
Sickness Benefit was replaced by short term Incapacity Benefit from April 1995.
Invalidity Benefit was replaced by long term Incapacity Benefit from April 1995.
Information has been provided by the BA's Central Data Unit, the data is provisional and may be subject to change.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for further consultations on the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [19625]

Mr. Burt: I am pleased to announce a joint consultation exercise that begins today on the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

The Government will phase in the access rights in part III of the Act. Around the end of 1996, we will make it unlawful to refuse service, or offer it to a lower standard, or on less favourable terms, simply because someone is disabled. At the same time, we will prohibit discrimination against disabled people by those selling or renting property.

We are consulting on proposals to regulate how these initial rights will operate in certain areas—insurance, services ancillary to education, and agents appointed to act on behalf of those unable to give an informed consent.

At the same time the National Disability Council is consulting on its proposals for a code of practice on these initial rights.

The remaining rights in part III require service providers to make reasonable adjustments to allow or facilitate access for disabled people. The Government are also consulting on the timetable for bringing these duties into force.

Copies of the consultation package are available in the Library.

Casualty Departments

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of casualty departments by region in each of the five years up to 1993–94. [18072]

Mr. Horam: The latest available figures are shown in the table. Information is collected on the basis of trusts and directly managed units with accident and emergency services. Some trusts include more than one hospital each with its own accident and emergency department.

Figures for 1989–90 and 1990–91 are not available centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what time limits have been placed on the period of service contracts entered into with those providing hospital buildings under the private finance initiative. [18825]

Mr. Horam: The period of service contracts entered into with those providing hospital buildings under the private finance initiative is a subject for negotiation between national health service trusts and their potential private sector partners, and will vary from contract to contract and from service to service. The two criteria for approval of NHS private finance initiative contracts are that they should offer best value for money and that they should reduce risks for the NHS by transferring risks to the private sector.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals are currently seeking PFI contracts in England; what estimate he has made of the number of contracts which will have been signed by 30 March (a) 1996 and (b) 1997; and if he will make a statement. [19230]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on PFI contracts in (a) Amersham and High Wycombe, South Buckinghamshire NHS trust, (b) Swindon and (c) North Durham. [19229]

Mr. Horam: No. Contracts are currently being negotiated between the trusts and their private sector partners. These are commercially sensitive and confidential.

Solihull Hospital

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will refer the determination of the future of Solihull hospital to an independent tribunal; and if he will make a statement; [18779]

(2) if he will meet a delegation from the parliamentary constituency of Meriden to discuss the future of Solihull hospital as a stand-alone trust hospital. [18783]

Mr. Horam: The proposal to establish Solihull district general hospital as a national health service trust has already been considered thoroughly and rejected. The proposal to dissolve Birmingham Heartlands NHS trust and to establish a new NHS trust with Solihull hospital is still a matter for public consultation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make his decision about the future of Solihull hospital after careful consideration of the outcome of consultation, taking into account all the views expressed. I am, of course, willing to meet my hon. Friend and a delegation from his constituency and to listen to their views.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of whether Solihull hospital could provide accident and emergency facilities on a 24-hour basis with full consultant, medical and support facilities if the hospital merged with Birmingham Heartlands hospital. [18781]

Mr. Horam: This issue is being considered as part of the consultation exercise currently under way on the proposal to merge Solihull district general hospital and Birmingham Heartlands NHS trust.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will postpone the final date of the consultation period on the proposals for the future of Solihull hospital to allow fresh proposals to be considered. [18780]

Mr. Horam: No. If my hon. Friend has any comments to make in response to the consultation exercise I would ask that he forward these to the West Midlands regional health authority as a matter of urgency.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received during the independent consulting period about the role of Heartlands hospital in Birmingham in respect of the proposed merger with Solihull hospital. [18778]

Mr. Horam: All representations about the proposed merger between Solihull district general hospital and Birmingham Heartlands National Health Service trust have been referred to the West Midlands regional health authority, which is conducting the public consultation exercise on this proposal. Once the exercise is concluded, the regional health authority will report the results to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and we will give careful consideration to the views expressed.

Redundant Hospital Buildings

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the cost of maintaining redundant or empty hospital buildings (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in London and (c) on the site of the former Westminster hospital; [18851]

(2) how many square feet of former hospital buildings remain (a) empty, (b) derelict and (c) unsold. [18852]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Dentists and Pharmacists (Premises)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been allocated by the NHS executive in each region for funding the improvement of premises occupied by (a) dentists and (b) pharmacists. [18776]

Mr. Malone: Dentists and pharmacists are independent contractors who make their own business decisions about any improvements that may be necessary for their premises. Their national health service fees cover remuneration and expenses.

Northern and Yorkshire Outpost Headquarters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, columns 919–20, if the Yorkshire regional health authority's building at Park parade, Harrogate was (a) placed on the open market and (b) advertised for sale on the basis of competitive tenders before its sale; who provided an independent valuation of the building for the NHS before its sale; what the valuation was; and on what basis this figure was calculated. [18829]

Mr. Malone: The sale of the former Yorkshire regional health authority building at Park parade, Harrogate was linked to the procurement of new premises for the NHS Executive Northern and Yorkshire regional office, in Durham. This was to avoid the serious risk, confirmed by independent property experts, that the Harrogate offices might remain as a liability to the health service, unsold and unlet for a considerable period.

The linked sale and procurement was put to competitive tender, and the tender was let to Dysart Developments Ltd. on the basis of the best financial return to the health service.

The building was valued prior to tender by the district valuer, at £2.5 million, on the basis of his appraisal of the property and his knowledge of the local market. The successful tender incorporated an offer for the Harrogate building in excess of this figure, at £2.825 million.

Hospital Doctors

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of (a) junior and (b) other hospital doctors in (i) 1985, (ii) 1990 and (iii) 1995. [18740]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Total numbers of junior doctors and other hospital doctors in England

As at 30 September

Year	1985	1990	1994
Junior doctors	21,520	23,630	25,780
Other hospital doctors	22,030	24,970	26,260

Public Health Link

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the review of the public health link procedure; and if he will publish his conclusions. [18788]

Mr. Horam: The Chief Medical Officer has recently met leaders of the medical profession to discuss how arrangements for transmitting urgent communications to doctors should be improved. Based on the principles agreed, finalised proposals will shortly be put to the medical profession and to other interested parties to ensure procedures are understood by all concerned.

Anaesthetists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of qualified anaesthetists in the NHS; and what is the shortfall for each NHS trust. [18775]

Mr. Malone: The number of qualified anaesthetists—consultant grade—employed in the national health service was 2,350[1] as of 30 September 1994. The Department does not hold information about vacancies at trust level.

Note:

[1] This number is rounded to the nearest 10.

Transplant Surgery

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what examinations, and of what nature, his Department (a) has conducted (b) is conducting and (c) has asked other organisations to conduct into the use for transplantation or other surgical procedures on humans of transgenic or genetically-modified animals or organs or parts therefrom. [18802]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has asked a committee chaired by Professor Ian Kennedy to review the acceptability of, and ethical framework within which, xenotransplantation—the transplant of animal organs, cells and tissue across species—may be undertaken, and to make recommendations. The Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens is considering the potential infection risks which might arise following xenotransplantation.

Information Technology

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of planned savings in management costs which will result from more effective use of information technology. [18786]

Mr. Horam: Information technology pervades most of the activity of the national health service. Whilst benefits, including potential savings in management costs, are known for the use of information technology in some of these activities, the Department of Health does not maintain a total across all of them.

Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all Department of Health funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1990 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Mexborough, (c) Doncaster travel-to-work area and (d) Mexborough travel-to-work area identifying (i) title, summary and duration of the pilot or trial, (ii) target population and total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot, trial or research finding was published and the date of publication; and if he will list all other non-Deaprtment of Health research bodies or organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [19089]

Mr. Malone: Research commissioned within the Department's policy research programme is set out in "Centrally Commissioned Research Programme" and "Centrally Commissioned Research Programme: Commissions 1994–95" copies of which are available in the Library.

The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Keith Jones, chairman of the Doncaster district health authority, for available information on local health studies.

Patient Information

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish guidance to the NHS on the protection and use of patient information; and if he will make a statement. [19807]

Mr. Horam: We will be issuing guidance to national health service and other interested bodies tomorrow. Copies will be placed in the Library. The guidance will emphasise the legal duty of all NHS bodies and staff to protect patient confidentiality, as well as the importance of informing patients of the essential uses to which personal information, anonymised wherever possible, may be put.

Childhood Cancers

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the funding of the National Radiological Protection Board, NRPB-R276, pages 100 and 109 in respect of the incidence of childhood cancers linked to natural background alpha radiation. [18761]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health and the Scottish Office provide core-funding to the National Radiological Protection Board which covers many areas, including assessment of the risk of childhood cancer from exposure to natural background alpha radiation. The work of the board on this topic as described in NRPB R-276 was resourced by this funding.

Embryo Research

Mr. Morely: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for new legislation on embryo research. [19159]

Mr Horam: There are currently no plans for further legislation.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to identify the donors of embryos for research; and if he will make a statement. [19155]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's code of practice requires all licensed centres to keep records in which the source of gametes and embryos is accurately and securely recorded.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for new measures on frozen embryos when the current five-year holding period ends. [19156]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology (Statutory Storage Period for Embryos) Regulations 1996 No. 375 were laid before both Houses on 23 February 1996 and will come into force on 1 May 1996.

Human Fertility and Embryo Authority

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring his Department conducts of the operation of the Human Fertility and Embryo Authority. [19158]

Mr. Horam: Under the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is required to produce an annual report which is laid before Parliament. Between reports there is regular contact between Ministers, departmental officials and the authority. It is Government policy that all non-departmental public bodies should be reviewed after five years in existence. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 367, which announced that a full review by the Department of Health is now in progress.

In Vitro Fertilisation Centres

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how often each registered IVF centre is inspected. [19157]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority inspects all licensed in vitro fertilisation centres annually.

Professions Supplementary to Medicine

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he plans to take to ensure that an adequate number of free placements are available within the national health service for those students in training for professions supplementary to medicine who require such placements for clinical practice during their courses. [19216]

Mr. Horam: Responsibility for negotiating clinical placements rests with education providers. National health service organisations were reminded of their obligation to assist education providers to secure sufficient placements in guidance issued in August 1995. Where charging for placements currently exists, it is being phased out.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which bodies within the national health service will have responsibility after 1 April for fulfilling contract obligations entered into by regional health authorities with educational institutions providing training courses for professions supplementary to medicine; [19212]

(2) which bodies within the national health service will have responsibility after 1 April for providing bursaries for students on courses of training for professions supplementary to medicine. [19213]

Mr. Horam: From 1 April 1996 regional offices of the Department of Health will have responsibility for the contracts with education institutions and for the provision of bursaries for students for the professions allied to medicine.

Health Authority Appointments

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the new health authorities indicating their gender and occupation. [19217]

Mr. Malone: A list of all appointments to national health service authorities and trusts will be published in the summer of 1996. This will include both the gender and occupation of appointees.

Meningitis

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases there have been of meningitis (i) A, (ii) B and (iii) C in each of the last five years (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in each EU country. [19225]

Mr. Horam: In the past five years the numbers of cases of meningococcal infection reported in England and Wales, including cases of meningitis and septicaemia, and due to each group of Neisseria meningitidis are as shown in the table.

Isolates of N meningitidis received at the Public Health Laboratory Service's meningococcal reference laboratory 1990–95, England and Wales

[1] provisional data for 1995.

Data for each European Union country is not routinely collated by the Public Health Laboratory Service and may not, in any case, be comparable between different countries because of different reporting systems and differing access to grouping and typing facilities.

Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which countries in the EU give routine meningitis vaccinations to children. [19226]

Mr. Horam: Eleven of the 15 countries in the European Union give routine Hib vaccine, which protects against cases of meningitis due to Haemophilus influenzae type b infections. Hib vaccine was introduced into the United Kingdom childhood immunisation programme in 1992 and has been a great success. The vaccine has virtually eliminated Hib meningitis in young children.

No countries in the European Union currently give routine vaccination against meningococcal meningitis—that is, cases caused by Neisseria meningitidis.

Public Finance

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the percentage change in each of the last five years of public finance in the NHS capital programme. [19228]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table.

	Hospital and community health services gross capital expenditure (£ million)	Change (Per cent.)
1990–91	1,576	9.1
1991–92	1,659	5.3
1992–93	1,815	9.4
1993–94	1,783	-1.8
1994–95	2,049	14.9

South Manchester University Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received on the accountancy error made in calculating the income of the South Manchester University Hospitals NHS trust; what replies he has made; and if he will make a statement on the effects of the error in terms of (a) bed closures and (b) numbers of people waiting for hospital treatment. [19274]

Mr. Horam: We have received two letters on this subject. The trust has drawn up a recovery plan which involves selective bed closures and estimates that its proposals will add approximately two months to in-patient waiting times for Manchester residents.

Hepatitis B

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual cost of universal vaccination of children against hepatitis B. [19218]

Mr. Horam: At manufacturers' current listed prices, annual vaccine costs for one birth cohort would be in the region of £17 million. The total cost of universal immunisation against hepatitis B will comprise of vaccine costs, the costs of administering the vaccine, and other costs of carrying out the immunisation programme. Costs of administering the vaccine could vary depending on the immunisation programme chosen.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the World Health Organisation's recommendation on hepatitis B vaccination. [19219]

Mr. Horam: Hepatitis B vaccine has been used in this country since 1982 and is currently recommended for those at increased risk of infection. The Department of Health is considering the implications of the World Health Organisation's recommendation for countries such as the United Kingdom, which has one of the lowest prevalence rates of chronic hepatitis B carriers in the world.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the cost-effectiveness of universal hepatitis B vaccinations for children. [19220]

Mr. Horam: The cost-effectiveness of universal hepatitis B vaccination for children is dependent on many factors, including the prevalence of hepatitis B infection in the population, the age at which immunisation is offered, the coverage achieved, vaccine efficiency, changes in the risks of exposure to the virus, the cost of the immunisation programme chosen, and the morbidity and mortality prevented as a result of that programme. The Department has commissioned research to develop a mathematical model of hepatitis B transmission dynamics to assist in this work.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the duration of antibody response in children vaccinated with hepatitis B vaccination. [19221]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has not commissioned research on this subject.

Vaccinations (Cancer Prevention)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship between vaccination and cancer prevention. [19222]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has not commissioned from central funds research into the relationship between vaccines and cancer prevention.

However, the Department of Health, Medical Research Centre, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council and Glaxo/Wellcome—a leading pharmaceutical company—have jointly set up the Edward Jenner Institute for Vaccine Research, with Professor Peter Beverley as its first scientific head.

The overall research strategy of the institute will be "to improve understanding of the immune response and apply that knowledge to the development of new vaccines to prevent diseases resulting from infections and malignancies (cancers)."

Chronic Liver Disease

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new diagnoses of chronic liver disease there have been in each of the last five years. [19223]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available.

Methadone

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were prescribed and how many and what percentage of doctors prescribed methadone in each region, district, family health services authority area and nationally in each of the last five years. [19227]

Mr. Malone: Information is not available in the form requested.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 7 March 1996

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Stephan Adolph Kock

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the sponsors of Mr. Stephan Adolph Kock's application for British nationality granted on 20 March 1969. [18976]

Mr. Kirkhope: No. It is not our practice to disclose such details.

Blackmail

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases arrests for attempted blackmail by serious fraud squad detectives did not lead to charges (a) in 1994 and (b) in 1995. [19356]

Mr. Maclean: I assume the question refers to the Metropolitan police fraud squad. I understand that the figures available to the Metropolitan police do not distinguish arrests by the fraud squad from others and are kept by financial year. Figures for 1994–95 are not available, but so far in financial year 1995–96 there have been three arrests made by the Metropolitan police for attempted blackmail which have not led to charges.

Hong Kong Citizens

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which categories of (a) passport holders and (b) non-passport holders, settled in Hong Kong prior to 1 July 1997, will be able to apply for indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom as dependant relatives; and if he will make a statement. [19473]

Mr. Kirhope: To qualify for indefinite leave to remain as a dependant relative, any person who is subject to immigration control has to meet the requirements of the immigration rules.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what type of British passport ethnic minority people settled in Hong Kong will be eligible to apply; what rights such passports will confer on their holders; and if he will make a statement explaining the arrangements for passport applications. [19475]

Mr. Kirkhope: The ethnic minorities are eligible for the types of British passport which correspond to the citizenship they hold. Those who are successful in British nationality selection are entitled to British citizenship passports with right of abode in the United Kingdom. The majority will be entitled to a British dependent territories citizen—BDTC—passport or its successor, the British national (overseas)—BN(O)—passport. Any BDTC who would otherwise be stateless on 1 July 1997 will automatically become a British overseas citizen—BOC. BDTCs, BN(O)s and BOCs all enjoy visa-free travel to the United Kingdom, an entitlement to registration as a British citizen following settlement and five years' residence here, and British consular protection in appropriate circumstances. Applications in Hong Kong for British passports can be made to the Hong Kong immigration department.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) war service and (b) other widows settled in Hong Kong are entitled to British passports; and if he will make a statement. [19472]

Mr. Kirkhope: I understand that, of the 23 widows of men who served in the defence of Hong Kong during the second world war who are resident in Hong Kong 18 are British dependent territories citizens or British nationals (overseas) and are therefore eligible for appropriate British passports. The number of other widows in Hong Kong who are eligible for British passports is not known. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced during his recent visit to Hong Kong that the Government would facilitate a private Member's Bill to give British citizenship to the wives and widows of ex-service men who served in the defence of Hong Kong during the second world war.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement explaining who in Hong Kong will be eligible to visa-free access to the United Kingdom from Hong Kong after 1 July 1997; what endorsement will be made to their passports before they leave Hong Kong; what will be the procedures for obtaining such endorsement; and what period of leave to enter the United Kingdom will such passport holders be granted on entry to the United Kingdom. [19474]

Mr. Kirkhope: Holders of British national (overseas) or Hong Kong (special administrative region) passports after 1 July 1997 will not require a visa to travel to the United Kingdom for a short visit. They will not require specific entry clearance endorsed in their passports except for those purposes for which, under the immigration rules, entry clearance is mandatory. They will, however, need to satisfy the immigration officer at the port of entry that they meet the requirements of the immigration rules. They will be granted leave to enter appropriate to the purpose of their visit.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) heads of households and (b) their dependants in Hong Kong have, to date, been issued with British passports; what was the total number of British passports which Her Majesty's Government announced would be issued; what plans he has to issue more British passports to heads of household and dependants; and if he will make a statement. [19476]

Mr. Kirkhope: As at 29 February 1996, 48,610 principal beneficiaries and 80,866 dependants had been registered as British citizens under the selection scheme. On Second Reading of the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Bill, the then Home Secretary estimated as 225,000 people. The selection scheme is, however, constructed on the basis of principal beneficiaries and the Act limits them to 50,000; there is no discretion to vary that number. It is the family size of the principal beneficiaries that will determine the total number of beneficiaries, not estimates made in 1990. The Government have no plans to introduce further legislation to amend the scheme.

"the absolute maximum number of people who might benefit"

Crime Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the (a) crime clear-up and (b) the conviction rates for each police authority area in each of the last five years. [18958]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested on clear-up rates is published in table 2.11 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1994", a copy of which is available in the Library. Information on conviction rates by police force area is given in the table.

Citizenship Applications

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to revise the fee levels for citizenship applications. [20162]

Mr. Kirkhope: Citizenship fees were last changed in March 1991 and some changes are necessary in order to meet the Government's policy of recovering no more than the cost of processing citizenship applications. New British Nationality (Fees) Regulations 1996 are being laid before Parliament today to introduce the following fee levels with effect from 1 April 1996:

	Present fees £	New fees £
Registration (Adult or minor)	85	120
Naturalisation on grounds of marriage to a British citizen	135	120
All other naturalisations	170	150

The fees for applications for naturalisation, which represent about 75 per cent. of all applications, have been reduced significantly. At the same time, the opportunity has been taken to remove the element of cross-subsidisation between applications for registration and naturalisation which has come to light since fee levels were last revised. This has led to an increase in the fee for applicants for registration.

The existing arrangements for joint applicants will be unchanged: husbands and wives applying together for naturalisation will continue to pay one single fee, as will minor children of the same parent applying together for registration.

The practice of returning a nominal amount where an application is subsequently withdrawn or refused has been reviewed. It has become apparent that the difference in the cost of successful and unsuccessful applications is negligible. Unsuccessful applicants who apply on or after 1 April 1996 will therefore pay the full cost of processing their applications and will not receive a refund.

The new regulations will also increase the fees payable to the Home Office for renouncing citizenship and for supplying copy certificates and other documents from £15 to £20. The fee for administering the oath of allegiance which is payable to the person administering the oath will be increased from £3.50 to £5 in order to bring it into line with fees for analogous work under the Commissioners for Oaths (Fees) Order 1993.

It is expected that the revised fee levels will provide sufficient income to meet the costs of processing applications over the period April 1996 to April 1997.

Employment Law

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been of employers for employing persons with no entitlement to work in the United Kingdom in each year from 1988 until 1994. [18238]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 February 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 13 December 1995, Official Report, column 661.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the review of the legal framework governing accountability and propriety in public bodies and the arrangements for their external audit, undertaken in response to recommendations in the first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [20036]

Mr. Freeman: The Government have published a consultation paper, "Spending Public Money: Governance and Audit Issues", Cm 3179, which has been laid in both Houses. The paper covers executive non-departmental public bodies, NHS bodies and local government and, as regards audit arrangements, what the Nolan committee has called local public spending bodies. Comments have been invited to a 14 June deadline.

The proposals on personal accountability include a more consistent way of handling conflicts of interest on the part of board members. Codes of conduct are planned for staff of executive NDPBs and NHS bodies. NDPB and NHS board members will be protected from the costs of personal civil liability on certain conditions. The proposals make it clear that executive NDPB accounting officers, working under their boards, are responsible for propriety in a broad sense, as Nolan recommended. The Government are not persuaded that provisions similar to surcharging in local government should be extended into areas where other sanctions, including the power of dismissal, are available. Further guidance is being provided on openness, taking account of the Nolan committee's standard of best practice as appropriate. Executive NDPBs should make records of decisions available wherever possible, and should publish reports containing at least a summary of their accounts. The Comptroller and Auditor General is encouraged to develop systematic work on comparative performance.

External audit arrangements should support lines of accountability and include an emphasis on regularity and value for money. There should be an element independent of the audited body involved in setting standards, defining audit practice and laying down reporting requirements. Duplication should be avoided. Reports should be addressed outside the audited body on major issues arising from the audit. The Government will ensure that the Comptroller and Auditor General has inspection rights over all executive NDPBs which he does not audit. He has a key role where Parliament has established Ministers' accountability through legislation; elsewhere, other arrangements are likely to provide better support of accountability. The Government accept the Nolan committee's recommendation that the Audit Commission should be able at its own discretion to publish public interest reports on NHS bodies.

Funding bodies should ensure that bodies receiving grants have adequate financial control arrangements. Education and housing funding bodies should as a matter of good practice require external auditors of bodies which they fund to report to them immediately if they find serious financial weakness or irregularity. They should consider ways in which they can draw on the expertise of the national audit agencies on audit arrangements and value-for-money work.

The paper proposes that the audit agencies, acting together, should commission an independent review of the interface between them. The paper gives examples of cases where public bodies audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General should ensure that he has appropriate access to contractors' records. He is invited to consider letting private sector firms compete with NAO audit staff to undertake certain audits, without affecting his statutory position as auditor.

The Government intend to consult further on the most suitable arrangements for the external audit of local authorities and health bodies in Northern Ireland.

The differences between sectors mean that imposing a single, uniform structure would require large-scale changes in their relationships with Parliament, requiring major legislation. The Government believe that the best way forward is to build on, and spread, good practice.

ENVIRONMENT

Wetlands

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his proposals to protect wetlands; if these proposals will include riparian zone protection; and how they will affect agriculture and rural communities. [18603]

Mr. Clappison: As a leading supporter of the Ramsar convention on wetlands of international importance the United Kingdom is committed to protecting wetlands and promoting their wise use. There are numerous mechanisms and initiatives in place to protect UK wetlands, in particular Ramsar listing and the classification of special protection areas under the birds directive, which includes river floodplains and water meadows. The development of catchment management plans and estuary management plans are among other initiatives under way. In addition, the Government intend to propose certain rivers as special areas of conservation under the habitats directive. All these initiatives are pursued in co-operation with landowners and other interested parties.

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19035]

Sir Paul Beresford: Details of non-information technology and information technology thefts for the Department for the 1994–95 and 1995–96, to date, financial years, including details of thefts over £25,000, are given in the table. However, the remainder of the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	1994–95		1995–96 (to end February)
	Number	Value	Number	Value
Non-IT Thefts
DOE	4	£1,847	4	£868
IT Thefts
DOE	24	£40,636	11	£44,417

IT Thefts with a Value of Over £5000

1994–95—DOE

(a) £25,000—Theft of computer components from 43 machines in the Government Office East Midlands and the Highways Agency.

1995–96—DOE

(a) £24,000—Theft of computer components from 2 Marsham Street.

1995–96—PH

(a) £17,037—Theft of computer components from St. Christopher House.

Castle Cement

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will use his powers under section 12(5) of the Environmental Protection act 1990 to instruct Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to revoke the authorisation granted to Castle Cement to burn secondary liquid fuel at its Clitheroe cement works. [18930]

Mr. Clappison: No case has been made to the Secretary of State as to why he should do this.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of (a) the loss to business and (b) the number of redundancies from the reduction in funding to the home energy efficiency scheme. [19265]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The changes to the home energy efficiency scheme will create opportunities for businesses involved in it. Householders aged over 60 who are not on benefit will be entitled to a substantial discount. There is no reason why the number of installations should not be the same as in the previous year if installers market the scheme properly.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation she held with businesses before the decision to reduce Government funding for the home energy efficiency scheme. [19266]

Mr. Jones: Public expenditure decisions are not discussed before the Chancellor's Budget statement to the House.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the level of Government funding of the home energy efficiency scheme in each year since its starting date; and if he will give the figures for 1996–97 and 1997–98, in real terms and as a percentage change from the previous year. [19267]

Mr. Jones: The information requested is as follows. The figures show that funding for the home energy efficiency scheme for the next financial year will be 280 per cent. more than in 1991–92, its first full year of operation. This increase can be matched by few if any other programmes.

Year	Expenditure (£ million)	Percentage change
1990–91[1]	1	n/a
1991–92	26	n/a
1992–93	34	+31
1993–94	42	+24
1994–95	83	+98
1995–96	[2]106	+28
1996–97	[3]73	–31
1997–98	[4]75	+3

[1] From 1 January.
[2] Estimated.
[3] Allocated.
[4] Planned.

Taking 1995–96 as the base year, and taking inflation as 3 per cent., the allocation for 1996–97 and the planned allocation for 1997–98 are equivalent in real terms to £71 million.

Colney Hospital, Norfolk

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to call in the planning application for a new hospital at Colney, South Norfolk. [18381]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 22 February, Official Report, column 279. As the adopted local plan makes specific provision for such a development, it is unlikely that the Secretary of State would wish to intervene.

Thoresby Colliery (Fatal Accident)

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the director general of the Health and Safety Executive about the fatal accident at Thoresby colliery, Nottinghamshire, on Monday 4 March; and if he will make a statement. [19517]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. The Health and Safety Executive is conducting a full investigation into the accident.

Council Tax Relief (Wandsworth)

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total sum, (b) the amount paid to the London borough of Wandsworth, (c) the percentage of the total paid to the London borough of Wandsworth and (d) the amount paid per dwelling in the London borough of Wandsworth, in traditional relief in respect of the council tax in each year from 1993–94 to 1995–96. [19494]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Total amount of transitional relief in England:

1993–94: £378,652,826

1995–96: £27,178,179[1]

(b) Amount of transitional relief paid to London Borough of Wandsworth:

1993–94: £35,984,443

1995–96: £10,100,635[1]

(c) Percentage of total amount of transitional relief paid to London Borough of Wandsworth:

1993–94: 9.5 per cent.

1994–95: 21.2 per cent.

1995–96: 37 per cent.[1]

(d) Average amount paid per chargeable dwelling in London Borough of Wandsworth:

1993–94: £323.75

1995–96: £89.31

These figures are averages. The actual amount of transitional relief varied according to a household's council tax banding, its composition and its previous liability for community charge.

[1] Information for 1995–96 is provisional and is subject to final grant claims to be made during 1996–97.

TRANSPORT

Central Railway

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Central Railway plc has applied to him for directions under rule 12 of the Transport and Works (Applications and Objections Procedure) Rules granting waivers from compliance with certain application requirements in respect of the Central Railway project. [20250]

Mr. Watts: Yes. Copies of the applications for rule 12 waiver directions, and of the supporting documentation provided by Central Railway plc, have been placed in the House of Commons Library. Members wishing to make representations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State concerning his decision whether to agree to issue any such directions should write to him by Friday 22 March.

HGV Drivers (Eyesight Tests)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has received from lorry drivers' representatives as to the (a) numbers and (b) proportion of HGV drivers who will be barred from driving as a result of changes to eye tests from 1 July. [19570]

Mr. Norris: I have recently received suggestions that very large numbers of drivers of large goods and passenger-carrying vehicles will lose their entitlement to drive these vehicles as a result of changes to regulations on eyesight standards. No supporting evidence for such estimates has been provided and in some cases they are clearly based on a misunderstanding of the scope of the changes. The 1994 consultation document on the changes included an estimate, based on analysis of Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency records, that about 3,000 drivers would be affected by the proposed changes. This estimate was not challenged in the responses to consultation.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with HGV drivers' representatives concerning changes in eyesight tests. [19569]

Mr. Norris: The consultation document on the proposed changes to the regulations on eyesight requirements issued in October 1994 was sent to a wide range of organisations, including representatives of HGV drivers. None requested discussions at the time.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when new European regulations changing eyesight regulations for HGV drivers were agreed; how the United Kingdom representative voted; and what immediate publicity was undertaken. [19516]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom voted, in 1991, for adoption of the second EC directive on driving licences, 91/439/EEC, which sets minimum standards for health, driving test and licensing requirements across the EU to underpin road safety and in the interests of free movement of nationals of the member states. The Department subsequently, in October 1994, undertook an extensive consultation specifically on changes to the regulations on eyesight standards. A press notice was issued then as well as last October, when I announced the Government's decision.

Emergency Towing Study Team Report

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 28 February, Official Report, column 581, what amendments he has made to the report of the emergency towing study team as originally delivered to him: and if he will make a statement. [18900]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The report is an internal document, but it will be published and placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The report was amended to remove commercially sensitive information which was provided to the study team in confidence, and material which was outside the terms of reference of the study.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what evidence has been submitted to him since the start of construction of the Newbury bypass on new environmental damage; and if he will make a statement; [19065]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the Newbury bypass since construction began; and if he will publish them with his response; [19066]

(3) what estimates he has made of the effect of completion of the Newbury bypass on (a) volumes of traffic on the A34, (b) volumes of traffic in Newbury itself and (c) journey times of traffic travelling (i) through Newbury and (ii) along the bypass; [19111]

(4) what has been the cost of (a) police and (b) security at the site of the proposed Newbury bypass since October 1995; and if he will make a statement. [19072]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 5 March 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 7 March 1996:

As you know, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the Newbury Bypass.

The cost of security for the advance works contract incurred so far is £1,182,000. The cost of Policing the work is a matter for the Thames Valley Police force.

You ask for details of the effect of the Bypass on traffic flows on the A34, and on the rest of Newbury. On the A34 itself, the bypass provides substantial relief by allowing longer distance through traffic to avoid the town. The table below shows the benefits the bypass would bring to the A34 Inner Relief Road on which traffic flows would be reduced by about 40%. The figures for the residual local traffic remaining on the A34 after the bypass is open do not allow for the potential additional benefits to be provided by local traffic management measures.

	Without bypass		With bypass
Year	Low growth	High growth	Low growth	High growth
2000	57,000	63,000	35,000	39,000
2005	61,000	70,000	38,000	43,000
2010	65,000	78,000	40,000	48,000

Note:
The flows given are Annual Average Daily Traffic for low and high growth.

There would be greater benefits to other sections of the A34 bypassed by the scheme, for example traffic along Tothill Straight will be reduced by up to 75%.

In addition to the general relief provided by the bypass there would be particular benefits from the substantial reductions (typically 65-70%) in heavy lorry traffic (estimated at up to 400 an hour at peak times) using the A34 through the town.

Traffic flows on other major routes through the town would also be affected by the bypass. The change in traffic patterns will of course depend on what traffic management measures are brought forward. For example, on the A343 substantial flow reductions of about 30% are forecast. There would be some increases on routes feeding the bypass, for example flows on the A4 on the west side of the town would increase slightly by up to 5%. However, in overall terms the net effect of the bypass would be to remove substantial volumes of traffic, particularly heavy lorry lorries, from the town.

As part of the traffic appraisal for Newbury Bypass, we have assessed the journey times of traffic travelling through Newbury and on the proposed bypass. The savings in travelling time have also been assessed as part of the economic evaluation of the scheme.

For through traffic using the bypass instead of the existing A34, COBA shows average peak period time savings of 15 minutes when the scheme opens. Currently, at the worst times, delays can be up to and over one hour. In the longer term, the savings would be significantly greater since congestion on the existing road would become much worse without the bypass. A major benefit to industrial and business road users will be the much improved journey time reliability provided by the bypass.

Since site clearance operations began, we have received about 700 written representations against the scheme, mostly from outside the area, and a small number from supporters. We have previously received nearly 20,000 expressions of support for the bypass. It would be inappropriate to publish these letters without the consent of the writers which could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The reply to the recent representations against the scheme has been broadly along the lines of the draft attached.

No evidence of new environmental damage has been submitted although it has been suggested that the Desmoulins' Whorl Snail, a non-priority annex II species in the Habitats Directive, may be present on the route. It has been established that these snails are present elsewhere in the Kennet and Lambourn valleys. We are liaising with English Nature and carrying out further surveys to determine whether the snails are in the area affected by the bypass and if so, what further mitigation measures are necessary.

Aviation Research

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the research projects sponsored by his Deapartment relating to aviation over the last five years. [19084]

Mr. Norris: The research projects relating to aviation undertaken over the last five years in which the Department of Transport has had a financial involvement are as follows:

Safety

Explosion Hazard Research

Signature Identification of Pressure Pulse Research

Helicopter Safety Research

Crash Impact Research

Environmental

Aeronox

Aerotrace

Polinat

Ground Emissions Study

Field Study into Aircraft Noise and Sleep Disturbance

Measurement and Modelling of Helicopter Noise

Social Survey Study of Attitudes to Helicopter Noise

Research into Helicopter Noise Characteristics and Future Trends

Review of Departure Noise Limits at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports

Studies into Ground Noise at Night at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports and Arrival Noise at the same airports

Transport Security

Twenty-five research projects are being or have been carried out in the area of transport security, although not all are exclusive in the aviation field.

Sea Empress

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests for assistance have been received by his office in respect of clear-up operations following the Sea Empress disaster. [18356]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 1 March 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 7 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about clear-up operations following the 'Sea Empress' disaster.

No requests for assistance from bodies outside of the Joint Response Centre have been received by the Marine Pollution Control Unit.

Aircraft (Landing Slots)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each major UK airport the number of aircraft taking off without take-off slots, together with the airline name and country of registration for each of the last five years; [19081]

(2) if he will list by each major airport the number of aircraft which arrived without landing slots together with the airline name and country of registration for each of the last five years. [19080]

Mr. Norris: No records are kept for UK airports of the extent of unscheduled take-offs or landings, that is, for which no slot has been obtained in advance. However, an assessment for Heathrow during June 1995 found an average of five unscheduled departures each weekday, in addition to opportunity slots obtained by business and general aviation. Most of the unscheduled movements operated by commercial airlines are maintenance, positioning or testing flights; only a minority, such as diversions from other airports, are passenger carrying.

Gatwick Airport

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many take-off and landing slots are currently occupied by domestic and short-haul services at Gatwick airport. [18662]

Mr. Norris: For the current winter season 64,599 slots at Gatwick airport are at present occupied by services to or from domestic or short-haul destinations.

EU Directives

Sir Richard Body: To as the Secretary of State for Transport how many Community directives were introduced by him to United Kingdom law in 1995. [18293]

Mr. Watts: During 1995, the Secretary of State for Transport introduced 13 statutory instruments, the purpose of which was to implement EC legislation into UK law.

Aircraft (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the countries from which aircraft are banned by the Federal Aviation Authority from flying into the United States of America and the equivalent Civil Aviation Authority list; [18669]

(2) if he will list by country the number of inspections undertaken by the Civil Aviation Authority on aircraft flying into the United Kingdom; [18670]

(3) if he will list the countries identified as having safety oversight procedure problems by the US Federal Aviation Authority; and how many aircraft registered by those countries entered the UK in each of the last five years; [19079]

(4) how many inspections were undertaken on foreign registered aircraft within the UK and the country of registration in the last five years; and if he will list the defects found during those inspections. [19083]

Mr. Norris: Before granting permission for a non-European Economic Area aircraft to fly to the United Kingdom, we seek confirmation that the aircraft will be operated in accordance with international safety standards established by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. This confirmation is normally in the form of certificates issued by the aviation authorities of the state of registration of the aircraft, stating that the aircraft will be operated in accordance with ICAO safety standards. If there is any doubt about the safe operation of an aircraft, no permit will be issued until we are satisfied about its safety. This may involve asking the Civil Aviation Authority to conduct a physical check of the aircraft concerned.

Since 1993, we have instructed the CAA to carry out checks of aircraft from the following countries:

Country	Number of checks
Bulgaria	1
Ghana	2
Nigeria	1
Russia	5
Sweden	2
Tajikstan	1
Turkey	1
Venezuela	1
Yugoslavia	1

In addition, the CAA carries out inspections, without instruction from the Department, on any aircraft that it has reason to believe may be unsafe to fly.

A list of deficiencies uncovered by the physical checks is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to issue a further White Paper on airport policy; and if he will make a statement. [18291]

Mr. Norris: We have no plans to issue a new White Paper on airports policy.

BR Vendor Unit

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the sales completed by the BR vendor unit, with the name of purchaser and price paid in each case. [16228]

Mr. Watts [pursuant to his answer, 22 February 1996, c. 274]: The sales completed by the British Rail Board are listed. Those where the BR vendor unit has been involved are marked with an asterisk.

Gross proceeds from the sales to date of businesses sold by BR amount to some £304 million. As explained in the Government's response of 14 December 1995 to the Transport Select Committee fourth report, on railway finances, it would be contrary to the commercial interests of British Rail and the Government to publish details of individual sales at this stage, as that may prejudice similar sales still in progress. Details of individual sales completed will be made public in due course.

In addition to that figure, the sale of the rolling stock leasing companies, which was handled by my Department, realised £1,822.23 million.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what incidents have been reported at (a) Congleton, (b) Wilmslow, (c) Litchfield and (d) Tamworth over the last 30 years of passengers alighting from a train short of the platform. [19247]

Mr. Watts: The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate has no record since 1984 of any reportable major incidents concerning passengers alighting from trains short of the platforms, at the locations specified. Records before 1984 are no longer available.

Railways (Short Platforms)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those railway stations where platforms are shorter than the length of trains stopping at that platform. [19246]

Mr. Watts: This matter is for the train operating companies concerned. I suggest that the hon. Member seeks this information direct from them.

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department which are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. [16021]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is as follows: (a) the Crofters' Commission, new town development corporations, Red Deer Commission, Scottish Arts Council, Scottish Homes, Scottish Legal Aid Board, Scottish Medical Practices Committee, Scottish Natural Heritage, Scottish Sports Council, Scottish tourist board; (b) none, as the Audit Commission does not operate in Scotland. The Accounts Commission for Scotland scrutinises the accounts of the seven Scottish river purification boards; (c) this information is listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1995", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House; (d) none, although all executive NDPBs are expected to comply with all reasonable requests for information from Parliament, users of services and individual citizens; (e) performance indicators are part of the management statement or corporate plan for each NDPB; (f) the citizens charter applies to all public services, including NDPBs. NDPBs serving the public, including those sponsored by my Department, are therefore expected to meet the charter standards.

National Continence Day

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what support he is offering for National Continence Day on 19 March, and what plans he has to improve the incontinence service in Scotland in 1996–97. [16806]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 February 1996]: The Scottish Office is providing funding for the expansion of a telephone helpline facility at the continence resource centre, Southern general hospital NHS trust, Glasgow, for a four-week period including National Continence Day on 19 March. Leaflets and posters advertising the helpline and encouraging sufferers to seek help have been distributed widely, advertisements will be placed in the local press, and a number of events are being organised across the country by local health service professionals, including continence advisers. In addition, we are working with health boards to encourage them to pursue improvements in incontinence services locally.

Landfill Tax

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the effects the new landfill tax will have on the value of brown-field land; and if he will make a statement. [18278]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received several representations regarding the possible effect of the landfill tax on remediation schemes for contaminated sites. My right hon. Friend the Paymaster-General has agreed to consider the feasibility of an exemption for waste resulting from the restoration of historically contaminated land.

Holyroodhouse

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who currently holds the position of deputy keeper of the palace of Holyroodhouse and the baille and clerk of the Abbey court; what accommodation within the palace is available to them; and what is the cost to public funds. [17898]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The position of deputy keeper of the palace of Holyroodhouse is currently held by Lord James Douglas-Hamilton. The position of baille and clerk of the Abbey court is currently held by Mr. Patrick Cadell. No accommodation is provided for them within the palace, they are unpaid and there is no cost to public funds arising from their appointments.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 February, Official Report, column 288, if he will give details of the accommodation available to the hereditary keeper; what services are provided to him; what duties are undertaken by him; and what is the total cost to public funds arising from the office of hereditary keeper. [17976]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The accommodation available to the hereditary keeper comprises three reception rooms, two bedrooms and an office. Unless he is occupying the accommodation is connection with his ceremonial duties, the hereditary keeper is required to meet the costs of all services such as heating, lighting and water incurred during periods of occupation. The present hereditary keeper hardly ever occupies the accommodation, which is available for use by the royal household whenever required.

The duties of the hereditary keeper are entirely ceremonial. He receives the Queen and the Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland when they visit the palace. There are no costs to public funds arising from the office of hereditary keeper.

Social Housing Rents

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current average gross weekly rent for (a) council rented accommodation and (b) housing association rented accommodation in Scotland; and what were the figures in 1991. [19166]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 6 March 1996]: The average unrebated weekly rent for local authority accommodation in Scotland in 1995–96 is estimated to be £28.78. The most recent available information on housing association rented accommodation relates to 1994–95, when the average weekly rent was £29.13. The average local authority rent in 1991–92 was £23.12. Figures for housing association rent in 1991–92 on a comparable basis are not available.

Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if grants made to Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich can be spent within the United Kingdom but outside Scotland; [19118]

(2) what audits have been conducted in respect of grants made to, and other public expenditure provided for, the work of Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich in the past three years; [19119]

(3) what inspections have been conducted of community nurseries promoted or provided by Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich in the past three years; [19120]

(4) what is his Department's responsibility for the grant funding or inspection of the London-based Gaelic medium community nurseries provided by Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich; [19121]

(5) what (a) public funds and (b) grants are made available to Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich. [19122]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Office grants totalling £61,200 in 1995–96 are made to support the administrative costs associated with Comhairle nan Sgoiltean Araich—the Gaelic Pre-School Council—work in developing Gaelic pre-school groups in Scotland. None of our grants, which are closely monitored and audited annually, are spent outside Scotland. Information on the levels of funding for the individual pre-school groups provided by Government agencies, local authorities, companies, trusts, voluntary organisations, individuals and by the pre-school groups themselves is not held centrally.

The Children Act 1989 empowers local authorities to inspect nursery and day care premises registered under section 71 of the Act. Authorities must exercise that power at least once every year. Registered community nurseries should, therefore, be inspected at least annually. Information about inspections of particular nurseries is not centrally available.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for transfer to prisons in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Republic of Ireland were made by Irish prisoners in each of the past 10 years; and how many were successful. [18071]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the information which the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service gave to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) in his letter dated Wednesday 28 February 1996, Official Report, column 619.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 7 March. [17989]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 7 March. [17990]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Far East (Visit)

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent visit to the far east. [20056]

The Prime Minister: I attended the inaugural Asia-Europe summit meeting in Bangkok on 29 February to 2 March together with my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office. This summit, for the first time, brought together the leaders of Thailand, Brunei, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, the Philippines, Vietnam, Japan, South Korea, China, the 15 member states of the European Union and the President of the European Commission. I warmly welcomed the opportunity it offered to reinforce the relations between Europe and East Asia, politically and economically two of the world's three most important regions.

The informal discussions covered a wide range of political and economic issues. The participants agreed on the need to deepen the political dialogue between Asia and Europe, to increase co-operation over arms control, human resource development, environmental protection and the fight against poverty, drugs terrorism and other international crime.

On economic matters, there was common ground over the benefits of strengthening trade and investment flows between Asia and Europe in both direction. The meeting agreed to work for the further liberalisation of trade and for the success of the World Trade Organisation. It also recognised that intensified exchanges of science and technology, especially in sectors such as agriculture, information and technology, energy and transport, were important for extending the economic links between the two regions. Finally, there was agreement on the value of closer people-to-people contacts, especially among younger generations.

The meeting set in hand an ambitious programme of follow-up work, including preparations for the first ministerial meeting of the World Trade Organisation in Singapore in December, work on improving conditions for the flow of investment between the two regions, the establishment of a business forum and promotion of reform of the United Nations including the EU initiative on financial reform.

The meeting accepted the United Kingdom's offer to host the second summit which will be held during our presidency of the EU in the first half of 1998. This is a clear signal of our commitment to developing relations with Asia and our determination to play a leading role in the evolving relationship between the two regions.

Hong Kong

During my visit to Hong Kong between 2 and 4 March, I had the opportunity to hear the concerns of a wide range of the Hong Kong community about their future. I was able to reassure them that:

(i) Britain has a long-term commitment to Hong Kong which will last well beyond the transfer of sovereignty on 1 July 1997;

(ii) in the event of a breach of the Sino-British joint declaration, we would pursue every avenue open to us and mobilise the international community;

(iii) holders of the Hong Kong special administrative region passport would not be required to obtain visas for visits to Britain after 30 June 1997;

(iv) we would guarantee admission to Britain for any member of the non-Chinese ethnic minority community with solely British nationality who came under pressure to leave Hong Kong after the transfer of sovereignty; and

(v) we would support a private Member's Bill to grant British citizenship to the wives and widows of the ex-service men from Hong Kong who fought for Britain in the war.

I also had the opportunity to visit several parts of the territory, including the new airport and the extension to the convention and exhibition centre, where development is being pursued to ensure Hong Kong's continuing success.

Korea

Korea is an important trading partner: our exports increased by 44 per cent. in 1995 to more than £1.5 billion, and we have attracted more than 40 per cent. of all Korean inward investment in Europe. The prospects for further growth in these areas are good.

I had a meeting with President Kim Young Sam, our third in 12 months, at which we discussed ways to increase the co-operation between our countries, particularly in trade and investment. I also met the leaders of the major Korean conglomerates. I encouraged them to consider further inward investment here by assuring them of the major benefits of doing so. During my visit, three new Korean investments worth £2.5 million were announced, bringing the number of Korean companies in the UK to 19. Four contracts were signed by British companies for joint ventures valued at £90 million, including a co-operation agreement between British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. and Hanjung for the building of spent fuel storage casks in a market expected to grow from £35 million to £2 billion.

Princess of Wales

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions or communications Her Majesty's Government have had since the beginning of the current year with the Governments of those other Commonwealth countries whose Head of State is Her Majesty the Queen, about the constitutional future and status of Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. [18883]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: None.

Duchy of Cornwall (Profits)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if the income and profits of the Duchy of Cornwall are private and personal to the Prince of Wales. [18886]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The capital assets of the Duchy of Cornwall are inalienable, and the income from capital disposals must be reinvested in new capital assets. The Prince of Wales is personally entitled to the net income from the revenue account of the Duchy of Cornwall, from which he meets both public and private expenditure for himself, the Princess and their family.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister at what time or stage on 28 February he was advised that Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was issuing a statement announcing her intention to divorce His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. [18882]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I was informed of the statement after it was issued.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what provisions exist for the Princess of Wales to renounce the rank and the title of Her Royal Highness. [18881]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The use of the style lies ultimately in the Queen's gift, although the wishes of the princess would be taken into consideration.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what future funding arrangements from public funds are being made to facilitate HRH the Princess of Wales continuing her public duties subsequent to divorce. [18877]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: Matters relating to the divorce of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the princess's future role are under discussion.

Civil Servants (Conduct)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if it is his policy that civil servants criticised in the Scott report shall be disciplined. [19282]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 6 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, on 6 March, Official Report, column 252.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the EU directives which have been gold plated when transcribed into United Kingdom law in the past five years. [18640]

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy is not to add unnecessary burdens on business when implementing EC directives in the UK. Departments keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy.

"Questions of Procedure for Ministers"

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to issue a revised version of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". [18622]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I will revise and reissue "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" as and when appropriate.

Civil Servants (Company Directors)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister which serving civil servants in his Department are presently directors of companies; and if he will indicate for each (a) the name of the company concerned and (b) if annual remuneration was (i) £1 to £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000 and (c) above £10,000. [18146]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 March 1996]: For these purposes, my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 6 March, Official Report, columns 250–51.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were, in each of the last five years (a) the total losses of fundholders, (b) the total savings and (c) the total net savings. [17935]

Mr. Malone: Information about fundholder efficiency savings and budget overspends is shown in the table. Figures for 1994–95 are not yet available.

Year	Efficiency savings: £ million	Efficiency savings: Per cent. of budgets set	Budget overspends: £ million	Budget overspends: Per cent. of budgets set

Source: Regional offices.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made in each year of the net worth of general practitioners fundholders' assets. [19499]

Mr. Malone: None. All general practitioners, whether fundholding or not, are independent contractors to the national health service. Information is not therefore available about their assets.

"Patients not Paper"

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many, and which, health service bodies have so far identified board level members with responsibility for implementing the recommendations of "Patients not Paper"; and what progress has been reported by them. [18795]

Mr. Malone: Each family health services authority in England and Wales has appointed a board level person responsible for implementing the recommendations of "Patients not Paper". In addition, all eight regional offices have appointed a lead individual responsible for co-ordinating the implementation of "Patients not Paper" throughout their region. Good progress towards introducing the recommendations on schedule has been reported from all regions. The key date for introduction of new forms is 1 July 1996.

NHS Medical Staff

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time NHS medical staff in (i) 1993, (ii) 1994 and (iii) 1995. [18803]

Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Continuing Care

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons salaries are not paid to chairmen of continuing health care review panels. [18821]

Mr. Bowis: It is not normal practice to pay salaries for appointments of this kind, but chairmen are entitled to receive reasonable expenses.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many, and which, health authorities are intending to use the Barthel index to determine eligibility for NHS continuing in-patient care from April 1996; and what score on the index is being used as the basis for eligibility in respect of each one. [19807]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally; health authority policies and eligibility criteria are currently in the process of being finalised for operation from 1 April.

Tomlinson Report

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons his Department did not implement the recommendation contained in paragraph 42 of the Tomlinson report. [18937]

Mr. Malone: After consultation with the profession, we introduced a package of work force flexibilities in the London initiative zone in September 1995. Together with premises' flexibilities and their general medical services cash-limited allocations, this will enable health authorities and the profession locally to work together to improve services for patients.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospitals in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Leeds are paying private sector hospitals to treat NHS patients; if he will list the hospitals; and what are the costs involved. [18962]

NHS Audits

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will hold centrally information on the proportion of NHS audit activity devoted to probity audits; and if he will make a statement. [19347]

Mr. Horam: No. The examination of probity forms one part of the work carried out by internal and external auditors, and cannot readily be quantified.

Whittington Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 13 February, Official Report, column 798, what is the current average time that patients have to wait before being seen when attending the accident and emergency department at the Whittington Hospital NHS trust. [19609]

Mr. Malone: At present, 95 per cent. of patients are seen within five minutes for triage assessment. The average waiting time to see a doctor in January 1996 was 65 minutes. Approximately 45 per cent. of patients were seen by a doctor within 30 minutes, 58 per cent. within 60 minutes, 78 per cent. within 120 minutes and 90 per cent. within 180 minutes. Children and patients needing urgent treatment are always given priority.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the Licensing Authority expects to receive further data on myocardial infarction and third generation oral contraceptives; [19189]

(2) whether data on myocardial infarction risk from third generation oral contraceptives were made available to members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October 1995; and from which studies that data were derived; [19186]

(3) if he will publish the odds ratios relating to myocardial infarction and third generation oral contraceptives which were made available from the World Health Organisation and Spitzer studies to the Medicines Control Agency prior to the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October 1995. [19187]

Mr. Malone: Preliminary data on myocardial infarction from the World Health Organisation case control study were made available to the Committee on Safety on Medicines on 13 October 1995. These data remain unpublished and were provided to the Medicines Control Agency in confidence. Limited data on myocardial infarction from the general practice research database were also available to the committee. Further data from the GPRD study and the findings of the transnational study have since become available, and have been published in the medical literature. Further epidemiological data on myocardial infarction are expected, but the time frame for their availability is currently unclear.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial contribution the Licensing Authority made to the costs of distributing the letter dated 26 October 1995 from the Family Planning Association which contained advice on the prescribing of combined oral contraceptives. [19188]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency covered the costs of printing and distribution of the letter to relevant health professionals.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legal proceedings have been instituted against (a) the Licensing Authority, (b) the Medicines Control Agency, (c) Medicines Control Agency staff and (d) the Committee on Safety of Medicines in connection with the recent advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on third generation oral contraceptives. Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor the effects on public health of the dissemination of the advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines relating to third generation oral contraceptives. [19185]

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department made of the arithmetical accuracy of the tables made available by Professor Spitzer on 9 October 1995. [19191]

Mr. Malone: The tables provided by Professor Spitzer were assessed by experts on the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what safeguards are in place to ensure that the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines is independent. [19190]

Mr. Malone: The Committee on Safety of Medicines is an independent body of drug safety experts. Following consultation with appropriate organisations and on the recommendation of the Medicines Commission, its members are appointed by the United Kingdom Health Ministers—the Licensing Authority.

Members do not represent organisations, but contribute by their individual expertise and judgment to the advice given by the committee to the licensing authority. In addition, members are required to follow a code of practice on relations with the pharmaceutical industry and to declare their interests which are published annually.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many resignations have been received from staff of (a) the Medicines Control Agency and (b) the Committee on Safety of Medicines since 1 October 1995. [19184]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency has received six resignations since 1 October 1995; while the Committee on Safety of Medicines has received none.

(2) what representations he has received on the need for an independent inquiry into the closure of the B12 unit at the Chelsea and Westminster NHS trust; and if he will make a statement; [19195]

(3) what involvement his Department had in the decision to close the B12 unit at the Chelsea and Westminster NHS trust; [19194]

(4) what representations he has received on, and what assessment he has made of, the health risks faced by children whose treatment has been interrupted as a result of the closure of the B12 unit at the Chelsea and Westminster NHS trust; and if he will make a statement. [19196]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received several representations on the future of the vitamin B12 unit at Chelsea and Westminster Hospital. The future inclusion of the vitamin B12 unit into the services provided by the Chelsea and Westminster Healthcare national health service trust is a matter for the trust and the Charing Cross and Westminster medical school.

Laparoscopic Surgery

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when an independent inquiry into an allegation of clinical negligence or misconduct involving the use of laparoscopic surgical techniques in a case of uterine cancer was last carried out in respect of the Northern and Yorkshire health region; by whom that inquiry was carried out; and at what cost. [19234]

Mr. Horam: Northern and Yorkshire regional health authority carried out an inquiry into an allegation about the use of laparoscopic surgical techniques in a case of uterine cancer in the second half of 1995. The hon. Member may wish to contact John Greetham CBE, chairman of the authority, for further details.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the use of laparoscopic surgical techniques for hysterectomy in the case of uterine cancer requires ethics committee approval. [19236]

Mr. Horam: Laparoscopic surgical techniques require local research ethics committee approval only if carried out as part of a research project.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he is preparing guidelines as to when laparoscopic surgical techniques may be used for hysterectomy in the case of uterine cancer; [19237]

(2) what guidelines exist covering the circumstances under which laparoscopic surgical techniques of hysterectomy may be used in the case of uterine cancer. [19238]

Mr. Horam: No guidelines exist covering specifically the circumstances under which laparoscopic surgical techniques of hysterectomy may be used in the case of uterine cancer. The development, publication and maintenance of guidelines for the clinical management of various groups of illnesses are the responsibility of the medical, nursing, dental and other clinicians and their professional bodies.

Clinical Negligence

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he issues as to the professional qualifications and usual place of work of individuals commissioned by regional health authorities to look into alleged cases of clinical negligence. [19235]

Mr. Horam: There is no formal guidance for regional health authorities that deals specifically with the investigation of alleged cases of clinical negligence.

Regional medical officers are responsible for arranging for two independent consultants to conduct the third stage of the current hospital clinical complaints procedure, called independent professional review. Existing guidance is contained in paragraph 27 of annexe B to health circular HC(88)37, copies of which will be placed in the Library. This states that the consultants should be in active practice in the appropriate speciality or specialties. They should be nominated by the joint consultants committee, and at least one should be a doctor working in a comparable hospital in a different region from that which is setting up the independent professional review.

A new national health service complaints system will be introduced from April 1996, in which there will no longer be separate procedures for dealing with clinical complaints.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a quarterly analysis of the number of operations cancelled in each region since figures have been published. [19497]

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures by (a) district health authority and (b) regional health authority, of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients not readmitted within a month for (i) the second and (ii) the third quarter of 1995–96. [19471]

Mr. Horam: The national health service performs over 5 million operations annually. Fewer than 50,000 or less than 0.01 per cent. were cancelled in 1994–95 and many of these would have been unavoidable.

The available information relates to the number of operations cancelled for non-medical reasons on the day patients are due to arrive or after arrival in hospital. This will be placed in the Library.

Trust Managers (Pay Increases)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further advice he intends to issue to trusts regarding the appropriate level of pay increases to general and senior managers beyond that contained in HSG(961); and what monitoring he proposes to undertake. [19493]

Mr. Malone: None. These are matters for local determination following extant guidance and I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 13 February, Official Report, column 559.

Health Authorities

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a list of the professions of those (a) nominated and (b) appointed to serve as non-executives on the newly merged health authorities. [19498]

Mr. Malone: A list of all non-executive appointments together with professions of appointees to national health service authorities and trusts will be published in the summer of 1996.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department collects on hospital department closures. [19492]

Mr. Horam: The Department does not routinely collect information on hospital department closures. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 28 February, Official Report, column 569.

DEFENCE

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19423]

Mr. Arbuthnot: For parliamentary questions, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 14 February 1996, Official Report, column 609.

Information on the number of hon. Members' letters passed to defence agencies to reply is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bills (Payment)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time taken by his Department in the payment of commercial bills in each year since 1993; and what are his Department's policies for the payment of commercial bills for contracts awarded to small companies. [19607]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Bills Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. R. Thurgate to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 8 March 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time taken by his Department in the payment of commercial bills in each year since 1993; and what are his Department's policies for the payment of commercial bills for contracts awarded to small companies. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Defence Bills Agency I have been asked to reply.

The statistics which are readily available go back to April 1993. During this time 99.99% of bills have been paid within 30 days of presentation of a valid bill. The Defence Bills Agency also measures performance against a higher departmental standard of payment within 11 days of receipt of a valid bill. We achieved the 1993/94 target of 96%, the 94/95 target of 97%, and are on course to achieve the 97% target for 95/96.

All new MOD contractors receive a 'Prompt Payment Guide' from the Defence Bills Agency, I have enclosed a copy for you. This booklet provides guidance on MOD payment procedures to help contractors submit bills correctly and therefore receive prompt payment.

Equipment Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the letter sent by him to defence industry firms concerning Government policy on exports of defence equipment to Iran in (a) 1984 and (b) 1985. [18539]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We are aware of one letter sent by the Ministry of Defence to a UK defence manufacturer in 1985 which referred to new policy guidelines in relation to exports to Iran and Iraq. Very few papers exist from the two years in question and it is possible that other letters were sent by the Ministry of Defence at the time.

Chechnya

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current policy on the sale of (a) aircraft and (b) other armaments to Chechnya; and if he will make a statement. [18270]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We do not sell defence equipment to Chechnya, which is internationally recognised as part of the Russian Federation.

Business Appointment Rules

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what inquiries have been made with John Laing International to establish whether former officials or officers have failed to seek approval under the business appointments rules. [18961]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None. There has been no reason to write to the company about former MOD employees.

Air Vice-Marshal Howard

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, Official Report, column 318, when Air Vice-Marshal Howard retired; when he took up a business appointment with Tripod Engineering; and how long that appointment lasted. [19045]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the information contained in section D2 of the Scott report.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19460]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No central record is held of the extent to which computer capacity might have been brought from other Departments. Computer capacity has been bought from many private sector sources, but again no central record is held. In both cases, information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. David Hart

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is Mr. David Hart's current job description within his Department; and what other job description he has held since assisting his Department. [19897]

Mr. Portillo: Mr. Hart has agreed to assist me with advice on any matter which I decide to refer to him. He is also free to raise matters with me. He had a similar arrangement with my predecessor.

Franco-German Armaments Agency

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which defence equipment projects for his Department he has identified as being suitable for management by the enlarged Franco-German Armaments Agency to include the United Kingdom. [19126]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The UK is considering a number of possible projects for management by the Franco-German organisation in the event of UK entry.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the relationship between the procurement executive of his Department and the Franco-German Armaments Agency following British participation in this agency. [19124]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The UK is currently discussing with France and Germany the implications of possible participation in the Franco-German armaments organisation. No decisions have been made on the organisation's policies and operating procedures.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the process of funding and financial accountability for defence equipment destined for his Department and managed by the Franco-German Armaments Agency enlarged to include the United Kingdom. [19125]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In the event of UK involvement in the Franco-German organisation, detailed management arrangements for collaborative projects will be determined before any commitment. The UK will not relax her standards of monitoring and control.

Multi-role Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he is taking to maintain a British capability to design, develop and build military vehicles in his evaluation of the options to meet the Army's multi-role armoured vehicle requirement. [19123]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We are discussing with France and Germany possible UK participation in the first stage of a collaborative venture to meet part of the UK's requirement for a multi-role armoured vehicle. The implications and opportunities for UK industry are an important factor in these discussions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sea Empress

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department will make an assessment of the potential environmental after-effects of the Sea Empress oil spillage on the north Devon coastline and Lundy island and of the steps that need to be taken to manage and mitigate these effects. [17718]

Mr. Baldry: Our initial survey work suggests that there is no cause for concern of the effects of the Sea Empress oil spillage on the fisheries and wider marine environment along the north Devon coastline and Lundy island. We shall continue to monitor the environmental effects of oil spillage for as long as is necessary to be sure that this continues to be the case.

Oil Spillage Dispersants

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the level of oestrogen-mimicking chemicals in dispersants used to combat oil spillages; what assessment he has made of the long-term effects; and if he will make a statement.[17983]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 5 March 1996]: Oestrogen-mimicking chemicals are not components of any oil dispersant product approved by the Department for combating oil spilt in United Kingdom waters.

Environmental Objectives

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent measures his Department has taken to implement regulation 2078 in the United Kingdom, in respect of setting clear environmental objectives on (a) rural employment, (b) biodiversity, (c) pollution and (d) soil erosion; what measures have been taken in other EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [18613]

Mr. Boswell: The aim of Council regulation 2078/92—the "agri-environment regulation"—is to promote farming practices which are compatible with protection of the environment and maintenance of the countryside. It requires all EU member states to introduce programmes of environmental incentive schemes for farmers which reflect their own environmental circumstances and priorities.

The agri-environment regulation has been implemented in England by expanding the existing environmentally sensitive areas and nitrate sensitive areas schemes and by introducing a range of new incentive schemes addressing major environmental priorities such as creation of wildlife habitats, promotion of organic farming, conservation of heather moorland and access. We have also recently completed public consultation on proposals for the expansion and development of the countryside stewardship scheme when it transfers to MAFF from the Countryside Commission at the end of the month.

One of the main aims of our agri-environment programme is to protect and enhance biodiversity, and many of the schemes are contributing towards the Government's objectives under the biodiversity action plan. The schemes also address concerns over pollution by controlling or prohibiting inputs of fertilisers and pesticides, and concerns over soil erosion through measures such as the reversion of arable land to grassland. The issue of rural employment falls outside the scope of regulation 2078/92; the Government's policy in this area is set out in the rural White Paper.

As indicated in the rural White Paper, we have now set up a national agri-environment steering group specifically to advise Ministers on the objectives, targeting, development and monitoring of agri-environment schemes. We have also set up a new national forum, which meets for the first time on 25 March, to allow a wide range of interested bodies the opportunity to feed in their own ideas on these issues.

Fishing Vessels (Ownership)

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many boats on the United Kingdom fishing vessel register are in foreign ownership; and, of these, how many were registered (a) while in such ownership and (b) as a result of the vessels being sold by United Kingdom owners to foreign interests. [18960]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. David Harris, dated 7 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about vessels on the UK Fishing Vessel Register which are in foreign ownership.

When the Merchant Shipping (Registration of Ships) Regulations 1992 came into force in March 1994, the information you asked for ceased to be available. It is still possible to identify the nationality of individual owners but many fishing vessels are owned by companies and the nationality of the shareholders of these companies cannot be ascertained.

Before March 1994, the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 provided that corporate owners of fishing vessels registered in the United Kingdom had to be made up mainly of qualified shareholders. A company had therefore to complete a declaration that its shareholding complied with the Act. After the 1993 regulations came into force, the only requirement for eligibility in respect of companies is that they be incorporated in a member state of the European Economic Area and have a place of business in the UK. As a result of this change, it is no longer necessary to know the nationality of the shareholders and no such information is now collected.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Directives

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Community directives were introduced by him into the law of the Untied Kingdom in 1995. [18292]

Mr. Oppenheim: Twelve Community directives—six Council/Council and Parliament directives and six Commission directives—were introduced as DTI measures into the law of the United Kingdom, all by way of statutory instrument, in 1995.

Arms Sale Guarantees

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 12 January 1996, Official Report, column 403, if he will indicate, without revealing the contracts concerned, the four largest sums put up by Her Majesty's Government as a financial guarantee or collateral in respect of securing an arms deal. [15979]

Mr. Lang: The four largest guarantees issued by ECGD in respect of defence equipment sales were as follows:

Year guarantee issued	ECGD liability £ Million
1993–94	750
1988–89	450
1992–93	427
1985–86	378

Overseas Exhibitions

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 24 January, Official Report, columns 253–56, (1) which sections of the Data Protection Act 1984 preclude release of information relating to individual companies; [17811]

(2) which sections of the Data Protection Act 1984 preclude release of information relating to individual companies. [17395]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 26 February 1996]: Regrettably, the information on which my answer of the 24 January was based was incomplete and arose from a misunderstanding which has now been corrected. Further advice indicates that the provisions of the Data Protection Act are not relevant to information about exhibitors supported by the Department at overseas trade fairs. This information is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

EDS Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those countries his Department currently holds with EDS, indicating for each the (a) date of inception, (b) value and (c) duration. [17456]

Mr. John M. Taylor: We have no current contracts with EDS let centrally. I have asked the chief executives of the Department's executive agencies to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Ms Angela Eagle, dated 7 March 1996:

Scott Report

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on changes instituted in the Export Control Organisation since events covered by Sir Richard Scott in his report took place. [18555]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 1 March 1996]: The changes instituted in the Export Control Organisation since events covered by Sir Richard Scott in his report took place were set out in a press notice issued by my Department on 15 February 1996.

The Government are currently considering Sir Richard Scott's proposals and will publish a consultation paper in due course.

Post Office

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies have been undertaken by his Department since 1 January 1995 into the effectiveness of Post Office distribution; and what were the results. [18817]

Mr. Oppenheim: No specific studies into the effectiveness of Post Office distribution have been undertaken by my Department since 1 January 1995 as this is an operational matter for the Post Office. Quarterly and annual quality of service statistics obtained by independent survey have for many years been published for Royal Mail. These statistics show the percentage of first and second class mail delivered respectively within Royal Mail's target of the next working day and three working days. The efficiency study of the Post Office commissioned from KPMG in 1995 covered all main areas of the Post Office's operations. Its findings have been used to inform discussion and decision on a range of issues.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the performance review of the Post Office commissioned from the consultants KPMG; when it was completed; how it has been used; and if it will be published. [18968]

Mr. Oppenheim: The performance review of the Post Office commissioned from KPMG was completed on 31 August 1995 and has been used to inform discussion and decisions on a range of issues. These include in particular the setting of the Post Office external financing limits in last November's Budget, and consideration of the financial and efficiency targets which are to be set for Royal Mail, Post Office Counters and Parcelforce for the financial years 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99. The cost of work undertaken by individual contractors is commercially confidential. The contents of the report are confidential between the Government, their advisers and the Post Office board.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what will be the Government's target for real unit cost reduction for Royal Mail and Post Office Counters for the financial years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1988–99; [18970]

(2) what will be the Government's target for the return on capital employed in Royal Mail, Parcelforce and Post Office Counters for the financial years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [18969]

Mr. Oppenheim: The new financial and efficiency targets for Royal Mail, Post Office Counters and Parcelforce for the financial years 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 will be published when final decisions on them have been taken.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people were declared bankrupt in each year since 1990 for debts up to (a) £50,000, (b) £500,000 (c) £6 million and (d) over £6 million. [19091]

Mr. Oppenheim: The number of bankruptcy orders made in England and Wales since 1990 is as follows:

	Number
1990	12,058
1991	22,632
1993	31,016
1994	25,634
1995	21,933

Information regarding the size of debts could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Merseyside Special Investment Fund

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's role in the establishment of the Merseyside special investment fund; which other organisations are involved in its establishment; and on what date its operations will commence. [18840]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The Department has worked with a range of private and public organisations to ensure that the proposed fund will complement existing provision of finance to small and medium-sized enterprises and will operate according to Government and European Commission financial requirements.

The Department and MSIF are currently considering with the European Commission their concerns about European regional development fund grant to the fund.

Mrs. Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the total budget of the Merseyside special investment fund; what will be the total level of Government financial support; and what will be the fund's other sources of finance. [18841]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The Department is considering an application from the Merseyside special investment fund for £16.1 million of European regional development fund grant towards its overall budget of £52.6 million. Other funding will primarily come from private sector contributions and income from companies supported by the fund.

Trade and Research Associations

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what amount of grant is paid each year to the trade associations representing the (a) paper, (b) leather, (c) shoe, (d) furniture, (e) timber and (f) textiles industries; [18378]

(2) what amount of grant is paid each year to the research associations related to the (a) paper, (b) leather, (c) shoe, (d) furniture, (e) timber and (f) textiles industries. [18379]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 5 March 1996]: None of these organisations receives any automatic grant annually from the Department. However, some receive discretionary grants to support specific competitiveness or export activities in their sectors. In 1994–95 the totals of such grants paid were as follows:

Sector	Competitiveness support	Export support £ million
Paper	0.360	—
Leather	0.020	0.214
Footwear	0.328	0.057
Furniture	0.109	0.862
Timber/Textiles	—	—
Clothing	0.348	2.084

Orimulsion

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will initiate discussions with National Power on the proposed import of orimulsion. [19252]

Mr. Page: No. The choice of fuel to be used in a power station is a commercial matter for the company concerned subject to the operation of the station being able to satisfy the requirements of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mid Kent Holdings

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to enforce the statutory undertaking given to him by General Utilities not to enter into any arrangement with an associated person which may result in his joint holdings in Mid Kent Holdings plc exceeding 19.5 per cent. [19515]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Under section 88 of the Fair Trading Act 1973 the Director General of Fair Trading has a duty to give advice to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade if it appears to him that a statutory undertaking has not been or is not being fulfilled. He also has a duty to advise where it appears to him that a person can be released from an undertaking or that the undertaking needs to be varied or superseded. The President of the Board of Trade will wish to consider carefully any advice he may receive from the Director General of Fair Trading in relation to the statutory undertakings given by General Utilities plc in March 1991 concerning the acquisition of shares in Mid Kent Holdings plc.

Public Bodies

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18642]

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Wages

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current average male wage. [17635]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The "New Earnings Survey" (1995) estimates that the average gross weekly earnings for men on full-time adult rates is £374.60 per week.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from her Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19043]

Mr. Sproat: Since it was established in April 1992, my Department has neither lost nor had stolen any items of equipment or furniture. Three items of IT material have been lost, none of which was valued over £5,000.

The Historic Royal Palaces agency has suffered no theft or other loss of any item of furniture, equipment or IT material.

The Royal Parks agency lost four small non-IT items in 1995, the total value of those items being £513.

Sport (London)

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to make a decision in respect of London as an international city of sport as defined by the Sports Council. [18906]

Mr. Sproat: Decisions on all applications for designation under the Sports Council's city of sport programme are entirely a matter for the Sports Council. However, I understand that the Sports Council is working closely with the London Sports Co-ordinating Committee which is developing an application.

Television Licence Fee

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to make an announcement on the proposals from the BBC for the introduction of a weekly cash instalment scheme for the payment of a television licence fee. [18911]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have given approval in principle to a BBC proposal to introduce a weekly cash instalment scheme for payment of the television licence fee. Regulations will have to drafted, and we will make an announcement when these are laid before the House. The BBC needs to make the necessary arrangements to implement the scheme, which it hopes to be in a position to do this summer.

BBC

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the new BBC charter and agreement will come into effect. [20251]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have considered the views of right hon. and hon. Members in the debate on 15 February, Official Report, columns 1172–1234, and those expressed in another place. We have considered whether there is substantial support for significant changes to be made to the draft royal charter or the agreement which was approved by this House. We have concluded that no such changes are warranted.

Many of the points raised related to specific aspects of the BBC's services. The new charter and agreement set out explicitly the broad standards we expect of the BBC. It is for the BBC to give more specific undertakings, after consulting its audiences, in its statement of pledges.

Concern was voiced that the BBC should reflect the needs of audiences throughout the UK. The new charter and agreement establish a clear framework to ensure that programme makers in all parts of the country make a proper contribution to the BBC's output, and that the BBC stays closely in touch with the needs and opinions of all viewers and listeners. The statement of pledges will underpin these commitments.

We have made explicit the independence of the BBC. Alongside this, the BBC must be accountable to the public. We have made it clear that the responsibility for ensuring the BBC fulfils its obligations rests with the board of governors.

The policies reflected in the draft charter and agreement will secure the future of the BBC for the next 10 years and allow it to flourish, at home and abroad, in its public services and its commercial enterprises, under its new chairman, Sir Christopher Bland. I am therefore making a representation to Her Majesty that the new charter now be granted to the BBC. Subject to Her Majesty's approval, I expect the new royal charter and agreement to come into force on 1 May 1996.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Treasury Solicitor's Office (Computer Disc Theft)

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 15 February 1996, Official Report, column 695, what was the relationship between the two people who were the subject of the investigation by the Metropolitan police. [19358]

The Solicitor-General: Brother and sister.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 15 February 1996, Official Report, column 695, what factors underlay the decision that it was not in the public interest to prosecute the woman against whom the Metropolitan police had established sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction. [19359]

The Solicitor-General: In order to ensure fair and nationally consistent decisions on prosecutions, the Crown Prosecution Service follows the guidance set out in the code for Crown prosecutors. Copies of the code, which is issued under section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, are available in the Library of the House. Section 6 of the code deals with the factors commonly taken into account in determining where the public interest lies. Those factors were applied in this case.

Public Interest Immunity

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions the public interest has been evoked in each of the last three years to protect from prosecution persons against whom the Metropolitan police had established sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction for (a) alleged theft and (b) blackmail. [19357]

The Solicitor-General: Following charge, or in cases where advice is sought, it is the Crown Prosecution Service which decides whether a prosecution should proceed or continue. While the service maintains detailed statistics on the cases, it deals with it does not break those figures down either by police force or by type of offence. In order to determine the number of cases which were not prosecuted on public interest grounds it would be necessary to check each file individually. This could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Restraint and Confiscation Orders

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Attorney-General how many restraint and confiscation orders have been obtained in each of the last three years; and for what amounts. [17142]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

Information about the number of "restraint orders" made by the High Court is not collected centrally by my Department.

Information about the number of confiscation orders made by courts in England and Wales is given in the table.

TREASURY

Single European Currency

11. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake a study of the implications of the length of time taken from the decision to introduce decimalisation to its introduction for the introduction of a single currency. [17628]

Mr. Waldegrave: If we were to take part in a single currency in 1999, we would be committed to the timetable agreed by the European Council in Madrid in December 1995.

19. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects of a single European currency on Government spending in Britain. [17637]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: It is not immediately obvious that there need be any effects on Government spending, but it is too early to assess the possible impact of a single currency. A full assessment of the costs and benefits will be carried out nearer the time, when the facts are known.

Competitiveness

12. Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with business leaders regarding the United Kingdom's economic competitiveness. [17629]

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. and learned Friend frequently meets business leaders where a wide range of topics, including our improving economic competitiveness, are discussed.

Trade Statistics

13. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what statistics are retained by his Department on matters relating to trade. [17630]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Central Statistical Office publishes a large number of statistics covering a wide range of trade data.

European Currency Values

14. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he had made of the impact of the current value of the German mark and the French franc on the British economy; and if he will make a statement. [17631]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Sterling's value against the German mark and French franc are just two of many factors which influence the British economy. But we do know that the United Kingdom ran a visible trade surplus with EC countries in December for only the third time since monthly records began in 1988.

Export Credits Guarantee Requests

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what records he keeps in respect of Treasury decisions on export credits guarantee requests. [17632]

Mrs. Angela Knight: A record of exchanges between Ministers, minutes of meetings and correspondence between officials is kept for at least 10 years.

Mis-selling of Pensions

16. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he plans regarding the mis-selling of pensions. [17633]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government continue to support the initiative of the Securities and Investments Board, announced in October 1994, to require reviews of certain personal pension cases. A recent example is the inclusion in the current Finance Bill of provisions to exempt compensation payments from tax.

Government Borrowing

17. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of Government borrowing in the next financial year. [17634]

21. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the level of Government borrowing in the next financial year. [17639]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget forecast of the public sector borrowing requirement for 1996–97 was £22.5 billion.

Drug Control Policy

18. Mr. Booth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the Customs and Excise Department's drug control policy. [17636]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The reduction of supplies of drugs from abroad is a key part of the Government's strategy for tackling drug misuse, and maintaining the anti-smuggling enforcement effort is a top priority for customs. Customs' drug control policy focuses on:

the prevention and detection of illegal importation and exportation of controlled drugs;

the investigation of organisations and individuals engaged in international drugs smuggling;

the prosecution of drug smugglers; and the identification to the courts for possible forfeiture of any proceeds of drugs smuggling.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

20. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has had about VAT on domestic fuel. [17638]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have received a number of such representations from Members and direct from the public.

Budget (Impact on Women)

22. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements exist within his Department to assess the impact of his Budget on women. [17640]

Mr. Jack: The impact of the Budget on all groups is considered very carefully.

Landfill Tax

23. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the income from the tax on waste to landfill sites in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [17641]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The landfill tax is expected to raise £110 million in 1996–97 and £450 million in 1997–98.

Tax Evasion

24. Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of revenue lost through tax evasion last year. [17642]

Mr. Jack: There is no reliable way of estimating the amount of tax evaded annually. But in each of the last four tax years, the Inland Revenue has brought into charge approximately £1.5 billion from its counter-evasion work.

Inheritance Tax

25. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people receive conditional exemption from inheritance tax because they allow the public access to their land. [17643]

Mr. Jack: As conditionally exempt property may be owned jointly by several persons or held in trust, information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, in the United Kingdom, there have been 189 designations of land for conditional exemption purposes, and 171 designations of historic buildings. Some designations of the buildings will have extended to the surrounding land, and some of the buildings will have been designated for the purposes of the tax provisions on maintenance funds rather than for conditional exemption of the buildings themselves.

Mortgage Interest Rates

26. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of mortgage interest rates for the forthcoming year. [17644]

Mrs. Angela Knight: It is a long-standing practice not to publish the details of the interest rate assumptions underlying official economic forecasts.

However, average building society mortgage interest rates are their lowest for a generation. As a result, average mortgage payments are currently £170 less a month, £150 less a month than five years ago. This has been possible only because of the Government's success in controlling inflation.

Savings

27. Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the levels of savings held by the public. [17645]

Mr. Waldegrave: The 1995 Budget reduced tax on savings income for basic rate taxpayers, benefiting around 14 million taxpayers.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the levels of savings in (a) the last year and (b) the year to May 1979 in 1996 values; and if he will make a statement. [17988]

Mrs. Angela Knight: It is not possible to quote the levels of saving at 1996 values. Current national accounts practice is to revalue at 1990 prices. Total personal saving at 1990 prices in the 12-month period to September 1995—the latest available year—was £37.4 billion. The corresponding figure for the 12-month period to June 1979 was £30 billion. The national accounts are prepared quarterly and this is the closest period to May 1979 for which there are data. Information on personal sector saving at current prices is published annually in the Central Statistical Office Blue Book and quarterly in the CSO first release quarterly national accounts and is held on the CSO database; all sources are available in the Library.

Share Option Schemes

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what priority he attaches to increasing the number of employees participating in employee share option schemes. [17624]

Mr. Jack: Measures proposed in the Finance Bill are designed to encourage further and additional take-up of these schemes.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18632]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pre-retirement Courses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action heads of his agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses; and if he will make a statement. [19349]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Each of the Chancellor's agencies offer pre-retirement courses to its staff.

Female Employment

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the Staffordshire region how many women are (a) unemployed, (b) in full-time employment and (c) in part-time work. [19491]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There were 7,801 women claiming unemployment-related benefits in Staffordshire in January 1996. The labour force survey sample of International Labour Organisation unemployed women in Staffordshire is too small to provide a reliable estimate.

The latest available information from the labour force survey on employment, however, shows there were 122,000 women in full-time employment and 107,000 in part-time employment in Staffordshire in summer—June to August—1995.

Companies (Reinvestment Relief)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the rules governing qualification for reinvestment relief relating to the percentage shareholding of any subsidiary companies and any overseas subsidiary companies; and if he will set out the relationship between these rules and the Government's policy drive for exports. [18905]

Mr. Jack: A company must not control, or own directly or indirectly, more than 50 per cent. of the share capital of any company which is not a qualifying subsidiary. There is no relationship between these rules and exports from the United Kingdom.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown, by region and gender, for (i) November 1990 and (ii) the latest date available, of (a) employees in temporary jobs because they could not find permanent employment, (b) the total number of employees in temporary jobs and (c) the total number of employees in temporary jobs as a proportion of the total number of employees in employment; [19103]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown, by region and gender, for (i) November 1990 and (ii) the latest date available, of (a) employees in part-time jobs because they could not find full-time employment, (b) the total number employees in part-time jobs and (c) the total number of employees in part-time jobs as a proportion of the total number of employees in employment. [19104]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested can be obtained via the Quantine labour force survey service available for spring—March to May—1991 and spring 1995, the latest comparable quarter.

VAT (Opticians' Services)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the amount of VAT wrongly levied on opticians' services since 1988; and what steps he is taking to ensure that this money is returned to customers. [18730]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is estimated that the total amount of VAT to be refunded to opticians is of the order of £200 million. Where opticians acknowledge that VAT was passed on to customers, it is for the two sides to agree on the sum to be refunded. Where opticians have absorbed the VAT in their profits, they are under no obligation to pass on the refund to customers. Customs and Excise has no powers to insist that refunds are made to customers where the optician maintains they are not due.

Exempt Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the number and (b) the percentages of items on the register of conditionally exempt works of art for which (i) the location other than the county is not specified and (ii) the listed telephone number is incorrect. [18494]

Mr. Jack: All items in the register of conditionally exempt works of art are shown only by their broad location, usually the county, to take account of owners' concern for the security of the exempted items. The requested information about the listed telephone numbers is not available.

The Inland Revenue monitors the operation of the exemption and the register by carrying out an annual sample audit of the exempted objects and by writing to owners every five years. The Inland Revenue's press release, issued with each quarterly update of the register, invites members of the public to write to the capital taxes office, Nottingham, if there is any difficulty in making satisfactory arrangements to view exempted objects. The capital taxes office has no evidence yet of any difficulties in practice.

Euro

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure he has authorised to date by the Royal Mint for preparations to produce coins and banknotes denominated in euros. [16090]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers that my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor gave him on 21 February 1996, Official Report, column 156.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Statistics (Gender Breakdown)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps the Department is taking to collect statistics broken down by gender where relevant. [17693]

Mrs. Gillan: Gender is a key characteristic of many of the statistics we collect in the Department.

Capital Spending

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the capital spending by each local education authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what have been the Government capital allocations in each of those years and in all subsequent years for which allocations have been made. [19263]

Mrs. Gillan: Table A gives capital spending by local education authorities for the years 1990–91 to 1994–95 inclusive.

Government capital allocations over the years 1990–91 to 1996–97 inclusive and are given in table B.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library a list of all overseas visits made by all Ministers of her Department, the Department for Education and the Department of Employment since 1990, including (a) details of the places visited and brief reasons for the visit, (b) details of the size, composition and cost to public funds of the delegation and (c) the names of non-ministerial members of each delegation and the capacity in which each was present. [17489]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 1 March 1996]: For information relating to the former Education and Employment Departments covering the period April 1992 to July 1995, I refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my hon. Friends to the hon. Member for Knowsley, North (Mr. Howarth) on 5 and 6 July 1995, Official Report, columns 233 and 360 respectively. Information prior to April 1992 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I have arranged for details of the information requested since the Department for Education and Employment was created in July 1995 to be placed in the Library. It is not our normal practice to give the names of the delegates who accompany the Minister. However, a delegation would normally include a private secretary and those officials needed to provide advice on policy and technical issues.

Transsexuals (Discrimination)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) legislative changes and (b) other measures she plans to eradicate discrimination against transsexuals in the workplace following the European Court of Justice ruling in the case of PVS and Cornwall county council. [19260]

Mrs. Gillan: The opinion of the Advocate General of the European Court of Justice was given on 14 December 1995. The court has yet to give its decision.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will remove the duty of investigating claims by parents seeking help under the assisted places scheme from participating schools and place such responsibility in the hands of an independent body. [19340]

Mrs. Gillan: Schools participating in the assisted places scheme determine eligibility for places and assess parental contributions towards fees, within the framework of the regulations and detailed guidance from the Department. Their discharge of these tasks is regularly audited. We continually seek ways of improving the administration of the scheme but have no present plans to remove responsibility from schools.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18641]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

EU Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much European funding has been received under the Socrates programme and predecessor schemes by (a) local education authority maintained schools, (b) grant-maintained schools, (c) city technology colleges and (d) independent schools, over the last available five-year period. [19144]

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally. Available details of the funding allocated by the European Commission to institutions in the United Kingdom under Socrates and its predecessor programmes were given in my answer of 29 January 1996 to the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), Official Report, column 562.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 29 February 1996, Official Report, column 665, what guidance she has given to accepted, or potential, providers of early-years education concerning selection of children, or parents, holding vouchers relating to them, when valid applications for places exceed the capacity of the settings they are authorised, or able, to provide. [19568]

Mr. Robin Squire: Places will be allocated according to providers' admissions criteria which they will be required to publish.

Nursery Education (Inspections)

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements have been made for the inspection of funded nursery education, as proposed in the Nursery Education and Grant-Maintained Schools Bill. [20023]

Mr. Robin Squire: Subject to its passage through Parliament and royal assent, the Bill will place upon Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England the duty of securing the inspection of funded nursery education, or nursery education under consideration for funding, provided at any premises. The chief inspector will also be required to maintain a register of nursery education inspectors for England and ensure that they satisfactorily complete a course of training. In order for inspections to commence from the autumn term of this year, the office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England, Ofsted, must begin work immediately on the development of procedures for the recruitment and training of the inspectors.

Parliamentary approval to this new service is subject to the passage of the Bill to Royal Assent. Pending that approval, urgent essential expenditure in 1995–96 estimated at £75,000 will be met by advances from the contingencies fund, to be repaid from the 1996–97 Ofsted vote—class IX, vote 4.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for (a) Mexborough and (b) Doncaster residents within the parliamentary constituency of Don Valley entitled to received cold weather payments the station used as the basis for calculations; in respect of how many days each area has received cold weather payments in winter 1995–96; what has been the total amount paid to date; and if he will make a statement. [17376]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list for (a) Mexborough and (b) Doncaster residents within the Parliamentary constituency of Don Valley entitled to receive Cold Weather Payments (CWPs) the station used as the basis for calculations; in respect of how many days each area has received cold weather payments in winter 1995–96; what has been the total amount paid to date; and if he will make a statement.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies but are kept by Benefit Agency Districts.

Postal codes within the Rother and Dearne and Doncaster Districts are linked to the weather stations at Leeds and Waddington. A copy of the postal codes which are linked to each weather station is available in the Library. Leeds Weather Station has had 7 days of identified cold weather and Waddington has had 21 days.

Rother and Dearne District, which comprises the Benefit offices Goldthrope, Mexborough, Rotherham North, Rotherham South and Wath on Dearne, has made 24,032 CWPs amounting to £204,272 and Doncaster District, which comprises the Benefit offices Doncaster Castle House and Doncaster St. Peters House, has made 46,602 CWPs amounting to £396.117.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) the Dewsbury constituency have received (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three and (iv) four cold weather payments in the past three months. [17335]

Mr. Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Ann Taylor, dated 6 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) the Dewsbury constituency have received (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three and (iv) four cold weather payments in the past three months.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies but are kept for Benefit Agency Districts. Also information is not kept on the number of people who received payments but is available to show the total number of payments made. The numbers of payments issued to each individual could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

However information is available for each district office (including the district which covers the Dewsbury area) in West Yorkshire for the last three months and is given at Appendix A.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

EDS Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those contracts his Department currently holds with EDS, indicating for each the (a) date of inception, (b) value and (c) duration. [17457]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested.

The contracts and agreements currently held with EDS are as follows:

Child Support Agency (CSA)

	Start date	Duration (years)
CSA Software Support Services Agreement	7 March 1992	10
CSA Operational Accounting System	7 March 1992	10
CSA Maintenance Assessment	8 July 1992	10
CSA Technical Services Agreement	1 May 1994	3

The total value of these contracts is £23 million. The value of individual contracts is commercial in confidence.

Information Technology Services Agency (ITSA)

	Start date	Duration (years)
ITSA Data Centre Services	1 October 1995	10

The charges for these contracts are based on the volumes of outputs handled, and therefore values will depend on future levels of business. Current estimates are that over the 10-year period charges will be in the region of £600 million.

"Options for Equality" Report

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what conclusions he has reached on the recommendations of the 1992 Social Security Advisory Committee report "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" that (a) there should be a new premium with income support for those unemployed for more than two years and aged over 55 years and long-term sick or disabled aged over 55 years, (b) invalid care allowance should be extended to 65 years for women and (c) the relationship between invalidity benefit and retirement pension should be reviewed. [18483]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Government have noted the comments of the 1992 Social Security Advisory Committee's proposals, including the three listed.

We have no plans to introduce a new premium in income support. The existing premium structure directs additional resources to those groups identified as having extra needs.

Regulations came into force on 28 October 1994 equalising the upper age limit for claiming invalid care allowance at 65 for both men and women.

Invalidity benefit was replaced by incapacity benefit on 13 April 1995. Entitlement to the long-term rate of incapacity benefit ends when a person reaches state pension age. We have no plans to change this condition.

Mobility Centres

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the level of Government funding for the United Kingdom forum of mobility centres. [18542]

Mr. Burt: The table sets out the Government support to two members of the UK forum of mobility centres. In addition, the Department of Transport funds its own mobility centre—the mobility advice and vehicle information service—which is based at Crowthorne, Berkshire.

Forum member	Allocation 1995–96 £
Banstead Mobility Centre	54,000
Mobility Information Service	13,000

Publicity Costs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent in 1995 on publicising leaflet DS704; and how much is to be spent in 1996. [18546]

Mr. Roger Evans: Leaflet DS704 forms part of the Benefits Agency's extensive leaflet programme and, as such, it is made available in a number of ways. There is no specific advertising of this leaflet and to extract a figure for its part of the overall budget for publicising benefits could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pensioners' Incomes

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what longitudinal studies of pensioners' incomes he has conducted to investigate the extent to which the incomes of a representative sample of pensioners have changed since 1979; and if he will publish the results of these studies. [18336]

Mr. Heald: There are no DSS studies of the type described. We have commissioned a longitudinal survey of a nationally representative sample of people who were aged 55 to 69 when first interviewed in 1988–89. The results of the initial interviews can be found in an Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report entitled "Retirement and Retirement Plans", a copy of which is available in the Library. In 1994 this group were re-interviewed and a report based upon both sets of interviews will be published by the summer of 1997. Information on the average incomes of pensioners 1979–1993 is published in "Pensioners' Incomes Series 1993", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Disabled People (Discrimination)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action the Government are taking to tackle discrimination against disabled people (a) nationally and (b) in the Greater Manchester area. [18347]

Mr. Burt: The Disability Discrimination Act 1995, which applies to the whole of the United Kingdom, will make discrimination against disabled people unlawful in the fields of employment, services and property. It also includes measures to improve access to transport and education. The National Disability Council has been set up to advise the Government on the elimination of discrimination against disabled people and the operation of the Act.

Motability

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what monitoring his office carries out of Motability and Motability Finance Ltd.; and what representations he has received about Motability Finance Ltd.'s financial arrangements and profits. [18547]

Mr. Burt: Motability is required to report to the Department in accordance with conditions set out in the financial memorandum, the latest copy of which is in the Library. Motability Finance Ltd., MFL, is neither funded by nor accountable to this Department. Representations about the finance arrangements and profits of MFL have been received from several Members of both Houses, and a few members of the public.

Income Support (Mortgages)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many borrowers who have claimed income support for help with mortgages since October 1995 are currently repaying loans at a rate higher than the 5 per cent. standard rate set by his Department in October 1995; and what savings this interest rate ceiling has produced to date. [18302]

Mr. Roger Evans: The standard rate applied under the income support mortgage interest scheme is 8 per cent.; prior to 28 January it was 8.39 per cent. The standard rate is applied unless the borrower's actual interest rate is less than 5 per cent. when help with mortgage interest payments begins. In such cases, that rate is used until the borrower's actual rate increases to 5 per cent. or more, at which stage, the standard rate is applied. Information on the claimant's actual interest rate is not collected when the standard rate is applied. Outturn information on savings from the introduction of the standard rate will become available when the February 1996 quarterly statistical inquiry is published.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is estimated to be the total value of (a) employers' and (b) employees' national insurance contributions; and what would be the corresponding total values if (i) contributions at present rates were collected on all earnings, (ii) contributions at present rates were extended only to earnings below the lower earnings level and (iii) contributions at present rates were extended only above the upper earnings level in (1) 1994–95, (2) 2000–01, (3) 2010–01, (4) 2020–01 and (5) 2030–01, at 1994 prices. [18914]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

Gross Class 1 National Insurance Contributions in Great Britain at 1994–95 prices

Notes:
[1] Assumes the current 3 per cent. contribution rate would apply to earnings below the Lower Earnings Limit.
[2] There is no Upper Earnings Limit on employers' contributions.
[3] Assumes the current 2 per cent. contribution rate would apply to earnings below the Lower Earnings Limit.
[4] Assumes the current 10 per cent. contribution rate would apply to earnings above the Upper Earnings Limit.
[5] The additional yield from contributions on earnings below the Lower Earnings Limit is estimated to be negligible.
1. The figures for 2000–01 and later years are based on the assumptions contained in the "National Insurance Fund Long Term Financial Estimates" (HC160) published in January 1995. All figures exclude the effects of contracted-out rebates.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of men aged between 60 and 64 years who paid employee's national insurance contributions in the last year for which figures are available. [19496]

Mr. Heald: In the 1992–93 tax year 571,000 men[1] aged between 60 and 64 at 5 April 1993 paid some employee's national insurance contributions.

Notes:
Includes men who paid a mixture of class 1 employee and class 2 self-employed national insurance contributions.

Hearing Loss

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the net saving or additional cost from abolishing lump sum awards to ex-service people with an attributable hearing loss of 20 per cent., taking into account the extra costs of appeal hearings by the pensions appeal tribunals since abolition; and if he will make a statement. [18953]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 6 March 1996]: Any service-related disablement assessed at 20 per cent. or more attracts a continuing pension rather than a lump sum gratuity.

The threshold excluding payment of war pension gratuities for service-related noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss assessed at less than 20 per cent. came into operation from 7 January 1993. We estimate that, between that date and the end of January this year, the total cost of the gratuities otherwise payable would have been over £130 million.

The estimated administrative cost of appeals heard by the pensions appeal tribunals involving the assessment of noise-induced sensorineural deafness in the same period is approximately £2 million.

The change on noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss formed part of a package which increased considerably, from April 1993, the war pensions of the most severely disabled ex-service men and women. Nearly 265,000 war pensioners are now benefiting from the increase at an estimated annual cost of some £26 million.

WALES

Teachers' Pay Award

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide additional funds to local education authorities to match the teachers' pay award; and if he will make a statement. [18448]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend's decisions on the Welsh local government revenue settlement for 1996–97 were approved by the House of Commons on 8 February. The settlement is consistent with the Government's commitment to restrain public expenditure and is sufficient for all local authorities in Wales to fund services adequately.

The School Teachers Review Body took account of the Government's policy on public spending, including their view that increases in public sector pay should be met from improvements in productivity and efficiency, along with evidence submitted by the teachers' unions and the employers, in formulating its recommendations.

The Government do not consider it appropriate to provide additional resources to fund the pay award. The money could be found only at the cost of other important spending programmes, such as health. The decision to stage the award, increasing pay scales by 2.75 per cent. from 1 April 1996 and by a further 1 per cent. on 1 December 1996, will help local authorities and schools absorb the increases and meet the demand of other budgetary pressures.

Strategic Development Scheme

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the county of Mid Glamorgan received in 1995 from the strategic development scheme; and if he will make a statement. [18271]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The strategic development scheme funding approved in 1995–96 for local authorities in the county of Mid Glamorgan is:

Rhymney Valley district council	1,080,067
Taff Ely borough council	815,220
Total	15,395,829

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amount of the money allocated to Mid Glamorgan under the strategic development scheme for 1996 will be spent on new schemes; and if he will make a statement. [18273]

Mr. Jones: Strategic development scheme support for new schemes in 1996–97 has been allocated to new unitary authorities as follows:

Unitary authorities	Allocations for new schemes £
Bridgend	818,000

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much he estimates will be allocated to Wales in 1996 under the strategic development scheme; and if he will make a statement. [18269]

Mr. Jones: A total of £63 million has already been allocated for 1996–97 under the strategic development scheme for projects to revitalise Welsh communities, regenerate town centres and open up new areas of investment and opportunity in areas of need.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the county of Mid Glamorgan will receive in 1996 from the strategic development scheme; and if he will make a statement. [18272]

Mr. Jones: Strategic development scheme support in 1996–97 has been allocated to new unitary authorities as follows:

Rhondda Cynon Taff	9,742,909

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total of money allocated to Wales in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 under the strategic development scheme; and if he will make a statement. [18274]

Mr. Jones: The total allocated to local authorities in Wales under the strategic development scheme was (a) £59.4 million in 1994–95 and (b) £57 million in 1995–96. Outturn allocations for 1995–96 may vary.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what considerations led him not to include data on the effects and quantities of radioactivity from the Chernobyl accident in his Department's ninth annual "Environmental Digest for Wales". [18550]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The "Environmental Digest for Wales" is a wide-ranging compilation of statistics on the Welsh environment but is not intended to be exhaustive. The Chernobyl accident is referred to on page 110 of the digest, together with sources for further information. Appendix 4 of the digest gives references to additional data held in earlier editions.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assistance he plans to make available to colleges of further education in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [18451]

Mr. Richards: The Department's letter of 13 December 1995 to the Further Education Funding Council for Wales set out the Government's priorities for the Welsh further education sector in 1996–97. It announced that £173.423 million of grant in aid would be made available to the funding council in that year. A copy of the letter was placed in the Library of the House.

Ofsted Budget

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the Ofsted budget in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; what the outturn figure for 1995–96 will be; and if he will make a statement. [18447]

Mr. Richards: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. Mr. Chris Woodhead will write to the hon. Member.

Cocaine-related Deaths

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cocaine-related deaths have occurred in each of the past five years in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [18267]

Mr. Richards: According to records kept by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, no death certificates relating to deaths of Welsh residents in the period 1990 to 1994 mention cocaine.

Doctors

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients were registered with NHS family doctor practices in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990 and (d) 1995, indicating the figures as a percentage of the population in Wales. [18819]

Mr. Richards: Information on patients registered with general medical practitioners (family doctors) in Wales is given in the following table. The figures may include people who, although registered with doctors in Wales, are not Welsh residents and people who are still registered with a doctor but who have either died or moved and not re-registered.

	Number of patients registered	Percentage of population
1 October 1980	2,862,239	102

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) junior doctors, and (b) other hospital doctors there were in (i) 1985, (ii) 1990 and (iii) 1995. [18739]

Mr. Richards: The information is given in the following table:

Trainee Nurses

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of trainee nurses for (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995. [18729]

Mr. Richards: New arrangements for pre-registration nurse education and training were phased in under Project 2000. Information on the numbers of Project 2000 students and pre-registration learners other than Project 2000 students is given in the following table:

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The amounts allocated in the objective 2 industrial south Wales single programme document 1994–95 are:

(b) 1995: 62.32 mecu

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much he estimates will be allocated to Wales in 1996 under the objective 2 programme; and if he will make a statement. [18606]

Mr. Jones: The amount allocated for 1996 in the objective 2 industrial south Wales single programme document 1994 to 1996 is 65.92 mecu. Our intention is to commit to projects all the programmes available grant resources by the end of 1996.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the county of Mid Glamorgan received in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 from the objective 2 programme; how much it will receive in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [18605]

Mr. Jones: Payments to projects in the county of Mid Glamorgan under previous industrial south Wales objective 2 programmes were as follows: (a) £9.3 million in 1994; and (b) £4.4 million in 1995. Payments made to date under the 1994 to 1996 programme will register in 1996.

It is not possible to quantify how much will be received by the county of Mid Glamorgan in 1996 since this is dependent on future approvals under the latest programme and sponsors submitting claims for grant to the Welsh Office on time.

Livestock Quotas

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh producers applied unsuccessfully for assessment of applications to category 3 as developers, in respect of the 1993 national quota reserve; and if he will make a statement. [18809]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A total of 807 applications from sheep producers and 226 applications from suckler cow producers were unsuccessful.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what publicity is given to the closing date for applications for the sheep and suckler cow quota. [18808]

Mr. Jones: Details of the opening and closing dates for the various national reserve application periods are announced through Welsh Office press releases. In addition, we inform the main farming organisations and, in certain circumstances, write to individual producers.

Smoking

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) men and (b) women in Wales aged 15 to 20 years smoke; and if he will make a statement. [18607]

Mr. Richards: The 1994 Welsh youth health survey shows that in the 15 to 16 age group, 26 per cent. of males and 34 per cent. of females smoke at least occasionally. The 1993 Health in Wales shows that in the 18 to 20 age group 28 per cent. of male and 25 per cent. of females smoke at least occasionally. No survey has included 17-year-olds.

Road Construction

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the planned expenditure on road construction on Wales in (a) 1995 to 1996 and (b) 1996 to 1997; and if he will make a statement. [18784]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Provisional outturn for central Government net expenditure on new construction and improvement of motorways and trunk roads in 1995–96 is £118 million. Net provision for 1996–97 is £86.7 million.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 27 February 1996, Official Report, column 496, in which month the financial problems of the South East Wales ambulance trust became apparent; and on what date his Department commenced its close contact with the trust. [18625]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 4 March 1996]: The trust has provided monthly financial information to my Department since May 1993. My Department became concerned about the financial performance of the trust following a meeting on 24 June 1994. The financial information submitted by the trust in August reinforced these concerns. A letter was sent to the chief executive on 2 September 1994 expressing the Department's disquiet and asking for an assurance that the necessary action would be taken to meet statutory financial obligations.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In his letter to the leader of Flintshire county council offering a one-off grant of £1.3 million to discharge Theatr Clwyd's outstanding capital debt, my right hon. Friend made it clear that he was looking to Flintshire to undertake urgent consultations with local authorities in the area, and any other interested parties, with a view to securing financial support for the running of the theatre. This responsibility rests with Flintshire county council.

Teacher Morale

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to improve the morale of teachers; and if he will make a statement. [18923]

Mr. Richards: Good teachers are motivated by the desire to see their pupils achieve, and by the sense of purpose and direction which a good senior staff team is able to create in a school. The document "A Bright Future", published last year, focuses on these issues, and has been well received by teachers in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the amount of unemployment benefit paid to claimants in the Alyn and Deeside constituency in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995, separately indicating the sums for (i) long-term unemployed and (ii) those aged 18 to 24 years. Mr. Gummer: The information requested on correspondence could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The number of parliamentary questions answered by the Department's agencies in each of the past five years and the percentage of questions that it represents is as follows:

1996	[1]1	[2]1,031	0.09

[1] This question required a written reply from all four agencies
[2] As at 1 March 1995.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18645]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not held centrally, and cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Health and Safety Inspections Leaflet

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what consultation was undertaken before the recent publication by the Health and Safety Commission of the leaflet entitled "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action", and (a) which organisations were invited to respond, (b) how many responses were received and (c) what proportion favoured the need for the advice leaflet; [19518]

(2) what cost effective activity by business is promoted by the publication by the Health and Safety Commission of the advice leaflet "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action"; and if he will make a statement. [19522]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Commission's leaflet "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action" publicises enforcement procedures drawn up by the commission to ensure the health and safety enforcement lines up with the principles in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. The Government accepted the recommendation of the deregulation task force in its first annual report for the widespread adoption of these principles, which were introduced to give business rights of representation before formal enforcement action is taken.

In drawing up the procedures and the leaflet, the commission sought the views of local authorities, through the health and safety liaison committee, and of the deregulation task force. Heads of all Health and Safety Executive inspectorates were also consulted. All provided helpful comments.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recommendations from the deregulation unit were included in the recent publication by the Health and Safety Commission leaflet entitled "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action". [19519]

Sir Paul Beresford: Officials from the Cabinet Office deregulation unit and the Health and Safety Executive worked closely in drawing up this leaflet to ensure it followed the enforcement principles in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the use of the publication "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action" in maintaining and improving standards of health, safety and welfare of workers; and if he will make a statement. [19520]

Sir Paul Beresford: The procedures set out in the leaflet follow the principles in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 which were designed to improve the fairness, transparency and consistency of enforcement action without jeopardising any necessary protection. The procedures do not weaken the protection afforded by the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. They do not affect inspectors' powers to take immediate enforcement action against business, or to require business to take immediate remedial action, in any case where it appears to inspectors to be necessary to take such action or impose such a requirement. The commission is monitoring how the procedures are working in practice and will report to me.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the impact of the procedures set down in Health and Safety Commission leaflet "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action" will be on the role of the workplace safety representative; and if he will make a statement. [19521]

Sir Paul Beresford: The role of the workplace safety representative remains unchanged. Inspectors will continue to seek views from employees or their safety representatives and make suitable arrangements to provide them with information on the action required of business. Inspectors also now provide a copy of the commission's leaflet.

Pending that approval, urgent expenditure for new services will be met by repayable advances from the civil Contingencies Fund.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 7 March 1996]: The total assessed parental contribution to mandatory awards made by local education authorities in England and Wales for the academic year 1993–94, the latest year for which data are available, was £621 million.

School Inspections (Don Valley)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for (a) the schools which the Office of Standards in Education plan to inspect in the Don Valley constituency in the next 12 months, (b) the dates during which inspections are to be made, (c) the dates on which inspection contracts were approved and (d) the date by which Ofsted will report the outcome of the inspection. [19689]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in her Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. Mr. Robin Squire: Capita Managed Services has recently submitted a tender to administer the teachers' superannuation scheme under the contractorisation process of the Teachers' Pensions Agency.

Capita Managed Services and Lusis Business Solutions are not currently bidding for work in any of the other areas.

DEFENCE

Air Accidents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) the Royal Air Force Harrier GR 7 which crashed on 20 February at Southorpe, near Peterborough, Lincolnshire, (b) the two RAF Tornados which collided on

10 January above the base at Coningsby, (c) the RAF Tornado which crashed on 11 January at RAF Bruggen, Germany and (d) the RAF Hawk trainer which crashed on take-off in February at RAF Valley, Anglesey last had a major service; by whom each was carried out; and if he will make a statement. [17914]

Mr. Soames: All RAF aircraft are maintained in accordance with the appropriate authorised servicing cycle and approved maintenance procedures.

In addition to first and second line maintenance carried out at operating units by RAF tradesmen at 125, 250, 500 and 1,000 flying hours, RAF Tornado aircraft undergo a major service every 2,000 flying hours. This is carried out by the Maintenance Group Defence Agency at RAF St. Athan. Neither Tornado F3 ZE862 nor ZE166 had received their first major service, which would have become due at 2,000 flying hours. They had, however, been subject to appropriate levels of servicing in November 1995 and August 1995 respectively. Tornado GR1 ZD846's last major service was carried out in 1991, but it had been appropriately serviced in December 1995.

RAF Hawk aircraft undergo a major service every 2,000 flying hours. Hawk XX164's last major service was performed in 1991 at RAF Abingdon. The aircraft has since then received regular servicing, most recently in January 1996 when minor maintenance was carried out by RAF tradesmen at RAF Valley.

The design philosophy of the Harrier does not require it to undergo major servicing in the same way as the Tornado and Hawk. Harrier GR7 ZG476 completed a period of minor scheduled maintenance, the deepest servicing applicable to the Harrier GR7, at RAF Wittering in December 1995. This work was carried out by RAF tradesmen.

The separate boards of inquiry into these aircraft losses are ongoing. A summary of the board's findings will be placed in the Library of the House in due course.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the accident and involving a Royal Navy Harrier T 4N at RNAS Yeovilton on 27 June 1994; and if this accident is included in the accident rate figure for Royal Navy fixed-wing aircraft published in the 1995 edition of "UK Defence Statistics". [19759]

Mr. Soames: The circumstances of the accident are as follows. During the final stages of approach for landing, following a general flying practice sortie, the aircraft's rate of descent increased, causing it to land heavily. Subsequent investigation revealed that the aircraft had struck the leading edge of the runway with sufficient force to remove the main undercarriage. Fuller details are given in the "Military Aircraft Accident Summary", copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

I can confirm that this accident was included in the accident rate figures for Royal Navy fixed-wing aircraft published in the 1995 edition of "UK Defence Statistics".

Dismissals (Sexuality)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel have been dismissed over the last five years for reasons regarding their sexuality. [19449]

Mr. Soames: During the period 1990–94, 309 service personnel left the armed forces for reasons of their sexual orientation.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19914]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Railhead Transfer Equipment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions the Arbau-Klaus railhead transfer equipment has been deployed outside the United Kingdom in conjunction with other equipment in the demountable rack offloading and pick-up system logistic supply chain. [19968]

Mr. Soames: The Arbau-Klaus railhead transfer equipment has been deployed in Germany since 1989. It carries out a range of mechanical handling functions and is regularly deployed with a variety of other systems within the demountable rack offloading and pick-up system—DROPS—logistic supply chain.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Arbau-Klaus railhead transfer equipment has required modification for use as part of the demountable rack offloading and pick-up system logistic supply chain since purchased by his Department. [19969]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Arbau-Klaus equipment has not required modification to meet the operational requirement. However, in the current financial year the Ministry of Defence has purchased a further complement of spreader frames to reflect the changed pattern of operational use. This option was provided for in the original contract.

Construction Contract

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the construction contract at Coulport and the role of Tarmac in respect of that contract. [19790]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A number of major construction contracts were placed in the 1980s to prepare the Royal Naval armament depot, Coulport, Scotland for the introduction into service of the Trident strategic weapon system. Two large contracts were awarded to Tarmac Construction Limited as main contractor. One was for the provision of access roads and dockside weapon handling facilities. The other, for which a final price remains to be agreed, was for warhead and missile storage facilities and warhead processing arrangements.

Military Equipment Sales (Argentina)

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if military equipment made in the United Kingdom was sold to Argentina between May 1979 and May 1982. [18581]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Details of arms sales to Argentina since 1976 were given to the House of Commons Foreign Affairs Committee in November 1982. A copy of this—HC31–i—is available in the Library of the House. These figures indicate that, in fulfilment of contracts signed before 1979, two Lynx anti-submarine helicopters were delivered to Argentina in 1979, one type 42 destroyer was commissioned in November 1980 and some Sea Dart missiles were delivered up to 1981.

Nuclear-powered Vessels

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the decommissioned nuclear-powered vessels in the ownership of his Department, giving the location of each and the cost of any work undertaken on each vessel since decommissioning; and what are his plans for the disposal of these vessels. [19510]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The location of each nuclear-powered submarine that has left service is as follows, with the approximate costs, where available, of undertaking the defuelling, de-equipping and lay-up preparation—DDLP. In addition to DDLP costs, the average annual maintenance cost of storing a decommissioned nuclear-powered submarine afloat is some £50,000. A docking of each submarine is also carried out every 10 years at an approximate cost of £3 million per submarine. So far, only Dreadnought has undergone a 10-yearly docking. The policy for final disposal is still under consideration.

Submarine	Location	DDLP cost £ million
HMS Dreadnought	Rosyth	[1]—
HMS Warspite	Devonport	11.3
HMS Churchill	Rosyth	11.2
HMS Conqueror	Devonport	10.6
HMS Swiftsure	Rosyth	11.5
HMS Courageous	Devonport	10.8
HMS Revenge	Rosyth	18.7
HMS Valiant	Devonport	[2]—
HMS Resolution	Rosyth	[2]—
HMS Renown	Rosyth	[2]—

[1] It is not possible to provide costs of the decommissioning of HMS Dreadnought, which was the first nuclear submarine to be withdrawn from service in 1982; the information, insofar as it may be available, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[2] HMS Valiant, HMS Resolution and HMS Renown have not yet completed their DDLP.

Atomic Weapons Test Programme (Australasia)

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much compensation has been paid since 1966 to the Australian Government or nationals by Her Majesty's Government in respect of claims by or on behalf of persons who suffered death or injury as a consequence of the United Kingdom's atomic weapons test programme in Australasia in the 1950s. [18880]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 March 1996]: As announced to the House on 10 December 1993, Official Report, column 421, the Government agreed to make an ex gratia payment of £20 million to the Federal Government of Australia as a contribution to the cost of the further clean-up of the Maralinga site. A copy of the note giving effect to this agreement was placed in the Library of the House. The note also records that the Government of Australia indemnified the Government of the UK against claims from Australian nationals or residents. We understand, however, that since then the Australian Government have paid no compensation to anyone claiming to have been injured by radiation from the British nuclear test programme.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Welsh Grand Committee

Mr. Hain: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission what estimate he has made of the annual cost of the proposed reforms of the Welsh Grand Committee. [18467]

Mr. Beith [holding answer 4 March 1996]: On the assumption that the Welsh Grand Committee meets four times in Wales during the financial year 1996–97, an estimate of £36,000 is forecast. This estimate includes travel, accommodation, communications, security and additional staff costs; but excludes any additional costs incurred by Government Departments. Full details will be given, in due course, in the next sessional return.

Deregulation Committee

Mr. Steen: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission what is the total estimated cost of maintaining the Deregulation Committee, broken down by office costs, staffing costs and printing costs. [18639]

Mr. Beith [holding answer 7 March 1996]: It is not possible to give a total estimated cost of maintaining the Deregulation Committee.

Currently the Committee has three full-time staff and three staff who also serve the European Legislation Committee. The Committee also receives assistance from the staff in the Committee Office providing general support for the work of Select Committees. Details of the staffing of the Committees are given in the sessional return. It is not possible to calculate office costs for individual Select Committees. The return for Session 1994–95 was published on 28 February as House of Commons Paper 132 of the current Session.

The cost of printing the reports of the Committee was £2,070 in financial year 1994–95; and in the current year, to the end of December 1995, has been £29,337. The costs relate to publication of nine reports.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contactors. [19461]

Mr. Willetts: My Department has not purchased any computer capacity, in the sense of buying time on someone else's computer, from other Government Departments or the private sector since 1987.

Health and Safety Inspections Leaflet

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what role the deregulation unit had in the preparation of the recently published Health and Safety Commission leaflet entitled "Your rights when health and safety inspectors take enforcement action". [19575]

Mr. Freeman: Officials from the Cabinet Office deregulation unit and the Health and Safety Executive worked together closely in drawing up this leaflet to ensure it followed the enforcement principles in the Deregulation and Contracting out Act 1994.

Deregulation Unit

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff are employed by the deregulation unit; what indicators are used to measure its performance; and what are its total annual manning costs. [19572]

Mr. Freeman: Staffing numbers, staffing costs and performance measures were set out in the annual MINIS 95 return for the Department of Trade and Industry, as the unit was at that stage part of that Department. The return was published on 12 June 1995 and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

The staff complement of the deregulation unit at January 1996 was 43.5.

HMSO

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many jobs have been lost in Her Majesty's Stationery Office in each year since 1990; [19776]

(2) what is the projected cost of redundancy payments for HMSO in 1996; [19777]

(3) what is the cost of redundancy payments within HMSO for each year since 1990; [19778]

(4) what estimate he has made of the change in the number of jobs in HMSO in 1996. [19791]

Mr. Freeman: As these questions relate purely to operational matters, I have asked the chief executive of HMSO to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mike Lynn to Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe, dated 7 March 1996:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to your four Parliamentary Questions (Nos 41–44) about job losses and redundancy payments.

I am afraid it is not possible to identify precisely how many jobs have been lost in quite the way you are seeking. HMSO operates in a dynamic environment and has to react to changing market conditions. Accordingly, whilst changes in technology or customer requirements have meant that many operational jobs have been surrendered, we have at the same time needed to recruit sales and marketing staff to ensure that we can compete effectively, and we have moved some staff from support roles into the front line.

Similarly, some jobs have been lost as a result of market tests, but market testing by other Departments has enabled us to capture additional work on a Facilities Management basis, involving the transfer into HMSO of some 230 staff. The net result is that total permanent staffing has fallen from 3,220 at 1.1.90 to 2,696 at 1.3.96, and we expect a further significant decrease by the end of the year.

The total cost of redundancy payments (excluding any pay in lieu of notice, and provision for future annual compensation payments) for each year since 1990 is given below. These figures are recorded against the year in which provision was made in our Annual Accounts and in some cases the actual departures occurred in the following year. In particular, the 1995 figure includes some £8,450,000 in respect of the 1996 programme.

1992: £1,245,000

1993: £4,789,000

1994: £3,843,000

1995: £15,040,00

1996: —.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Contributions and Benefits Agencies, Scotland

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the number of (a) contributions agencies and (b) benefits agencies in Scotland. [17106]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Contributions Agency undertook an extensive analysis of its field operations business in 1993 and a review of the management structure in 1994, to increase efficiency and reduce costs, in line with the Government White Paper, "Continuity and change in the Civil Service".

The recommendations of the reviews were subject to a feasibility study and then an extensive trial period in rural and urban areas during 1995.

The proposed changes to the field operations structure will be implemented over a two to three-year period.

Although the efficiency and running costs of the Contributions Agency are constantly under review, there are no proposals to undertake a further reorganisation.

The Benefits Agency regularly reviews its estate.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding the number of and access to contributions and benefits agencies. [17107]

Mr. Heald: The Contributions Agency has been in existence since 2 April 1991, details of inquiries made to the Secretary of State about access to, and the number of Contributions Agency offices are not available prior to 1 January 1995. Since 1 January 1995 the Secretary of State has received 17 direct inquiries on this subject; 16 written inquiries from hon. Members and one independent inquiry.

The Benefits Agency could obtain this information only at disproportionate cost.

Company Pension Schemes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what incentives he plans to introduce to encourage individuals to contribute to company pension schemes. [18850]

Mr. Heald: Measures to be introduced under the Pensions Act 1995 will enhance the security of occupational pension schemes, increasing pubic confidence in them. Members of occupational schemes contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme pay lower rates of national insurance contributions. Tax relief is given on individual contributions to occupational schemes, including additional voluntary contributions. Similarly, national insurance rebates and tax relief are available to employees in individually-arranged and group personal pension schemes. The Department of Social Security is developing a range of material explaining the benefits of planning early for retirement and providing pensions information in plain English for employers, the public and the pensions world.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19909]

Mr. Burt: Neither Capita Managed Services nor Lusis Business Solutions are part of any of the consortia bidding for any of this Department's facilities management, private finance initiative projects, management buy-outs, contractorisation schemes or market-testing schemes. It is possible that these companies may be employed by bidding consortia, but that is a matter for the consortia concerned.

Cold Weather Payments

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for those areas of (a) Greenock and (b) Port Glasgow within the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow entitled to receive cold weather payments, the weather station used as the basis for calculations; in respect of how many days each area has received cold weather payments in winter 1995–96; what has been the total amount paid to date; and if he will make a statement. [18055]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 7 November 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list for those areas of (a) Greenock and (b) Port Glasgow within the Parliamentary Constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow entitled to receive Cold Weather Payments (CWPs), the weather station used as the basis for calculations; in respect of how many days each area has received CWPs in winter 1995–96; what has been the total amount paid to date; and if he will make a statement.

The information is not available in the format requested. CWP statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies or for individual Benefit Offices, but are kept for Benefit Agency (BA) Districts. The BA District Clyde Coast and Cowal comprises of the BA Offices of Greenock and Port Glasgow and covers the postal codes: KA25, KA28 to KA30 inclusive, PA11 and PA13 to PA27 inclusive. This District is linked to the weather station at Glasgow Airport.

The weather station at Glasgow Airport has had 21 days of identified cold weather. The total amount of CWPs paid from December 1995 to date is £231,854.50. Statistics are not yet available for any clerical payments which may have been made in February by the District.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which weather stations are used as the basis of calculations for cold weather payments in the constituency of Perth and Kinross; for how many days each eligible area has received cold weather payments in winter 1995–96; and what has been the total amount paid. [19168]

Mr. Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 7 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about which weather stations in the Parliamentary constituency of Perth and Kinross were used to calculate Cold Weather Payments (CWPs), how many days each eligible area received CWPs in winter 1995–96, and the total amount paid.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary constituencies but are kept by Benefit Agency Districts. The constituency of Perth and Kinross is dealt with by the Agency's Tayside District. Postal codes within the District are linked to weather stations at Aberdeen Airport, Aviemore, Edinburgh Airport and Leuchars. Details of the postal codes which are linked to each weather station are available in the Library.

The weater station at Aberdeen Airport has had 21 days of identified Cold Weather, Aviemore has had 42 days, Edinburgh Airport has had 14 days and Leuchars has had 21 days.

This winter, to date, Tayside District has made CWPs amounting to £535,568. This does not include any clerical payments which may have been made by the District in February as these details are not yet available.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action is being taken by his Department to minimise the variations in monetary errors made in the award of income support by differing Benefits Agency offices. [18041]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter form Peter Mathison to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 8 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what action is being taken by his Department to minimise the variations in monetary errors made in the award of Income Support (IS) by differing Benefits Agency offices.

The BA has a continuing programme of action to improve IS accuracy and minimise monetary errors. These include increasing the level of mandatory checks in local offices, redesigning training material and introducing refresher training workshops. The BA has also set up a team to carry out a fundamental review of IS processes.

To help individual offices identify error trends and training needs we have set up Quality Support Teams who visit every District at least once a year to give advice and support and spread good practices. Additionally, Territorial Teams have carried out Management Reviews in offices where performance is not reaching the standards set.

One of the main reasons for variation in office performance is the number of mortgage cases dealt with by each office. Mortgage cases are by far the most complex because of the many differing types of loans, the complexity of the regulations and the frequency of interest changes. The BA scrutinised all mortgage cases in 1994 and has recently implemented a change in legislation, from October 1995, to standardise the treatment of eligible interest costs. As a result of the change less clerical input is required and therefore the opportunity for error is reduced.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19906]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Neither company is currently bidding under any of (a) to (e).

Magistrates, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will take steps to eliminate age discrimination in respect of those aged over 50 in advertisements to recruit magistrates in Doncaster. [18823]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The intention of the advertisement is not to be discriminatory but the Lord Chancellor's advisory committees seek to maintain a balance on benches in terms of age. Of the 185 magistrates currently on the Doncaster bench, 73 per cent. are aged 50 and above.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of justices of the peace aged (a) under 30, (b) 30 to 40, (c) 40 to 50, (d) 50 to 60, (e) 60 to 65 and (f) over 65 years of age for Doncaster magistrates court. [18822]

Mr. Evans: The figures are as follows:

	Number
(a) under 30	0
(b) 30 to 40	6
(c) 40 to 50	43
(d) 50 to 60	86
(e) 60 to 65	27
(f) over 65	23

Juries

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will amend section 8 of the Contempt of Court Act 1981 to allow research to be undertaken into the functioning of juries. [18777]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The royal commission on criminal justice recommended the amendment of section 8 of the Contempt of Court Act 1981 to enable research to be conducted into jurors' reasons for their verdicts. The Government are sympathetic to this recommendation and recognise the significant potential value of some forms of jury research. Consultation is currently taking place and the senior judiciary have been asked for their views.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the statistical probability of an eligible individual being called for jury service. [18773]

Mr. Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 8 March 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about jury service.

I regret that the information is not held centrally and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Arts Councils

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the level of co-operation between the Scottish arts council and the Northern Ireland arts council; what projects have been jointly funded in the last year; and what future joint projects are planned. [17109]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Regular meetings and discussions are held between the chairmen, chief executive and other senior staff, as appropriate, to discuss matters of common interest. In the last year the four UK Arts Councils and the Arts Council in the Republic of Ireland funded a five cities tour of poetry readings in December 1995, and the Scottish arts council and the arts council of Northern Ireland jointly commissioned from Piers Hellawell a musical composition for the Highland festival in June 1996.

Live Births

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many live births were registered in Scotland during 1995. [18861]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The provisional total of live births registered in Scotland in 1995 is £60,053.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what civil servants attended each meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee in the current parliamentary Session; what have been the total costs associated with their attendance on each occasion; and how many of them were from the Scottish information office; [18568]

(2) what civil servants he proposes should attend future meetings of the Scottish Grant Committee; what estimate he has made of the total cost involved; and how many of the officials and what amount of the costs relate to staff of the Scottish information office. [18569]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of officials attending meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee depends on the subjects for debate. In the current parliamentary Session an average of 15 departmental officials have attended each meeting. That number includes three officials from the Scottish Office information directorate and four ministerial private secretaries. As officials attending meetings do so as part of their normal duties no additional staff costs are incurred. There are of course travelling costs associated with each meetings.

Attendance at future meetings will depend on the business to be handled and travelling costs on the venue but I expect the same pattern will continue.

Pupil Exclusions

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many school children were excluded (a) permanently and (b) temporarily from schools in (i) Perth and Kinross district council area and (ii) Tayside regional council area in 1995. [19169]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information on the number of school children excluded temporarily from schools is not available. The available information, consistent with that set out in the report on attendance and absence in Scottish schools, 1994–95, published by the adult unit of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools, is as follows.

	Number of pupils permanently excluded from schools in 1994–95	Number of half days of temporary exclusions from schools in 1994–95
Perth and Kinross	0	3,956
Tayside	0	20,702

Racism in Schools

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many racial incidents were reported in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each educational authority in Scotland in 1995. [19170]

Mr. Robertson: This information is not held centrally by the Scottish Office.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which education authorities in Scotland have specific programmes to deal directly with the incidence of racism in schools. [19171]

Mr. Robertson: The management of schools is the responsibility of education authorities and head teachers. Information on which education authorities in Scotland have specific programmes to deal directly with the incidence of racism in schools is not held by the Scottish Office.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19900]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Neither of these companies is currently involved in biding for any of these schemes or initiatives within the Scottish Office.

Education Directorates

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are (a) the numbers employed in the education directorate of each of the new councils, (b) the numbers of schools for which each is responsible and (c) the ratio for each council of the numbers so employed to the number of schools for which it is responsible. [20383]

Mr. Kynoch: The information at present available is shown in the table. I am asking my officials to update these figures as soon as councils have finalised their staffing structures.

WALES

Welsh Economic Council

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 59, on what date he sought the view of local authorities on the future of the Welsh Economic Council; what other bodies he has consulted on the WEC's future; if he will give details; and if he will make a statement. [17349]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 27 February 1996]: I consulted the local authorities on 20 November on their views on the future of the Welsh Economic Council. I also refer the hon. Member to my announcement in the House on 29 February, Official Report, columns 1024–98.

Buildings (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to meet the new Flintshire county council to discuss repairs and improvements to new buildings. [18920]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

North Wales Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the North Wales TEC to discuss the consequences of job losses at (a) Raytheon jets and (b) British Aerospace at Broughton, Clwyd. [18925]

Mr. Hague: My Department is keeping in close touch with the employment position in the aerospace industry in north-east Wales. I have no current plans to meet the local training and enterprise council.

Development Area Status

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the loss of development area status on those constituencies which have lost such status; and if he will make a statement. [18927]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Regional selective assistance is evaluated regularly. As my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy told the Trade and Industry Committee on 18 October 1995, another evaluation is to start this year.

In the meantime, the Welsh Office has been monitoring the volume of RSA applications. The introduction of the new map in August 1993 caused a rush of applications immediately prior to the expiry of the old map. This makes it difficult to identify trends at present. The Welsh Office will continue to monitor applications as this distortion becomes less important.

In the travel-to-work areas all or part of which lost development area status in 1993, average unemployment in the 12 months to January 1996 was 20.4 per cent. below that in the 12 months to July 1993 compared with a fall of 18.3 per cent. in Wales as a whole.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the reductions in expenditure that will be made in each of the next 10 years as a result of the reorganisation of local government in Wales, on the basis of extrapolated past costs. [19284]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is for councils to decide how much they spend. The level of savings from the reorganisation will depend on their decisions. My right hon. Friend will take this decision on the level of total standard spending for 1997–98 as part of the forthcoming public expenditure round.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 9 February, Official Report, column 395, if he will place a copy of his letter to the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation in the Library. [19917]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a confidential communication with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation. It would not be appropriate for a copy to be placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the foreign currency borrowings by NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will list the dates on which his approval was (a) sought and (b) given for such borrowings. [19915]

Mr. Hague: My approval has not been sought by any NHS trust in Wales to engage in foreign currency borrowing.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the borrowings by NHS trusts in Wales from persons other than the Secretary of State; and what amounts are outstanding. [19837]

Mr. Hague: All loans taken out by NHS trusts in Wales have been obtained from the Exchequer. To facilitate short-term cash management, I have approved bank overdraft guarantees to enable the following trusts to borrow up to the amounts shown.

NHS Trust	Amount £
Llandough Hospital and Community	100,000
Bridgend and District	250,000
Gwynedd Community	100,000
Llanelli/Dinefwr	250,000
Glan Clwyd District General Hospital	100,000

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19901]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information about bidders for Welsh Office contracts is commercially confidential.

GP Fundholding

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications he has received for total fundholding; in which health authority they are located; how many he has approved; what is the total annual fund budget in each case; and how many patients are on the lists of the practices concerned. [19916]

Mr. Hague: Eight proposals were received for projects to test the development of total purchasing by GP fundholders, of which four have been approved.

Two projects, involving approximately 50,000 patients each, are in Gwent. Both the new Morgannwg and Dyfed health authority areas will include one project covering about 20,000 patients in each case.

The purchasing budgets for these projects have not yet been set. These will be agreed between the health authorities and the fundholding practices involved.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to assist local authorities who have expended resources on the Sea Empress disaster clean-up and will not qualify for compensation from the existing industry compensation funds. [19786]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: All local authorities involved in the clean-up operation are qualified to claim reimbursement of costs incurred form the ship's insurers and the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Allason: To ask the Attorney-General how many public interest immunity certificates are current in (a) civil cases and (b) criminal cases. [18810]

The Attorney-General: On the basis of the information available, which relates only to cases involving Government Departments, there are known to be (a) two civil cases[1] and (b) seven criminal cases currently before the courts in which public interest immunity certificates have been signed.

[1]Includes one PII claim made by affidavit.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19902]

The Attorney-General: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Study

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times and upon what subjects he has asked KPMG to undertake a study for his Department since 1 January 1995. [18816]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has let four contracts centrally with KPMG for external consultancy since 1 January 1995. The subjects of these studies were:

Study into the North American service sector;

Study of outward investment;

Post Office performance review—operational efficiency;

National Grid Flotation—Share option and dividend issues.

In addition, one contract, for a job evaluation exercise, was let by the former executive agency, the National Engineering Laboratory.

I have asked the chief executives of the existing agencies to reply separately.

Letter from Adrian Wilson to Mr. John Battle, dated 8 March 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question: 95/1413 with regard to how many times and upon what subjects KPMG have been asked to undertake a study for the Department of Trade and Industry since 1 January 1995.

We have one such contract with KPMG, in respect of Human Resources Computer System.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. John Battle, dated 6 March 1996:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade about the frequency and subjects of study undertaken by KPMG for his Department. I have been asked to reply in respect of Companies House Executive Agency.

KPMG have not undertaken any studies for this Agency since 1 January 1995.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. John Battle, dated 8 March 1996:

Redundancies

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances employers are required to notify his Department of proposed redundancies. [19970]

Mr. John M. Taylor: An employer proposing to dismiss as redundant 20 or more employees at one establishment within a period of 90 days or less is required, under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 as amended by the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1995, to notify the Secretary of State of that proposal in writing.

Iraq (Military Equipment)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he possesses on the role of (a) Apremont S.A. Company of Panama, (b) Muiden Chemie Company of the Netherlands, (c) GEA Company, Remie Ltd. and Erber Ltd. of Italy, (d) SPEL Company of Portugal and (e) Banco Nazionale del Lavoro in facilitating the export of United Kingdom-origin military equipment to Iraq since 1985. [18535]

Mr. Lang: Muiden Chemie Company of the Netherlands and SPEL company of Portugal feature in chapter E7 of Sir Richard Scott's report. There is also a reference to the Atlanta, Georgia branch of the Banco Nazionale del Lavoro in paragraph A1.3 of the report. I understand that Sir Richard Scott intends to publish shortly on CD-ROM as many of the source documents for report as he considers necessary.

So far as can be ascertained my Department has no further information concerning the role of the companies mentioned in the hon. Gentleman's question in facilitating the export of United Kingdom origin military equipment to Iraq.

If the hon. Gentleman has any additional information suggesting that a breach of UK export controls has been committed, he should inform HM Customs.

Domestic Gas (Standing Charges)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what restrictions are placed on the levying of standing charges by companies supplying gas to domestic consumers. [19818]

Mr. Eggar: In general, it will be for gas suppliers competing in the domestic market to make their own judgments as to standing charges and for customers to take them into account in their choice of supplier. Prospective suppliers operating in the south-west are generally offering standing charges lower than those of British Gas and two are offering a standing charge of zero.

British Gas remains subject to a standing charge cap, equal in real terms to the level at privatisation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made on implementing the initiatives set out in the policy statement "Sport: Raising the Game". [20382]

Mr. Sproat: Since the publication of the statement last July, the Department of National Heritage, the Department for Education and Employment, the Sports Council and other organisations have been working on the implementation of its initiatives. Already, significant progress has been made in a number of areas.

In schools, a revised physical education curriculum with greater emphasis on team games was introduced in August 1995.

The Department of Education and Employment is consulting on the inclusion of information on sporting aims, provision and achievements in annual reports and prospectuses, with a view to implementation from the 1996–97 academic year.

The new Office for Standards in Education framework for inspection will ensure that inspectors will look at team games and sport as well as PE in the national curriculum as part of all school inspections.

The Ofsted survey of good practice in school PE and sport was published in December, and a summary was sent to all schools in January 1996.

Ofsted is also carrying out an audit of initial teacher training for PE. Its report is due in the summer, and will assist with the development of performance indicators.

The Department for Education and Employment has also carried out a survey of sporting provision in schools, the results of which are expected in April. In addition, the Sports Council has distributed 35,000 copies of its "Why PE" leaflet to support the PE profession.

The responses to the consultation paper published in July on the sportsmark and gold star award schemes, which was sent to all secondary schools, have been analysed. The Sports Council is now preparing detailed guidance on the implementation and assessment of both schemes. The aim is to have the schemes up and running in secondary schools in the 1996–97 academic year and in primary schools, following a further consultation exercise, in the 1997–98 academic year.

The Sports Council's working group on coaching schemes has been set up and will report in April.

The Sports Council is also carrying out audits of available governing body courses and on the number of teachers working on primary and secondary education.

The Department for Education and Employment has consulted on the playing fields elements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations being retained and the regulations were laid in February.

In addition, the Department of the Environment issued a consultation paper on 15 January on the Sports Council becoming a statutory consultee on all planning applications affecting playing fields. Comments were invited by 15 March.

In order to stimulate more good quality lottery applications from schools, the Sports Council provided additional information and advice via publications and roadshows in November.

The council will identify gaps in provision through a facilities planning model, and has produced new guidelines for deprived areas. Funding levels have also been raised to 90 per cent. for these areas. A progress report will be produced shortly and action begun in April 1996. The Department of National Heritage has also sent leaflets to all schools in the UK providing information on how they can benefit from lottery funds. The Institute of Sports Sponsorship is consulting the Department for Education and Employment on ways of promoting greater business sponsorship of school sport.

The working group on university sports scholarships, which is being chaired by Sir Roger Bannister, commenced work in October, has been meeting regularly, and will report in April.

The Sports Council's consultation paper, setting out what the structure and content of the British Academy of Sport might be, was published on 5 December. The closing date for responses was 31 January and an analysis of these is currently being carried out by independent consultants on behalf of the council. Once the structure and content of the academy have been agreed, bids will be invited to establish the academy. The aim is to invite bids in the spring.

The Sports Council has also met the Sports Aid Foundation, British Olympic Association and British Paralympic Association to discuss the co-ordination of support for elite athletes. In addition, the Secretary of State has written to the Sports Council proposing changes to the way in which sports lottery money is distributed. The proposals include helping talented young people, including elite sports people, to develop their skills.

Between now and July, progress will be made on several other action points, including: from April, the Sports Council will be allocating an additional £1 million to provide opportunities for teachers to gain coaching qualifications. Priorities will be decided by the council's coaching working group. The council is also considering the details of the £2 million fund for promoting links between schools and clubs. Sportsmatch will also be earmarking £1 million for schools projects from April.

In April, the Sports Council's national junior sports programme which is being run in conjunction with the Youth Sport Trust will commence. The programme is designed to provide around 4 million children with sports equipment, qualified coaches and places to play. The scheme will cost around £12 million over three years with £7.7 million of lottery money being made available, £2 million to £3 million of grant-in-aid from the Sports Council and some private sector funding. British Telecom has already announced that it will be sponsoring the programme with a total of £750,000 over three years.

The regional offices of the new Sports Council for England will be introducing programmes to improve school-club links in April. Also in April the Sports Council will be publishing revised planning guidelines for governing bodies with a strengthened section on youth sport, which will further encourage the promotion of school-club links.

The Further Education Funding Council is currently drafting a report on sporting provision in the FE sector, which will be published in the next few months. Further education institutions will also publish details of their sporting facilities and the sporting opportunities available to their students from the 1996–97 academic year. The Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Conference of Principals are recommending to their members that higher education institutions should publish details of the sporting facilities and the sporting opportunities available to their students from the 1996–97 academic year.

The Sports Council is giving advice to governing bodies on planning, including planning for youth sport, and its grant assessment panel is assessing these plans with particular attention to governing bodies having targets for athlete support. An improved monitoring system will be in place by April 1996 which will give more detailed information on governing body performance. The council is also drawing up new governing body planning guidelines with special reference to provision for youth sport.

I am pleased that various governing bodies have recently produced programmes for the improvement of their sport and to increase sporting opportunities:

(i) the Football League has designated this season as "School Year" and aims to strengthen links between member clubs and their local schools through, for example, a competition for secondary schools organised by local league clubs, sponsored by Auto Windscreens with matching funding from the £1 million Sportsmatch has set aside for schools projects;

(ii) the Lawn Tennis Association's plan for the development of tennis in Great Britain 1996 to 2001 which looks at the part which the LTA, its county associations, clubs, schools, further and higher education institutions and local authorities can play in expanding participation in tennis, encouraging regular competition in the game and, ultimately, producing world-class tennis players;

(iii) the Rugby Football Union's review of student rugby which aims to encourage maximum participation by students in rugby union;

(iv) the Football Associations of England, Wales and Scotland have also combined on the Coca-Cola Football Crazy initiative which is making available professional coaching and skills training to around 300,000 children and is free to all.

A follow-up policy statement, to be published in July, will report progress on all action points from "Sport: Raising the Game" and on new initiatives following on from them, as well as other relevant new initiatives.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list all cases since 1987 in which his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19462]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has never bought computer capacity, either from other Departments or from the private sector.

Sport (Drugs)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much money the Government have spent in conducting drug tests on sportsmen and women in each year since 1979. [19316]

Mr. Sproat: From April 1988, when the Sports Council's doping control unit was established, until March 1995 a total of £5,261,778 has been spent on anti-doping activities, including £4,951,828 on testing. The sports councils in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland contributed a total of £667,773.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to receive from the Sports Council statistics as to the number of sportsmen and women who failed drug tests in 1995. [19318]

Mr. Sproat: The Sports Council will be publishing a report on doping control activities from 1995–96 by early June.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list (a) the number of drug tests carried out on sportsmen and women, (b) the number of sportsmen and women who failed drug tests and (c) the drugs that those who failed the tests were found to be abusing in each year since 1979. [19313]

Mr. Sproat: Between 1988, when the Sports Council's doping control unit was set up, and April 1995, 26,869 tests have been carried out on sportsmen and women of many nationalities participating in sport in the United Kingdom or UK sportsmen and women training abroad. There have been 357 substances found, and 58 refusals to be tested. The number of reports to the governing bodies of sport for consideration as doping offences would be lower, as in some cases more than one substance has been detected in a sample. Action taken by various governing bodies is monitored by the Sports Council.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much extra money the Government have made available to the Sports Council to fulfil the pledges in "Sport: Raising the Game" to provide additional emphasis on educating young sportsmen and women about the dangers of drug abuse. [19315]

Mr. Sproat: Government grant-in-aid to the Sports Council is not earmarked for specific purposes. However in 1996–97, £80,000 will be made available for education and information programmes by the Sports Council under the doping control programme.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much money the Government have spent on educating sportsmen and women on the dangers of drug abuse in each year since 1979. [19317]

Mr. Sproat: Between 1988, when the independent testing programme was established, and March 1995, £309,950 has been spent on education and information programmes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member referred to in paragraph D4.26 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16951]

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member referred to in paragraph D4.27 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16952]

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 22 February, Official Report, column 256, to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) and pursuant to paragraph D4.62 of the Scott report, what steps he has taken to contact the right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) and the hon. Members for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams), for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones), for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell), for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) and for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) in respect of the findings of Sir Richard Scott that the answers given to those hon. Members were inadequate and misleading. [17871]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to take the view that the Howe guidelines were not changed. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary does not consider that further action is necessary.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has anything to add to the answer given to the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), on 9 December 1992, Official Report, column 663, on changes made in guidelines covering defence-related exports to Iraq since 1979. [18537]

Mr. Hanley: No.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Security Council resolutions which preclude the release of interest from frozen Iraqi assets in the United Kingdom to produce money to compensate claimants. [18512]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 4 March 1996]: None of the United Nations Security Council resolutions concerning Iraq provide for the interest on funds in frozen Iraqi accounts in the United Kingdom to be made available by the Government to meet the claims of UK nationals against Iraq.

As required by the provisions of UNSCR 778, all funds in the UK representing the proceeds of the sale of Iraqi petroleum or petroleum products, paid for on or after 6 August 1990, have been transferred to the United Nations' escrow account provided for in UNSCRs 706 and 712. Under SCR 778, sequestrated funds are net of any amounts needed to meet third party rights over such funds existing at the time of its adoption. Funds in the UN escrow account are available to the UN Compensation Commission—UNCC—for meeting the costs of compensation arising out of the Gulf war. They are also available for meeting the costs of UN activities and humanitarian relief. The relevant UNSCRs do not make provision for the Government to have access to these funds or interest on them for the purpose of meeting claims by UK nationals against Iraq other than through the mechanism of the UNCC.

British Council

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on British economic and trade interests resulting from the closure of operations by the British Council in some countries following the reductions in its budget; [19604]

(2) if he discussed with the British Council the effects of the total closure of activities in some countries, and the closure of branch offices and libraries elsewhere following the reductions in its grant funding over the next three years; and if he will make a statement; [19605]

(3) what progress is being made to alleviate the impact of the reduction in the FCO grants in aid to the British Council. [19615]

Mr. Hanley: The council and its board, of which the hon. Lady is a member, are considering how best to adjust their programme and activities to the financial allocations announced in the 1995 budget. The council intends to alleviate the impact of reductions in grant in aid in various ways including through efficiency savings. We will carefully assess proposals made by the council with a view to ensuring that these have the least possible impact on overall British interests.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what work his Department will carry out on deregulation issues in the run-up to the intergovernmental conference. [18643]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 7 March 1996]: The deregulation unit of the Cabinet Office is the lead Government Department on deregulation issues. Its work is fully supported by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The Government are committed to improving European regulatory systems and reducing the regulatory burden of European law. Not all this work requires treaty change, and most of it will continue outside the IGC.

Vegetables (Nitrate)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current status of negotiations on the European Commission proposals on nitrate in vegetables. [20381]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The draft Commission regulation on nitrate in lettuce and spinach was discussed at the European Commission's Standing Committee for Foodstuffs on 20 February. During those discussions the United Kingdom indicated that it would, reluctantly, support the Commission's latest proposal—Doc VI/3080/93 Rev 7.

The UK objects to the principle of this legislation, deeming it unnecessary and lacking in scientific justification. However, there is considerable weight of opinion across the EU for various reasons in favour of legislation in this area. For this reason we have been negotiating with the Commission for a number of years to secure an arrangement that is satisfactory for UK interests and that will allow our growers to harvest and market their excellent and healthy produce. As a result of our pressure, allied to considerable assistance from the NFU and growers, we have secured significant concessions from the Commission which will enable British growers to continue production.

I have taken the view that these hard fought gains should not be put at risk by continuing to oppose the Commission, particularly given the uncertainty over the voting intentions of other member states. I believe that the current proposal represents the best possible outcome for the UK given the determination of the Commission and other member states to introduce legislation in this area. However, we made it clear that we would not countenance any diminution of the considerable concessions that we have secured to date. We will maintain this negotiating position until the regulation is formally adopted.

HEALTH

Mr. Robert Cooper

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the resignation of Mr. Robert Cooper, former head of the financial development unit at the NHS executive. [17951]

Mr. Malone: I shall write to the hon. Member.

GP Fundholders

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what audit controls are in place to check public moneys allocated to general practitioners involved in total fundholding; [18046]

(2) what controls are in place to ensure that money allocated to general practitioners involved in total fundholding is not used to improve the property value of medical premises form which doctors may obtain personal financial benefits; [18040]

(3) what is the amount so far allocated to general practitioners involved int total fundholding. [18058]

Mr. Malone: Total purchasing pilots operate under devolved purchasing arrangements from health authorities and are subject to the same rules and audit controls as health authorities. Resource allocation is an important element in the three-year evaluation of the pilots. Resources are allocated according to locally-agreed methodologies governed by criteria such as historical activity, demography, epidemiology and other local factors. Detailed information about allocations is not therefore collected centrally.

Pharmacists' Pay

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the correspondence between the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee and his Department, concerning the time scale for 100 per cent. payment for prescriptions; [18458]

(2) if he plans to implement the recommendation in the Pharmacists Review Panel 1994 report, that pharmacists should be paid by the NHS at the time at which they have to pay their suppliers; and if he will make a statement. [18429]

Mr. Malone: Letters, or the relevant extracts therefrom, between the Department and the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee relating to the timetable for pharmacists' pay since December 1994 have been placed in the Library. We continue to explore the pharmacists' concerns about the present payment arrangements.

Information Technology

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for the more efficient use of information technology within the NHS. [18794]

Mr. Horam: A national information management and technology strategy for the national health service is being implemented. A major component of the strategy is achieving a common information management and technology infrastructure, which will enable more efficient communication and processing of information within and between NHS organisations, in a secure and controlled environment.

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what qualifications to the NHS accounts for 1993–94 were due to alleged or actual irregular payments by Yorkshire regional health authority; [19026]

(2) how many alleged irregular payments from the Yorkshire regional health authority, to whom, and for what amounts, have been investigated in the last five years; and what has been the result of these investigations; [19024]

(3) what conclusions he has reached on the NHS executive report into alleged irregular payments by the Yorkshire regional health authority; [19028]

(4) if he will publish the NHS executive report into the alleged irregular payments received by Mr. Keith McLean and Mr. David Martin of the Yorkshire regional health authority; [19023]

(5) how many people, and of what grade, were investigated by the NHS executive over alleged irregular payments by the Yorkshire regional health authority; which of these people are still employed by the NHS; and in what capacity; [19027]

(6) what action has been taken within the last three years by (a) the Yorkshire regional health authority, (b) the NHS executive and (c) his Department to recover irregular payments made by the Yorkshire regional health authority; and what disciplinary action has been taken, or is proposed against (i) the recipients and (ii) the authorisers of such payments; [19025]

(7) what is the total amount of money paid out under the irregular payment scheme operated by the Yorkshire regional health authority; how much of this has so far been recovered; and what action is being taken to recover the remainder. [19029]

Mr. Horam: The report of the inquiry into matters raised by the district auditor on the former Yorkshire regional health authority has been provided to the National Audit Office. I understand that it will be published shortly.

Gender Identity Disorder

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many United Kingdom citizens have been treated surgically for gender identity disorder in each of the last five years (a) on the NHS and (b) privately. [19271]

Mr. Horam: The number of combined operations for sexual transformation as reported in finished consultant episodes in national health service hospitals for the last five years are shown in the table. Information on operations carried out in the private sector is not available centrally. Responsibility for the NHS in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for by right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Year	Combined operations for sexual transformation
1990–91	38
1991–92	27
1992–93	43
1993–94	20
1994–95[1]	13

Factor 8

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received, and from whom, concerning the VAT status of recombinant factor 8 and plasma-derived factor 8. [19566]

Mr. Horam: My Department has received six representations—principally—about the value added tax status of factor 8 since September 1995. Three were from hon. Members writing on behalf of constituents, one from the Haemophilia Society, one from a clinician and one from a member of the public. In addition, three parliamentary questions have been asked on the subject. VAT is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Coronary Heart Disease

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards "The Health of the Nation" targets on coronary heart disease and strokes in people (a) under 65 years and (b) aged 65 to 74 years. [19561]

Mr. Horam: Coronary heart disease mortality fell by 10.7 per cent. in the under 65-year-olds and by 7.7 per cent. in those aged 65 to 74 years between 1993 and 1994. During the same time period stroke mortality fell by 5.6 per cent. for those under 65 and by 3.8 per cent. for those aged 65 to 74.

Cancer

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the recommendations of the "Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services" report have been accepted by his Department; which have been implemented; which have been rejected; and what action he proposes to take on the remaining recommendations. [19513]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has accepted the recommendations in "Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services". Further guidance is being issued on the developing process of implementation and substantive changes to the delivery of cancer services are expected in 1997–98. Health authorities and trusts are already working together to develop local strategies and making preliminary steps in designating cancer units and cancer centres to provide specialised services for cancer care.

Free Prescriptions

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the additional revenue from limiting free prescriptions to those on income support. [19322]

Mr. Malone: No such estimates have been made.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18644]

Mr. Horam: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

General Medical Services Council

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letters sent by the General Medical Services Committee, details of which have been sent to him. [18977]

Mr. Malone: I reply promptly to letters I receive from the General Medical Services Committee. I know, however, that there is ongoing correspondence which is yet to be concluded.

Human Embryos

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many human embryos were used in treatment cycles from 1991 to 1994. [19787]

Mr. Horam: As recorded in the records of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, the number of embryos used in treatment cycles between 1991 and 1994 was 140,410. This includes fresh and frozen embryos.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many human embryos were destroyed between 1991 and 1994 at the request of their parents. [19788]

Mr. Horam: The number of embryos that were not frozen or used for treatment or for other purposes during the period in question was 90,756. As required by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 decisions about these embryos would have been taken only with the consent of the couple involved.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19904]

Mr. Horam: There are none.

TRANSPORT

Road Maintenance (Funding)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sum of money was transferred from revenue to capital in 1992–93 for structural maintenance on local authority roads in 1996–97; and for what reason the money was transferred. [19771]

Mr. Norris: A total of £100 million. The transfer reflected the importance the Government attached to the condition of local authority principal roads.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the countries for which permission has been granted for aircraft to operate by his Department. [19082]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom has agreements with the following countries, in addition to those of the European Economic Area, for the operation of air services:

Late Trains

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate how much money Railtrack has saved by cancelling timetabled services to avoid compensation payments for a delayed service. [19244]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack has agreed contracts with train operating companies to pay compensation for any cancellations of timetabled services. I understand from Railtrack that penalties have been set with the intention of ensuring that it does not gain financially by cancelling services to avoid paying compensation for delayed services.

Mersey Crossing

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission a further evaluation of the proposed route for the new Mersey crossing having regard to strategic communications from Wales, Cheshire, the Liverpool airport and the Wirral area as a whole. [19324]

Mr. Watts: A study into such a crossing was completed in 1994 and copies of the study report were sent to MPs, MEPs and local authorities in the vicinity of the suggested crossing routes. It is not available generally. It was supplied to MPs and local authorities confidentially. The situation has not changed significantly since that time, when my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) said that a publicly-funded crossing could not be justified either on environmental or economic grounds. There is no justification for a further study by the Government.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the current runway capacity of each of the UK's major airports and in each case the projected date that this capacity will be reached; [18440]

(2) what is the current terminal capacity of each of the United Kingdom's major airports and in each case the projected date that this capacity will be reached. [18428]

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for individual airport operators.

Road Accidents

Road Maintenance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what capital provision was made available for the structural maintenance of local authority roads in 1996–97; and for what reasons structural maintenance provision has been reduced. [19772]

Mr. Norris: A total of £86.7 million has been allocated to English local authorities in 1996–97, for the structural maintenance of their principal roads. Transport has had to make its contribution to the overriding need for strict control of public expenditure. There are joint arrangements with local authorities to monitor the condition of local authority roads. There is no evidence at present of any significant deterioration in the condition of local authority principal roads.

Oil Pollution (Sea Empress Incident)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to address any shortfall in the compensation funds available to those who have suffered from the Sea Empress disaster. [19785]

Mr. Norris: Assessments undertaken to date indicate that it is unlikely that there will be any shortfall in compensation funds from the ship's insurer or the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 1 March, Official Report, column 755, if he will list the 67 member states involved in the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund. [19480]

Mr. Norris: The 67 member states are:

In addition, Tonga is expected to become a member of the fund from 1 May 1996.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what co-ordination arrangements he has established for claims for compensation arising from the Sea Empress disaster. [19438]

Mr. Norris: The Government have brokered an arrangement with the vessel's insurers and the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund to enable them to establish a joint claims handling office in Milford Haven. Interim payments will be made to individuals and small businesses suffering financial hardship.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount will be available from the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund for claims arising from the Sea Empress disaster. [19437]

Mr. Norris: Under the 1969 international convention on civil liability for oil pollution damage and the 1971 international convention on the establishment of an international fund for compensation for oil pollution damage, implemented in the United Kingdom by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, of the total of approximately £57 million available for claims for the Sea Empress, about £49 million will be available from the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund and about £8 million from the Sea Empress insurers.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 1 March 1996, Official Report, column 755, who will meet costs associated with the Sea Empress disaster in the event that the special drawing rights are exhausted. [19481]

Mr. Norris: Assessments undertaken to date indicate that it is unlikely that there will be any shortfall in compensation funds from the ship's insurer or the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund. Under the international convention on the establishment of an international fund for compensation from oil pollution damage of 1971, should the amount of established claims exceed the amount available, the compensation shall be distributed in such a manner that the proportion between any established claim and the amount of compensation actually offered shall be the same for all claimants. There are also voluntary industry schemes, which may provide further compensation for the damage. The Government have agreed not to press their claim until other compensation is agreed.

Bus Companies (Privatisation)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to encourage the privatisation of local authority-owned bus companies. [20449]

Mr. Norris: The great majority of bus services in the United Kingdom are now provided by private sector bus companies. Since 1988, 28 local authority-owned bus companies, including the eight largest, have moved successfully into the private sector. We welcome this and are continuing to encourage the other bus company owners to consider seriously the options for privatisation.

At present there is a targeted relaxation in the set-aside rate for receipts by local authorities from sale of shares in their bus companies of 25 per cent.—and it had been intended that this would revert to the normal 50 per cent. rate with effect from 1 April. In order to assist local authorities planning to sell their bus companies in the next financial year, we have decided to extend the present set-aside rate of 25 per cent. for these sales to 31 March 1997.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19898]

Mr. Norris: The information requested about current competitions cannot be disclosed on the ground of commercial confidentiality.

Rail Freight (London)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many freight trains run along the Catford loop line towards London on Sundays between the hours of 11 pm and 9 am; and how many freight trains run along the Catford loop lines away from London on Sundays between the hours of 11 pm and 9 am; [19973]

(2) how many freight trains run along the Catford loop line towards London from Monday to Friday between the hours of 11 pm and 7 am; and how many freight trains run along the Catford loop line away from London from Monday to Friday between the hours of 11 pm and 7 am; [19971]

(3) how many freight trains run along the Catford loop line towards London on Saturdays between the hours of 11 pm and 8 am; and how many freight trains run along the Catford loop line away from London on Saturdays between the hours of 11 pm and 8 am. [19972]

Mr. Norris: The number of freight trains that are normally expected to run on the Catford loop line, in the direction and between the hours shown, are as follows:

Direction and time	Number of trains
Toward London between the hours of 11 pm (Sundays to Thursdays) and 7 am (Mondays to Fridays)	Up to 20
Away from London between the hours of 11 pm (Sundays to Thursdays) and 7 am (Mondays to Fridays)	Up to 21
Toward London between the hours of 11 pm Friday and 8 am Saturday	Up to 5

Direction and time	Number of trains
Away from London between the hours of 11 pm Friday and 8 am Saturday	Up to 15
Toward London between the hours of 11 pm Saturday and 9 am Sunday	Up to 4
Away from London between the hours of 11 pm Saturday and 9 am Sunday	Nil

There may be a need to run additional or replacement freight services due to diversions from other routes owing to night track maintenance or disruptions elsewhere. Similarly, fewer trains would run on the Catford loop line while track maintenance is carried out on that line.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make public the terms of the contracts he has signed with London and Continental Railways Ltd., the private sector promoter of the channel tunnel rail link; and if he will list the benefits of the channel tunnel rail link project to the nation. [20456]

Mr. Watts: Further to the undertaking given to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 29 February 1996, Official Report, column 1008, I have today placed in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office copies of a memorandum which summarises the most significant obligations of both London and Continental Railways and the Government under the terms of the contracts which were signed last week. Some of the aspects of the contracts are, and will remain, commercially confidential and have therefore been excluded. The memorandum provides further details of the benefits of the Channel tunnel rail link project to the nation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Abdul Quaayum Raja

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of those convicted of similar offences to Mr. Abdul Quaayum Raja (c48348) who have (a) received reductions in their security categories, (b) been guaranteed home leave and (c) granted parole; and if he will make a statement. [19775]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for a list of names of those convicted of similar offences to Mr. Abdul Quaayum Raja who have (a) received reductions in their security categories, (b) been guaranteed home leave and (c) granted parole.

A prisoner's security category is reviewed on a strictly individual basis and decisions are taken in the light of all the particular circumstances of the individual case. Comparisons with the cases of other prisoners is not therefore appropriate or useful in determining the security category of an individual prisoner.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will disclose to solicitors representing Abdul Quaayum Raja (C 48348) (a) reports and documentation on which the Security Category Review Committee reached conclusions about Mr. Raja's dedication to a political cause, (b) the full summary of the committee's June 1995 decision concerning Mr. Raja and (c) any new documentation available for Mr. Raja's 1996 review; and if he will make a statement. [19477]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about disclosure to solicitors representing Abdul Quaayum Raja of (a) any reports or documentation on which the Security Category Review Committee reached conclusions about Mr. Raja's dedication to a political cause, (b) the full summary of the Committee's June 1995 decision concerning Mr. Raja and (c) any new documentation available for Mr. Raja's 1996 review.

It is not the policy of the Prison Service to provide prisoners or their representatives with copies of reports prepared for the purposes of security category reviews. In accordance with the judgement, in December 1993, in the case of Regina v the Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex parte Duggan, a prisoner is, subject to any necessary exceptions arising out of the public interest immunity, informed of the gist of any matter of fact and/or opinion relevant to the determination of his security category; and given reasons for any decision which results in him remaining as a category A prisoner.

Mr. Raja's security category was last reviewed by the Category A Committee on 21 June 1995. The Committee's recommendation, which was subsequently approved by the Prison Service Director of Security, was that Mr. Raja should remain as a category A prisoner. The reasons for this decision were notified to Mr. Raja on 25 September 1995.

Arrangements for the 1996 review of Mr. Raja's security category are underway and reports have recently been requested from Long Lartin prison. He will in due course be provided with a gist of all information relevant to the determination of his security category and given an opportunity to comment before any decision is taken.

Thames Valley and Hampshire Police

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make additional resources available to Thames Valley and Hampshire police forces for the year 1996. [19780]

Mr. Maclean: Spending on the police in 1996–97 will increase in Thames Valley by 5 per cent. and in Hampshire by 3.9 per cent. over the previous year. This represents additional resources of £9.7 million and £6.6 million respectively.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost of policing the construction of the Newbury bypass to date. [19974]

Mr. Maclean: Policing of the bypass site is a joint operation between Thames Valley police and Hampshire constabulary.

As at 8 March, additional policing costs have been estimated by Thames Valley police to be about £930,000 and by Hampshire constabulary at about £240,000.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration detainees there were in each establishment in which they were held in January 1993, 1994, 1995 and 1996. [18895]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The available information on persons detained solely under Immigration Act 1988 powers on 31 January 1996 is given in the table; the data exclude non-asylum port cases in detention for less than a month, as information on these cases is not available centrally. Prisons (Illegal Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of Her Majesty's prisons is now free of illegal drugs use by inmates; and in which there is illegal drug use by 5 per cent. or more of their inmates. [18628]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 4 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Max Madden, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about illegal drug use in prisons.

Mandatory drug testing had been introduced in 120 prisons by the third week of February and will be introduced in remaining prisons by 31 March.

It is too early to identify trends in drug misuse because many prisons have been testing for three months or less and others have yet to begin.

Football

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the premier league and football league clubs giving the total cost of policing and the number of officers involved for each season since 1990–91. [19308]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Sackville: None. The Fire Service College is a part of the Home Office. It will continue to operate as a next steps agency.

Prisons (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the annual cost per prisoner in each prison in the Greater Manchester area. [18256]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Buckley Hall: £108,333

Hindley: £27,985

Buckley Hall did not start to take prisoners until 14 December 1994. The figure above is not a true annual cost but reflects the start-up costs and low initial prisoner population figures.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of prison inmates in each of the prisons in the Greater Manchester area who have been put on report for being in possession of illegal drugs, in each of the last 12 months. [18258]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning the number of prison inmates in each of the prisons in the Greater Manchester area who have been put on report for being in possession of illegal drugs.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about informing the community in the vicinity of an open prison of the presence of an individual prisoner serving a life sentence for rape.

There are no mechanisms in existence to inform the community in the vicinity of an open prison of the presence of an inmate serving a life sentence for rape.

However the Board of Visitors, whose members are drawn from the local community, do have free access to the prisoners and their records.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of assaults on prison officers working in special hospital units of prisons in England and Wales during 1995. [18086]

Provisional figures show that in 1995 the number of proven adjudications for assaults on staff of prison officer grade or another member of staff in prisons was 2,774. This figure includes any proven charges of attempting, inciting or assisting in an assault. Information is not available on the location of the assault within the establishment.

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the handling by his Department of its earlier responsibility for Hewell Grange, Worcestershire and the present state of this matter. [17809]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Andrew Faulds, dated 8 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the handling of responsibility for Hewell Grange, Worcestershire and the present state of this matter.

The future of Hewell Grange prison will be considered in the context of the recently completed review of open prisons.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mr. Soley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to buy or rent office space in the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham. [19363]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department, including its executive agencies, has no plans to rent or buy office accommodation in the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in the immediate future.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent from public funds in the last two financial years on cases brought by transsexuals in the European Court. [19259]

The Attorney-General: Legal costs amounting to £7,357 were incurred for the purposes of the Government's intervention in one case in the European Court of Justice.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been expended from public funds in each of the last five financial years in defence of actions brought by transsexuals against the Government or their Departments. [19258]

The Attorney-General: The information requested by the hon. Member is contained in my letter of 4 March to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile), which has been placed in the Libraries of the House. In summary, the total cost so far of the three current cases alleging breaches of the European convention on human rights is £26,245. The cost of the recent unsuccessful application for judicial review against the registrar general was £14,597. The cost of proceedings for unfair dismissal brought by a person who was dismissed by the Prison Service was £28,260.

TREASURY

Factor 8

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on charging value added tax on (a) recombinant factor 8 and (b) plasma-derived factor 8; how much of each is (i) exported and (ii) imported annually; and what revenue accrues to the Exchequer as a result. [19565]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Human blood and substances derived from it, including plasma-derived factor 8, are exempt from VAT under items 6 and 7 of group 7 of schedule 9 to the Value Added Tax Act 1994. Recombinant factor 8, being synthetic and not derived from human blood, does not fall within the exemption. Its taxable treatment is the same as that of other drugs and therapeutic products, both here and in other EC member states in accordance with the sixth VAT directive of 1977.

There are no official import or export data relating to these specific products.

The application of the standard rate of VAT to recombinant factor 8 is estimated to raise approximately £1.2 million per year.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue from the extension of value added tax to (a) newspapers, (b) children's shoes and (c) other exempt items. [19323]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs, published by Her Majesty's Treasury in July 1995, shows that the estimated cost of not applying standard rate VAT to certain groups of expenditure is as follows:

	£ million 1995–96
(a) Books, newspapers and magazines	1,200
(b) Children's clothing and footwear	750
(c) Other zero and reduced rate items	15,700
Exempt items	5,750

These figures make no allowance for changes in consumer behaviour.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19415]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As the table shows, seven written parliamentary questions and 99 letters from Members have been referred to the executive agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer since the arrangements for delegating replies to agencies were introduced in October and December 1992 respectively:

Year	Written Questions	Letters
1992	3	—
1993	—	16
1994	—	45
1995	2	36
1996 to date	2	2
	7	99

These are tiny proportions of Members' 7,500 written questions and 60,200 letters to Treasury Ministers over this period.

ENVIRONMENT

Cumbria County Council

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that public money allocated by Cumbria county council for the funding of trade union duties has not been spent on those trade union activities for which public money is not permitted to be used. [18813]

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to local authorities about the form in which they record expenses arising from their responsibilities to asylum seekers following the implementation of new benefit regulations on 5 February. [19612]

Local Government Officers (Pay)

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the statutory obligations on local authorities to publish the salaries and other employment costs of senior local government officers; and what assessment he has made of the availability of such information to the public. [19617]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have today laid before Parliament the Accounts and Audit Regulations 1996 which will require the annual statement of accounts of local authorities to disclose the number of employees whose remuneration falls in each bracket of a scale in multiples of £10,000 starting with £40,000. "Remuneration" means all amounts paid to or receivable by an employee, including the estimated money value of any benefits received or receivable otherwise than in cash. These new requirements will apply for the first time to the financial year 1996–97. Local authority statements of accounts will continue to be required to be published and to be available for public inspection.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19458]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information which identifies externally purchased computer processing is available only for 1991–92 to 1995–96.

The only external processing in this period provided by other departments was the payroll processing service from the Treasury Chessington Computer Centre and the superannuation service from the Paymaster General's Office.

Contracts with private sector contractors in this period were:

Contractor	Project	Expenditure per annum £
F International	Construction industry consultants and contractors registers	110,000
CFM	Construction industry consultants and contractors registers	180,000
CAM Ltd.	National dwelling and household survey	3,000
Peter Peregrinus Ltd.	Environmental research in Britain database	70,000

Flags

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 1 March, Official Report, column 747, what distinction is made between the flags of sovereign nations and states and those of non-sovereign nations, British dependencies, territories or colonies. [19606]

Sir Paul Beresford: The provision in schedule 2—class 1—to the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992 refer to "the national flag of any country", without further interpretation. It would be for the court to interpret how these provisions should apply to a particular flag. No judicial authority is known to my Department.

Fire Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has recently received from the Fire Brigades Union; and if he will make a statement. [19752]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Fire Brigades Union has made representations to the Department on overall fire service funding for 1996–97, on the fire service college and on the report of the interdepartmental review of fire safety legislation and enforcement in the UK. Overall fire service funding and the fire service college are matters for the Home Secretary. The Government's response to the report of the interdepartmental review will be given as soon as possible.

Leghold Traps

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the outcome of the discussions relating to animal leghold traps at the Environment Council on Monday 4 March. [20209]

Mr. Gummer: As a result of UK representations, supported by the Ministers of several other member states, the Commission was invited to produce a fixed timetable as soon as possible for the negotiations that it is conducting with the fur-producer countries. The Council also accepted unanimously the UK's proposals that the import ban on furs obtained by leghold traps should come into force on 1 January 1997, unless this final attempt at a negotiated agreement with the producer states on the introduction of alternative humane traps succeeds.

Released Animals (Disease)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on protocols to reduce the risk of disease from released animals being transferred to their own kind in the wild, or to species other than their own. [17908]

Mr. Clappison: No research has been commissioned into the risks of disease transference from released animals either to their own kind or to other species.

Environmental Appraisals

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the Housing Bill were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19544]

(2) if the Housing Bill has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department; [19543]

(3) how the Housing Bill was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19545]

(4) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the Housing Bill. [19546]

Mr. Clappison: The Housing Bill, introduced into Parliament on 18 January, implements policies set out in the White Paper, "Our Future Homes", published in June 1995. Referring to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to the hon. Lady on Wednesday 22 November 1995, Official Report column 114, environmental considerations were taken into account in the preparation of this White Paper, and a specific chapter on "Housing and the Environment" set out the Government's aim of meeting demand for housing in an environmentally sustainable way.

The specific provisions in the Bill do not have significant environmental implications. The environmental and sustainable development implications of housing policy more generally will, however, continue to be kept under review, in accordance with the Department's guidance.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by his Department on the forthcoming proposals to revise the outdoor advertisement control regime. [19579]

Sir Paul Beresford: The consultation paper entitled "Outdoor Advertisement Control: Areas of Special Control of Advertisements" is intended to contribute to the policy appraisal process. The paper and the accompanying research consultants' report outline the environmental consequences of possible changes to the areas of special advertisement control regime. The responses to consultation will help to complete the appraisal process before my right hon. Friend's decision is taken.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by his Department on the forthcoming guidance to the Environment Agency. [19578]

Mr. Clappison: An environmental appraisal conducted according to "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" was not appropriate for the forthcoming guidance to the Environment Agency. The guidance was concerned not with identifying and judging policy options but rather with advising the agency on its objectives and the contribution it should make towards achieving sustainable development.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how the Housing Contracts, Construction and Development Bill was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19541]

(2) if the Housing Contracts, Construction and Development Bill has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department; [19539]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the Housing Contracts, Construction and Development Bill; [19542]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the Housing Contracts, Construction and Development Bill were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [19540]

Mr. Clappison: The housing provisions within the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill implements policies set out in the White Paper, "Our Future Homes", published in June 1995. Referring to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to the hon. Lady on Wednesday 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 114, environmental considerations were taken into account in the preparation of this White Paper, and a specific chapter on "Housing and the Environment" set out the Government's aim of meeting demand for housing in an environmentally sustainable way.

Of the other provisions, the Bill will enable a wider range of energy saving measures to become eligible for grants made in connection with the home energy efficiency scheme. The proposed powers for financial assistance under the single regeneration budget will support activities that help to create an attractive and safe environment. The other provisions within the Bill have little or no environmental impact.

In implementing the policies and provisions within this Bill, environmental and sustainable development considerations will be assessed in accordance with the Department's guidance as it relates to each policy area. For example, successful schemes under the single regeneration budget challenge fund will be monitored to ensure that the intended outputs, including improvements to land and buildings, waste management, recycling schemes, etcetera, are achieved.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Policy Guidelines for the Coast"; [19526]

(2) "Policy Guidelines for the Coast" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [19523]

(3) What alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Policy Guidelines for the Coast" were considered in the environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19524]

(4) how "Policy Guidelines for the Coast" was modified by the results of environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [19525]

Mr. Clappison: An environmental appraisal conducted according to "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" was not appropriate for the recent DOE publication "Policy Guidelines for the Coast" as this set out—in summary form—existing policies on the various issues described.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the draft circular "Local Government Change and the planning system" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department; [19531]

(2) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the draft circular "Local Government Change and the Planning System" were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19532]

(3) how the draft circular "Local Government Change and the Planning System" was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [19533]

(4) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the draft circular "Local Government Change and the Planning System". [19534]

Sir Paul Beresford: An environmental appraisal conducted according to "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" was not appropriate for the consultation draft circular "Local Government Change and the Planning System". The draft circular is not concerned with identifying and judging new planning policies; its purpose is to explain how development plan functions and procedures will be affected by changes made following the Local Government Commission's review of local government structure, and how transitional regulations will enable work in progress on development plans to continue after those changes come into effect.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the consultation paper, "Planning Obligations"—draft revised DOE circular 16/91—has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by his Department; [19535]

(2) how the consultation paper "Planning Obligations"—draft revised DOE circular 16/91— was modified by the results of environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [19537]

(3) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the consultation paper "Planning Obligations"—draft revised DOE circular 16/91—were considered in environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [19536]

(4) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the consultation paper "Planning Obligations"—draft revised DOE circular 16/91. [19538]

Sir Paul Beresford: An environmental appraisal conducted according to "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" was not appropriate for the consultation draft circular "Planning Obligations"—proposed as a replacement for DOE circular 16/91. The draft revised circular is not concerned with identifying and judging new planning policies; its purpose is rather to reaffirm the advice contained in circular 16/91 in the light of recent legal decisions and to clarify existing guidance on detailed matters.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the results of the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by his Department on the forthcoming consultation paper on draft hedgerow regulations. [19577]

Mr. Clappison: The Government expressed their commitment to the protection of key hedgerows in the 1990 White Paper "This Common Inheritance". This commitment was renewed in 1994 when the results of a survey into hedgerow changes between 1990 and 1993 were published. The report showed that, although the rate of hedgerow removal has slowed and was now broadly balanced by that for new planting, hedgerows of key importance were still at risk. Consideration of the environmental impacts that would result if action was not taken to address this trend has therefore been a major factor throughout the development of our policy, and will inform the forthcoming consultation paper on hedgerow protection regulations. The regulations themselves will be introduced only after careful consideration of all responses received.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the savings to business from the Deregulation (Building) (Initial Notices and Final Certificates) Order 1996. [19500]

Mr. Clappison: The estimated saving to business that will result from this order is £68,000 per annum.

Waste Classification

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he expects the report on the consultation exercise on the system for classifying waste for the national waste classification system; and if he will publish the results; [19692]

(2) if he will make it his policy to extend the scope of the proposed category 1 of the system for classifying waste for the national waste classification system to include salt purification waste; [19696]

(3) if he will change the emphasis in the system for classifying wastes for the national waste classification system between the natural qualities of the material and their disposal method and the process through which they may pass. [19697]

Mr. Clappison: The national waste classification scheme is being introduced with several aims:

to provide a means to describe waste consistently that will assist waste producers and the waste management industry in assessing the wastes they have to deal with;

to help promote consistency of waste management licensing and the effectiveness of the duty of care; and to assist the new environment agencies in their waste management planning roles to provide the sort of information on the production and management of waste that is needed for the development of sound waste strategies at both local and national level.

The stage 2 consultation paper on the national waste classification scheme classifies waste by both the intrinsic properties and its origins. I propose to keep to these principles in the third stage of consultation.

Responses to stage 2 of the consultation exercise, including those about the classification of salt purification waste, are being considered. The results will be published next month as part of the third stage of consultation. This will involve the introduction of the scheme on a non-statutory basis from April, so that its use can be fully assessed.

Water (Conservation and Consumer Choice) Bill

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the Water (Conservation and Consumer Choice) Bill. [19779]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 8 March 1996]: The Department has received about 3,000 representations to date. Almost all have been inspired by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds' campaign, which urges members to write in support of the Bill. The majority of the representations dealt with reflect that view.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of his Department in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19801]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following information gives the numbers of professional scientists and engineers each year from 1991 to the current year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to amend the public interest immunity certificates issued in the litigation brought by Andrew Balfour. [18811]

Mr. Hanley: The public interest immunity certificates issued have been upheld by the Court of Appeal, and there are no plans to amend them.

Iran

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the introduction of international trade sanctions against Iran. [19762]

Mr. Hanley: We have a number of serious concerns about Iranian policy which we and our European Union partners make clear to the Iranian Government. Exports to Iran are strictly controlled. But we do not believe that an international trade embargo would be practicable.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) of 31 January, Official Report, column 766, if he will ensure that no licences will be granted for export of equipment to the former Yugoslavia that could be used in the development of indigenous arms industries. [19956]

Mr. David Davis: We will consider all export licence applications for defence equipment to the former Yugoslavia on a case by case basis as explained in the answer to which the hon. Member refers.

For the duration of the implementation force's deployment, our primary objective will be the safety of British troops.

Kenya

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions Her Majesty's Government are taking to promote increased investment from the United Kingdom to Kenya; and if he will make a statement. [17102]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

My Department, together with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Overseas Development Administration, is offering assistance to the Kenyan Government in their efforts to attract investment through financial and technical assistance and the introduction of key Kenyan individuals to UK organisations for attracting inward investment. We are also making potential UK investors aware of the opportunities in Kenya through our trade promotion programme.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Sierra Leone with particular reference to allegations of breaches of human rights. [19342]

Mr. Hanley: Any lasting improvement in the political and human rights situations in Sierra Leone depends on the restoration of accountable, civilian government and an end to the rebel war. We therefore welcome the elections held on 26 and 27 February as well as the opening of peace talks between Sierra Leone authorities and the Revolutionary United Front.

Mr. Omar al Hassan

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about Mr. Omar al Hassan; and if he will make a statement. [17855]

Mr. Hanley: From time to time, this Department receives information about Dr. al Hassan and the Gulf Centre for Strategic Studies.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) upon what criteria the successful bids for British Coal Enterprise will be chosen; and if he will make a statement; [19894]

(2) how many bids have been made for British Coal Enterprise; and by whom. [19893]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise is a matter for British Coal. I understand, however, that the corporation has announced that two management buy-out teams have been identified as preferred bidders for the business funding and outplacement arms of BCE. Discussions will be continuing with a number of parties about the sale of the company's property portfolio.

When launching the sales process for BCE, British Coal indicated that it would be considering proposals for the company in the light of its statutory duties and the importance of ensuring continuation of effective assistance to coalfield communities.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many bids (a) he has received, (b) he has rejected and (c) are still under consideration for British Coal Enterprise; and if he will make a statement; [19127]

(2) what criteria the bidding party has to fulfil to be accepted as the buyer of British Coal Enterprise; and if he will make a statement; [19128]

(3) if he will make it his policy that the present level of economic regeneration in coal mining communities be maintained after the sale of British Coal Enterprise; [19129]

(4) if the sale of British Coal Enterprise will go ahead if the European Commission requires repayment of some or all of European regional development fund loans; [19130]

(5) if he will make it his policy that the money generated from the sale of British Coal Enterprise be used on new projects to regenerate coalfield areas; and if he will make a statement; [19131]

(6) if he will make it a condition of sale of British Coal Enterprise that the buyer will retain its activities in the United Kingdom coalfields; and if he will make a statement; [19132]

(7) what extra funding the coalfield areas fund will receive after the sale of British Coal Enterprise; [19133]

(8) when he will announce which bid has won the contract to buy British Coal Enterprise. [19134]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise is a matter for British Coal. When launching the sales process, British Coal indicated that it would be considering proposals for the BCE in the light of its statutory duties and the importance of ensuring continuation of effective assistance to coalfield communities.

The Government's continuing support for economic regeneration in the coalfields is provided through regional selective assistance and the single regeneration budget, in addition to the availability of European structural funds.

Where projects supported by ERDF grant or the associated grant payments are complete, the Government do not believe that the sale of BCE or of its workspace activities, will affect the status of the projects or of the grants, provided that the assets continue to be used for eligible purposes and in accordance with the terms of the relevant offers of grant.

Where projects supported by ERDF grant or the associated grant payments are not complete, or where offers of grant are still to be made in response to applications from BCE, the Government will seek assurances from any prospective purchaser of BCE, or of its work space activities, that it will complete the projects in accordance with the terms of the offer of ERDF grant, continue to use the assets for eligible purposes and comply with the other requirements, both of the Government and of European Community law, as they relate to the offer of those grants.

The corporation has announced that two management buy-out teams have been identified as preferred bidders for for the business funding and outplacement arms of BCE. Discussions will be proceeding with a number of parties about the sale of the company's property portfolio. The corporation expects that the process will be concluded at or shortly after the end of March 1996.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to paragraphs D1.27 and D1.28 of the Scott report, if he will list those matters relating to the work of his Department since 1979 classified as matters about which successive administrations have refused to answer. [17418]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 February 1996]: The Principal Clerk to the Table Office gave evidence in 1972 to a Select Committee appointed

"to consider the practice and procedure in relation to Questions and Question Time", giving a list of matters about which successive Administrations have refused to answer. This list is referred to in the current edition of "Erskine May." Subjects listed under the Department of Trade and Industry are as follows:

- Commercial activities of the Overseas Marketing Corporation
- Trade Statistics for Scotland
- Financial support for trade fairs in the UK
- Relations between ECGD and individual exporters
- Reasons for refusal to refer mergers to monopolies Commission

- Advice from Economic Planning Councils
- Details of financial assistance to individual companies
- Individual applicants for IDCs
- Details of export licenses
- Details of air miss inquiries
- Individual transactions between National Film Finance Corporation and Customers.

Some of these subjects no longer fall within the responsibilities of my Department.

On 9 November 1979, the then Secretary of State for Trade and the Under-Secretary of State for Industry stated that it was not possible to provide an exhaustive list of subjects on which they would decline to answer and that each question would be considered on its merits, Official Report, columns 365 and 338. This is still the case.

Warren Springs Laboratory

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the research projects relating to the aviation industry undertaken by the Warren Springs laboratory in the five years prior to its closure. [19086]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19040]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of equipment stolen or otherwise unaccounted for from the Department during the last five years are set out.

All incidents involving losses exceeding £5,000 are listed individually, to the nearest £1,000.

	Value (£)

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Nursery Education

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library for each of the local education authority areas participating in her scheme for early years education, the names of the providers who have agreed to supply existing, or new places, for the scheme together with the number of full-time equivalent places offered and the nature of their settings. [17869]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 28 February 1996]: A list of providers classified by type has been placed in the Library of the House. The estimated number of four-year-olds in the maintained sector in each of the phase 1 authorities is listed below.

LEA	Estimates number of four year-olds in maintained provision at January 1995
Kensington and Chelsea	800
Wandsworth	2,600
Westminster	1,100
Norfolk	6,300

Travel to Interview Scheme

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors underlay her decision to extend the qualifying period of unemployment to be eligible for assistance under the travel to interview scheme from four to 13 weeks. [19101]

Mr. Forth: From April 1996, the travel to interview scheme will form part of a package of measures for people who have been unemployed for 13 weeks. It will support jobseeker's who are required to widen their search for jobs after they have been unemployed for 13 weeks and who, after the introduction of jobseeker's allowance, will be interviewed and expected to review their jobseeker's agreement at that point.

Youth Training (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many eligible young people in (a) Doncaster and (b) the Mexborough area of South Yorkshire are currently unable to obtain a place on a youth training scheme; and what this figure was 12 months ago. [19350]

Mr. Paice: The information is not available in the format requested.

In the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council area, no young person within the youth training guarantee group was awaiting a place on youth training at January 1996. At the same time last year only one young person in the guarantee group had been waiting more than eight weeks for a training place.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19466]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Access to Work

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton) of 14 December 1995, Official Report, column 738, what research her Department has undertaken into how many people will not be able to participate in the access to work scheme as a result of the priority setting; and if she will review the possibility of making available extra funding for the scheme. [19321]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 11 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about research into the number of people participating in the Access to Work programme; and about funding for the programme.

We have not undertaken research into how many people will not be able to participate in the programme as a result of the priority setting announced by the secretary of state on 14 December; although we know that about 80% of new applicants were employed.

The report of major research on Access to Work overall after its first year of operation will be published imminently.

By the end of January 1996 12,749 people (of whom 8,799 were new applicants) had been helped by Access to Work compared to 10,394 in the whole of 1994/5. Significant extra funds have been provided to make this possible.

I hope this is helpful.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in her Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19427]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is a matter of public record, but it could be extracted in the form requested only at disproportionate cost.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional assisted places are to be made available, by school, in the north of England. [19622]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested for schools already participating in the assisted places scheme is given in the table:

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will announce shortly the allocation of a further 1,100 entry places in September 1996 at 60 or so schools in England not currently participating in the scheme.

Higher Education Funding (London)

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was (a) the recurrent and formula capital grant for each higher education institution in London for 1995–96 and 1996–97, (b) the percentage variation in the level of grants between these years and (c) the total figures for institutions in Greater London. [19658]

Mr. Forth: This information was published on 29 February and communicated to institutions by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in its circular 4/96, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Jobcentres (Lancashire)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many complaints were received about the services provided by jobcentres in Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; [19628]

(2) what assessments she has made of the performance of jobcentres in (a) Burnley, (b) Pendle and (c) Rossendale measured against charter standards in the last 12 months. [19660]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 11 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your two recent written questions. The first concerned the number of complaints received about the services offered by Jobcentres in the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale areas. The second question asked what assessment had been made of the performance of these Jobcentres against Charter standards.

As both questions relate to information obtained through monitoring performance against the Jobseeker's Charter, I am dealing with both questions in this reply.

The Jobseeker's Charter sets out obligations both of the Employment Service (ES) to deliver services, and of its clients. It informs jobseekers about the standards of service they can expect when visiting or calling ES offices, the help we provide, and what we expect from our clients. It is a valuable medium to demonstrate to jobseekers and others that ES is committed to looking at the services we provide, and that we actively seek to improve our standards, where possible. As part of this process, complaints about our services and suggestions for improving them are encouraged and welcomed.

Jobseeker's Charter statistical and monitoring returns are completed on a quarterly basis and, during the 12 months ended December 1995, within the Burnley ES District (which covers the areas of Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale), 61 complaints were recorded.

This should be viewed in the context of staff in the district making 120,000 job submissions and conducting over 29,000 advisory interviews during that period. You should also be aware that 45 letters were received, complimenting the ES on the service it provides locally.

As well as recording suggestions and complaints, the ES currently monitors performance against five standards of service set out in its Jobseeker's Charter. These are:

Telephone answering times (within 30 seconds)

Waiting times (Clients to be seen within 10 minutes)

Answering correspondence (replies to written correspondence within 5 working days)

Currency of vacancies (during a sample week)

Speed and accuracy of payments

The performance levels achieved by Jobcentres in Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale in the last four quarters is detailed below. Unfortunately, some of these standards are monitored at District, rather than Jobcentre, level , so the performance information contained in the table relates to all nine offices in the Burnley ES District, rather than just those in Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale.

Burnley ES District

Percentage

Standard	Quarter ending March 1995	June 1995	September 1995	December 1995
Telephone answering time	100	96.5	85	92.8
Waiting time	90	99	97.1	99.4
Answering correspondence	100	100	100	100
Currency of vacancies	96	95.9	96	94
Speed and accuracy of payment	96.3	97.4	95.8	100

Performance against standards is regularly reviewed by ES managers and improvements are continually sought where possible. I hope this is helpful.

Age of Transfer, Burnham

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to determine the proposals from Buckinghamshire county council for a change in age of transfer in the Burnham area. [19442]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will determine these proposals as quickly as is compatible with a full and careful consideration of all comments made and the educational issues involved.

Teacher Training Agency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria have been used by the Teacher Training Agency to appoint the members of the working groups which will develop draft standards for teachers; and if she will list the membership of each group and their professional qualifications. [19441]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will ask the chairman of the Teacher Training Agency, Mr. Geoffrey Parker, to write to the hon. Member as soon as the membership of the groups is finalised.

Student Grants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students in higher education in Wales have received (a) mandatory and (b) discretionary grants in each of the last five years; what percentage of students this represents in each case; and what is the annual average amount of the grant in each case in each of the last five years. [19921]

Mr. Forth: The information requested for the academic years 1989–90 to 1993–94, the latest year for which data are available, is given in the following table. Since 1990–91, eligible students have also had access to non means-tested student loans. It is not possible to say what percentage of students received awards because some awards are made to students in private institutions for which population data are not available. The number of full-time and sandwich students in the final column is therefore given for illustration only.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of her Department in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19800]

Mr. Robin Squire: There are no practising professional scientists working in the Department for Education and Employment. The number of professional engineers is shown in the table:

Number of staff by grade

Date	Grade 7 engineer	Grade 6 engineer	Senior professional and technology officer
1 January 1991	1	0	2
1 January 1992	1	0	1
1 January 1993	1	0	1
1 January 1994	1	0	1
1 January 1995	0	1	1
1 January 1996	0	1	1

There are other professionally qualified engineers and scientists working in mainstream grades, but information on these staff is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Student Loans

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students in higher education in Wales have received loans from the Student Loans Company in each year that it has been granting them; and what has been the percentage of students claiming in each year and the annual average amount of the loan. [19922]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the table. Figures are shown from the academic year 1990–91, when the student loan scheme was introduced, to 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available.

Student loans made to students studying in Wales

Academic year	Number of loans taken out	Loans as a percentage of eligible students (Percentage)	Average loan £

PRIME MINISTER

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to take up the recent suggestion by the United States Government regarding the declassification of hitherto secret data on plutonium to encourage other nations with military plutonium stocks to declassify and release similar data. [20267]

The Prime Minister: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to reveal details of the United Kingdom's stocks of fissile materials held for defence purposes.

Hong Kong (Visit)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Hong Kong. [19665]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend) on 7 March, Official Report, columns 315–16.

Royal Residences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those members of the royal family living in accommodation a contribution to the upkeep of which is made from public funds. [19649]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of National Heritage to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 13 February, Official Report, column 547.

Weapons Licensing

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to make the Ministry of Defence the licensing authority in respect of weapons and goods licensable under the military list. [17207]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the speech made by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 26 February, Official Report, columns 589-604. The Department of Trade and Industry is to undertake a review of the current export control powers and procedures, following which a consultation paper will be produced.

Special Advisers

Mr. Hall: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a list of Ministers who have requested prior assent from the Prime Minister, under "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", paragraph 75, for payment from public funds to meet the expenses of special advisers whose salary is not met from public funds accompanying Ministers on overseas visits; and if he will indicate which requests were granted and which were refused for each year since 1990. [17495]

The Prime Minister: None.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister what percentage of European Community legislation has been simplified or repealed in the past year, as referred to in his oral answer of 12 April 1994, Official Report, column 18. [19618]

The Prime Minister: The answer that I gave on 12 April 1994 refers to the Commission estimate of the reduction in the volume of EC legislation arising from recommendations in the report on subsidiarity which was presented to the European Council meeting in Brussels in December 1993. In its "Better Law Making" report to the Madrid European Council in December 1995, the Commission reported on progress in implementing the Brussels programme. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House. Although the number of new Commission legislative proposals continues to decline, down from 48 in 1993 to a forecast of 19 in the 1996 work programme, the Government want the Commission to do more. I therefore welcome the remit given to the Commission by the Madrid European Council to bring forward further proposals to repeal and simplify both existing and proposed legislation.

Ex-service Men and Women

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of interdepartmental co-operation in relation to ex-service affairs; and if he will meet the chairman of the Royal British Legion to discuss his views on this matter. [19670]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so. My noble Friend Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish has regular meetings with ex-services organisations, including the Royal British Legion. In addition, my noble Friends Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish and Lord Henley met the Royal British Legion on 23 November 1994 to discuss the provision of Government services to ex-service men and women.

The Government's continuing commitment is to ensure that all Departments provide an effective service for every citizen.

Biodiversity Steering Group

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister which Departments are involved in the cross-sectional steering group on the United Kingdom biodiversity action plan; and what assistance they are giving the Department of the Environment. [17909]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom biodiversity steering group included officials from the Department of the Environment, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Forestry Commission.

The steering group published its report containing advice on the Government on 13 December 1995. Departments throughout Whitehall, including those involved in the steering group, are assisting the Department of the Environment in preparing the Government's response to the report. We expect to publish this in the spring of 1996.

Welsh Office (Permanent Secretary)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to announce the appointment of the new permanent secretary of the Welsh Office. [19668]

The Prime Minister: The next permanent secretary of the Welsh Office will be selected following an open competition and the appointment will then be announced in the normal way.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 February, Official Report, columns 101-2, if he will set out in the same format information relating to (a) overstayers and (b) convicted criminals awaiting deportation; and if he will ensure that the figures relating to the three categories concerned are contained in future statistical publications. [19616]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is given in tables A and B covering all overstayers and convicted criminals respectively, including those who have applied for asylum. Information on asylum seekers in detention—which account for the great majority of immigration detainees—is already published in the annual Home Office statistical bulletin on asylum statistics, copies of which are in the Library. There are no plans to publish, in the half-yearly bulletin or annual Command Paper on immigration statistics, detailed analyses of the additional categories of immigration detainee.

Private Security Industry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he is undertaking, and with whom, on the statutory regulation of the private security industry; and if he will make a statement. [19353]

Mr. Maclean: We have spoken to the police, the industry, other Government Departments, and have examined evidence given to the Home Affairs Select Committee inquiry into the private security industry. We are now consulting Cabinet colleagues on the way forward.

Convicted Prisoners (Deportation)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that forms required under the Immigration Act 1971 to be filled in by convicted prisoners liable to deportation on conclusion of their sentences are not given to prisoners to whom they do not apply. [19506]

Mr. Kirkhope: I am not aware of any form required to be completed under the Immigration Act 1971 by people in this category. A person charged with an offence punishable with imprisonment may be served by the arresting authority with a notice warning him of his liability to deportation. The notice—IM3—sets out categories of persons who are not liable to deportation and every effort is made to ensure that notices are not given to people who are not so liable.

Anabolic Steroids

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 November, Official Report, columns 292–93, when the Government will lay the draft modification order to the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 to outlaw the use of anabolic steroids and other similar drugs. [19311]

Mr. Sackville: We hope to lay the draft modification order very soon.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of family break-ups caused by the abuse of anabolic steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs in each year from 1979; [19320]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of violent crimes caused by the abuse of anabolic steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs in each year since 1979. [19319]

Mr. Sackville: No data are available to enable any such estimates to be made.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19422]

Mr. Howard: The information in the form requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Football

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the premier league and Endsleigh league clubs giving separately the total season's attendance at (a) matches played in the premier league and football league and (b) matches played in the FA cup and Coca-Cola cup along with (i) the total number of arrests and (ii) arrests as a percentage of total attendance at each category of such matches accurate to four decimal places for the seasons (1) 1990–91, (2) 1991–92, (3) 1992–93, (4) 1993–94 and (5) 1994–95. [19309]

Mr. Maclean: The hon. Member has previously received such information for seasons 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 15 February 1995, Official Report, columns 691–93, for details about the 1993–94 season. Details for the other seasons referred to were provided under cover of ministerial correspondence of 31 July 1991 and 1 February 1994—copies were also placed in the Library.

Information in the requested format for season 1994–95 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Arrests during season 1994–95 for premier league, Endsleigh league, FA cup and Coca-Cola cup matches is provided.

Premier League: 1,723
Endsleigh League: 2,127
FA Cup: 914
Coca-Cola Cup: 308

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has brought computer capacity from (a) other departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19465]

Mr. Howard: There are no records of computer capacity in my Department having been bought from other Departments or from the private sector since 1987.

Fire Fighters (Pensions)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the next meeting will be held of the review group, to review the pension arrangements for fire fighters; and when it will conclude its studies and publish its findings. [19764]

Mr. Sackville: No such meeting has been arranged. I hope that it will soon be possible to circulate a consultation document on the review group's findings to the fire service organisations.

Fire Brigades Union

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has recently received from the Fire Brigades Union; and if he will make a statement. [19753]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations from the Fire Brigades Union. Issues raised in recent months have included fire service funding, fire safety, the Fire Service College and the new brigade structure in Wales. All these representations have received, or will be given, considered replies.

Fire Brigades (Standards)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fire brigades failed to meet the statutory minimum standards for their rescue and firefighting role in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Northern Ireland in 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [19758]

Mr. Sackville: I am satisfied that, in general, all brigades in England and Wales remain able to meet the nationally recommended standards of fire cover which are set out in terms of the response times that fire brigades are expected to maintain. Her Majesty's inspectors of fire services draw attention to any exceptions in the course of their inspections of brigades. It is for the fire authority concerned to take the appropriate action in any such case. Responsibilities for brigades in Scotland and Northern Ireland are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, respectively.

Peter Welch

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Peter Welch was awarded compensation by the European Court of Human Rights. [20529]

Mr. Maclean: Peter Welch claimed compensation of £320,596, but this claim was rejected by the court. In its judgment dated 26 February, the court ruled that Peter Welch's alleged losses could not legitimately be said to result from the application to him of the confiscatory provisions of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986. Therefore, no compensation was awarded, nor did the court grant him any costs in bringing the claim.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of his Department in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19802]

Mr. Howard: The figures for the main Home Office, excluding Agencies, for 1993–96 are as follows. Figures are not available in the form requested for 1991 and 1992.

Departmental Staff Guidelines

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department provides regarding employees and recent ex-employees taking up positions with companies tendering for his Department's contracts. [19677]

Mr. Howard: All staff who are offered employment within two years of leaving Crown service—or outside normal working hours while still in the service—by organisations with which they have had official dealings must apply for approval under the business appointment rules. The rules are set out in standing guidance to staff and also in the civil service management code; they are part of all civil servants' conditions of service. Staff are reminded of the rules when they join the Department and on leaving the civil service.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are currently adopted in Buckley Hall prison to stop the smuggling into the prison of (a) alcohol, (b) cannabis and other illegal drugs and (c) other items; and what plans there are to increase the number of searches carried out on (i) male and (ii) female prison visitors. [19793]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the procedures currently adopted at Buckley Hall prison to stop smuggling, and whether there are any plans to increase the number of searches carried out on both male and female prison visitors.

Every visitor to Buckley Hall prison is already searched before being allowed to visit a prisoner. In addition all visitors are required to pass through a metal detector portal. Procedures for the regular searching of staff are also in place.

Other procedures at Buckley Hall prison to prevent any attempt to smuggle alcohol, cannabis, other illegal drugs or any other items into the prison are extensive. These include the searching of all items accompanying visitors which may hold illicit items. Items taken into the visiting room are x-rayed and there is camera and video monitoring of visits.

Prevention of Terrorism Acts

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many exclusion orders under the prevention of terrorism Acts are still in force. [20313]

Mr. Howard: There are currently 33 people subject to exclusion orders, 29 from Great Britain and four from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been released without charge after being (a) arrested and (b) detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Acts for each calendar year since 1974. [20315]

Mr. Howard: The figures relate to persons arrested and/or detained under section 14 or schedule 5 to the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act. The table additionally shows numbers for those detainees who, although not charged, were subsequently made the subject of exclusion orders, were deported, or removed under the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have taken place in the terms of reference of the Lloyd review of the prevention of terrorism acts since the resumption of violence connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland. [20316]

Mr. Howard: None.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buy-out consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market-testing schemes in his Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19905]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 8 March 1996]: Neither Capita Managed Services nor Lusis Business Solutions is currently involved in bidding for any of the projects listed.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Crashes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) the Royal Navy Sea Harrier T4 which crashed near Wellington, Somerset, on 23 February and (b) the Royal Air Force Tornado GR1 which crashed near Issam, Germany, on 26 February last has a major service; who carried it out; and if he will make a statement. [19312]

Mr. Soames: All Royal Navy and Royal Air Force aircraft are maintained in accordance with the appropriate authorised servicing cycle and approved maintenance procedures. Harrier T Mk 4 XZ445 underwent its last scheduled basic maintenance, the deepest appropriate level of maintenance, in 1994. This was carried out by the Maintenance Group Defence Agency at RAF St. Athan. The aircraft's last scheduled servicing was carried out on the parent squadron in January 1996. The servicing policy for RAF Tornados was explained in my answer to the hon. Member on 8 March 1996, Official Report, columns 368-69.

Tornado GR1 ZD845's last major servicing was carried out in August 1995 at the operating unit. The separate boards of inquiry into these aircraft losses are on-going; a summary of the board's findings will be placed in the Library of the House in due course.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current damage and repair status of Tornado GR1 serial number ZD844; what repair work is schedules for this aircraft; where such repairs will be carried out; and what is the expected date of re-entry to service of this aircraft. [19756]

Mr. Soames: Tornado GR1 ZD844 was involved in a mid-air collision over Canada on 1 August 1994. The aircraft, which landed safely, sustained varying degrees of damage to the left-hand engine intake, engine bay door, main landing gear, fuselage and left wing. Repairs to the damaged wing are being carried out by the Maintenance Group Defence Agency at RAF St. Athan. Repairs to the fuselage are being undertaken using service manpower at RAF Marham. It is expected that ZD844 will re-enter service in 1997.

Dismissals (Drug Offences)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel have been (a) charged with drug offences and (b) subsequently dismissed for such offences in each of the last 10 years. [19486]

Mr. Soames: The information is not available in the format requested, but we are able to provide the following information for the nine-year period 1986 to 1994:

(a) The number of armed forces personnel convicted of drug offences:

1986: 131
1987: 145
1988: 105
1989: 196
1990: 339
1991: 426
1992: 612
1993: 513
1994: 296

(b) The number subsequently dismissed[1] for such offences:

1986: 60
1987: 56
1988: 67
1989: 68
1990: 118
1991: 165
1992: 225
1993: 152
1994: 112

[1]The figures relate to those sentenced to dismissal from service at court martial, summary trial or were dismissed following a sentence of imprisonment from a service or civilian court.

Empty Properties

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many MOD properties in Hampshire are currently empty; and if he will indicate the number of properties in each local authority area. [19623]

Mr. Soames: No central record is maintained of the number of buildings other than married quarters which may be empty at any given time. At 7 March 1996, there were 831 married quarters in the following council areas:

	Number
East Hampshire DC	53
Fareham DC	21
Gosport BC	238
Hart DC	22
Havant DC	20
Portsmouth CC	142
Ruchmoor BC	120
Test Valley BC	101
Winchester CC	63
New Forest DC	51

Married Quarters Discounted Sale Scheme

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) of 1 March, Official Report, column 766, how many personnel will be eligible for the interest-free advance scheme; and if personnel made redundant between 1 March and 1 August will be eligible for the scheme. [19833]

Mr. Soames: Some 23 per cent. of Army and RAF personnel will qualify by age for the long service advance of pay scheme, but significantly fewer personnel are expected to join the scheme because the pattern of service in the Army and RAF promotes accompanied service and this can deter home ownership in some circumstances.

The Royal Navy has enjoyed the benefits of LSAP since 1963 and, because of the pattern of family separation which is inherent in a sea-going service, it has promoted a housing policy which does not differentiate between accompanied or unaccompanied service when ashore. The historical take-up rate of LSAP in the RN is approximately 40 per cent. of all eligible personnel, and represent an annual maximum uptake of 1,500 personnel. Although take-up figures can be only speculative, the RN trends, with the differing age qualifications and accompanied service preferences of the Army and RAF, would indicate an average of 1,200 new LSAP members each year. This would represent a threefold increase over those who have annually benefited from the married quarters discounted sales scheme.

Army or RAF personnel made redundant between now and 1 August 1996 will not be able to take advantage of the scheme. They will, however, still be able to apply to purchase a home under the married quarter discounted sales scheme, which will remain in force until 1 August 1996.

Abbey Wood

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 141, what additional payments have been claimed by the construction contractors for the new MOD building at Abbey Wood. [20087]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We respect the commercial in confidence nature of contractual and claims issues which are between the Department and the contractors concerned. As is our normal practice, claims against the Department are reviewed and processed in accordance with the contract terms—action which has and is being taken in respect of claims submitted by the shell and core contractor. As I have said, there is a constructive dialogue going on between the Department and the contractor. Both the contractor and the Department are working positively to realise the project's programme objectives.

Future Large Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his French counterpart concerning the future large aircraft programme. [20196]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I met Henri Conzé, délegué général pour l'armement on Friday 1 March. The future large aircraft programme was discussed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has not recently discussed the future large aircraft programme with his French counterpart.

Scott Inquiry

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes his Department will introduce in relation to defence exports following the Scott inquiry report. [20197]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department will participate fully in the review of the Government's existing export control powers and procedures being undertaken by the Department of Trade and Industry. In addition, my Department will take the lead in the review of the convention on the disclosure of information about defence exports.

Otterburn Training Area

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what alternative courses of action from those listed in "Improving the Training Infrastructure at Otterburn Training Area: The MOD's Aspirations for the Next Five Years" were considered in environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department; [19528]

(2) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Improving the Training Infrastructure at Otterburn Training Area: The MOD's Aspirations for the Next Five Years"; [19530]

(3) if "Improving the Training Infrastructure at Otterburn Training Area: The MOD's Aspirations for the Next Five Years" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" produced by the Department of the Environment; [19527]

(4) how "Improving the Training Infrastructure at Otterburn Training Area: The MOD's Aspirations for the Next Five Years" was modified by the results the environmental appraisals undertaken by his Department. [19529]

Mr. Soames: The Ministry of Defence document to which the hon. Member refers was produced at the request of the Northumberland national park authority. It sets out my Department's aspirations for improving the infrastructure at Otterburn training area for the next five years and describes the positive planning principles the Ministry of Defence has adopted for taking these forward. It will be used to take forward our discussions with the park authority under the normal planning arrangements in Department of the Environment circular 18/84. None of the aspirations has yet been agreed, and each remains subject to internal scrutiny, funding, and planning consent.

My Department's aim, through this forward-looking document, is to provide the national park authority with a clearer understanding of the likely trend of development, against which they will be better placed to judge the acceptability or otherwise of individual development applications. Full environmental appraisals will be undertaken as appropriate, and these will take due account of all relevant environmental considerations and where necessary draw upon Government policy and guidance as contained in documents such as the Department of the Environment's "Policy Appraisal and the Environment".

SCOTLAND

Railway Investment

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what applications for railway investment have been (a) approved and (b) submitted for consideration to the highland and Islands development partnership since objective 1 status was announced. [19330]

Mr. Kynoch: None.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if railway capital investment in the highlands is eligible for EC objective 1 funding. [19331]

Mr. Kynoch: In principle, applications may be eligible, but this would depend on the precise nature of the project.

Orthopaedic Trauma Surgery

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many orthopaedic trauma operations have been carried out in Edinburgh for each month since January 1995 to the present; how many such patients had to wait more than two days for surgery after sustaining a fracture; if he will express the numbers waiting for more than two days, as a percentage of the number of operations carried out; and if he will give the monthly budget for such operations; [19558]

(2) what evaluation he has made of the adequacy of available theatre time to cope with demands for orthopaedic trauma surgery at peak periods. [19559]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of orthopaedic trauma operations carried out in Edinburgh, the number of patients who wait more than two days for surgery after sustaining a fracture and the monthly budget for such operations is not held centrally. The table sets out the number of discharges, admitted as emergencies, from orthopaedics who received an operation for each month in 1995 in Edinburgh NHS hospitals showing the percentage and number waiting more than two days. The data are provisional. The availability of theatre time to cope with demand for orthopaedic traumatic surgery is a matter for the NHS trusts concerned.

Transport Funding

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amounts of objective 1 funding has been approved in the Highlands and Islands so far for (a) roads and road transport, (b) airports and air transport, (c) ferries and (d) railways. [19327]

Mr. Kynoch: The information is set out in the table:

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what grounds the last general manager of Lothian health board left that position. [19345]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The last board general manager of Lothian health retired early on grounds of ill health.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the resourcing and administrative arrangements for the secretariat dealing with the distribution of European structural funds in Scotland; on what date the independent secretariat was established; what is the number of full-time equivalent employees involved in its administration; and what representations he has received from infrastructure providers and others in relation to the present arrangements. [19361]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 March 1996]: Of the seven structural fund programmes operating in Scotland, four are administered by programme executives. Infrastructure providers and others in areas with programme executives appear to be generally content with the arrangements; and any discussions about their operation have tended to focus on various detailed points. Details of the resourcing and administration arrangements for dealing with the funds in Scotland are as follows:

Programme executives

The Strathclyde European Partnership

Established—June 1989

Staff number—16 full-time equivalent—FTE

Highlands and Islands Partnership

Established—February 1994

Staff number—eight FTE

Eastern Scotland European Partnership

Established—January 1995

Staff number—8.8 FTE

Dumfries and Galloway European Partnership

Established—November 1994

Staff number—3.5 FTE.

European Social Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for changing the administration of the European social fund in Scotland; what is the number of full-time equivalent employees required to administer the funds under (a) present and (b) future arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [19362]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 March 1996]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland accepted responsibility for the administration of the European social fund on 1 January 1994 for objective 1, 2 and 5b programme areas. Responsibility for the objective 3 programme and EC community initiatives was transferred on 1 April 1995. These major changes have required new administrative arrangements, which we are keeping under review to ensure that they are as effective as possible.

Presently, there are 12 full-time equivalent employees, in the Scottish Office and nine full-time equivalent employees in the four programme executives involved in the administration of the funds.

Falkirk Football Club

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct the reporter to expedite the report of the public inquiry on the planning application by Falkirk football club for a new stadium, to enable the club to meet the deadline for implementation of the Taylor report requirement for all-seater stadia. [15543]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The reporter is aware of the requirements of the Taylor report for all-seater stadia. For that reason, this case has been given—and will continue to receive—priority.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the public inquiry on the planning application by Falkirk football club for a new stadium. [15544]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 29 February 1996]: Depending on the extent, nature and content of comments received following circulation to parties of part I of the report, my right hon. Friend expects to receive the final report by the end of the first week in May.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

School Name	(a) 1995–96	(b) 1994–95
Comber High School	422	424
Donaghadee High School	254	283

Regent House Grammar School, Newtownards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils there are at Regent House grammar school, Newtownards; how many temporary classrooms there are at the school; how many applicants there were for entry into form 1 in the current year; how many pupils were enrolled into form 1 in the current year; what proposals there are to provide permanent classrooms at the school; and if he will make a statement. [18936]

Mr. Ancram: Regent House school has 1,444 pupils in its secondary department and 165 pupils in its preparatory department. The school has 31 temporary classrooms. It had 217 applicants for entry into form 1 for 1995–96—figures for 1996–97 are not yet available—and has 215 pupils in form 1 this year.

I understand that the south-eastern education and library board is developing plans to extend and refurbish the existing premises.

Leadhill Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment in each of the past five years at Leadhill primary school; what is the expected enrolment at the school in each of the next five years; when was the last capital investment for extra accommodation at Leadhill primary school; what proposals there are for the provision of further accommodation at this school; and if he will make a statement. [18933]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

1990: 175

1991: 172

1992: 179

1993: 187

1994: 201

1995: 206.

Enrolments over the next five years are expected to be around 220.

The last capital investment for extra accommodation at the school was in 1984: and I understand that the south-eastern education and library board is currently considering the provision of a purpose-built three classroom block for the school.

Dundonald Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment in each of the past five years at Dundonald primary school; what is the expected enrolment at the school in each of the next five years; what proposals there are to provide additional accommodation at the school; how many places in primary 1 will be available in the next academic year; how many applicants there are for places in primary 1 at the school for the next academic year; and if he will make a statement. [18935]

Mr. Ancram: The enrolments in each of the past five years are as follows:

Year	Number of pupils enrolled	Number of applicants refused places[1]
1991–92	537 (at January 1991)	n/a
1992–93	558 (at October 1992)	none
1993–94	563 (at October 1993)	14
1994–95	547 (at October 1994)	5
1995–96	553 (at October 1995)	9

[1] Information available only from 1992–93 onwards.

It is not possible to accurately project an enrolment figure for each of the next five years.

Provision of controlled primary school places in Dundonald is the responsibility of the South Eastern education and library board. I understand that the board has no plans to increase the size of Dundonald primary school at present, but it is reviewing demand for primary schools places in the Dundonald area and is monitoring residential development as part of its consideration of future primary school provision.

The approved admissions number for the 1996–97 school year is 81; but the school has discretion to admit a maximum of five pupils above this number. The school has received 91 applications.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the addresses of the proposed six offices of the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency; and if these offices will (a) be at ground floor level or (b) provide access by a lift. [19935]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency under its chief executive Mr. Brian Watson. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from J. B. Watson to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 7 March 1996:

Your Question about the location of Driver & Vehicle Testing Agency offices has been referred to me for reply.

Theory test centres will be located in Ballymena, Belfast, Londonderry, Newry, Omagh and Portadown. The addresses of the centres will be published when suitable premises have been acquired.

It is expected that theory test centres will either be at ground floor level or that appropriate arrangements will be made for disabled candidates.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Office Facilities

Mr. MacShane: To ask the right hon. Member or Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what steps he is taking to ensure adequate office facilities for hon. Members. [18032]

Mr. Beith: The new parliamentary building will provide offices for 208 hon. Members. It will also accommodate at least the same number of Members' support staff.

Until the new building is opened in 1999, every effort is being made to improve Members' office facilities as part of the building refurbishment programme, which includes the installation of the parliamentary data and video network and the clean feed from the Chamber as well as more telephone lines.

EU Legislation

38. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Lord President of the Council what representations he has had concerning the preparation and scrutiny of European legislation. [18030]

Mr. Newton: The Select Committee on European Legislation published a report in July 1995 on the forthcoming intergovernmental conference. This addressed a number of issues including the European Community's legislative process and the arrangements for parliamentary scrutiny of European Community legislation. The Government responded to the report in November and look forward to receiving a further report from the Committee focusing in more detail on parliamentary scrutiny arrangements.

Central and Members' Lobbies

39. Mr. Steen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will review the names of the Central and Members' Lobbies. [18031]

40. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will set up a Select Committee to examine the policy of UN sanctions against Libya and Iraq. [18033]

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

Office Allowances

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on future office allowances for hon. Members. [18026]

Mr. Newton: As I announced on 6 February, Official Report, columns 101–2, the Senior Salaries Review Body has been asked to undertake a review of the whole matter of Members' pay and allowances. In the meantime, under the existing resolution, the office costs allowance will increase automatically with effect from 1 April by reference to the retail prices index.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the total cost of each of the sittings of the Scottish Grand Committee held in Scotland during this Parliament; and what is the estimated cost of the future sittings in Scotland planned for this parliamentary Session for (a) accommodation for Members, (b) travel for Members and (c) other costs. [17776]

Mr. Newton: My responsibility in this area is limited to the reimbursement to extended travel, although information on this is not collected in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Accommodation and other costs associated with the work of the Scottish Grand Committee are the responsibility of the House of Commons Commission.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19037]

The Attorney-General: No equipment or furniture has been stolen from my own office in the past five years nor from the Government Property Lawyers Agency since its inception on 1 April 1993. The number of items and cost of equipment and furniture stolen from the Treasury Solicitor's Department, Serious Fraud Office and the Crown Prosecution Service is stated in the table. No item was valued at £5,000 or more.

	IT equipment stolen		Non-IT equipment and furniture stolen
	Items	£	Items	£
1991	6	8,300	1	400
1992	24	33,627	6	2,000
1993	19	16,930	11	1,114
1994	12	10,051	17	5,116
1995	8	13,608	17	6,904

Two non-IT items, costing in total £1,300, were otherwise unaccounted for from the Serious Fraud Office in 1995. No other items were otherwise unaccounted for in the past five years from the departments and agency for which I am responsible.

UNSCOM Report

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Attorney-General what prosecutions will follow the UN special commission on Iraq—UNSCOM—report on the involvement of British companies in supplying the Iraqi programmes developing weapons of mass destruction. [20085]

The Attorney-General: I understand any information contained in an UNSCOM report indicating possible unlawful supply of weapons to Iraq will have been passed to HM Customs and Excise. Follow-up to any information about, and investigation of, any suspected breaches of UK export controls will be a matter for that Department. Decisions about prosecution are taken in the light of the outcome of such investigations.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Deregulation

Mr. Deva: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress is being made towards the formulation of a model appeals mechanism as provided for under section 6 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. [20447]

Mr. Freeman: I am today issuing for consultation a draft statutory instrument setting out the model provisions. The model appeal mechanism is designed to provide a fair and independent process for resolving disputes about enforcement across a wide range of policy areas. It provides for problems to be ironed out at the earliest stage by giving a right to be warned before enforcement action is taken, and a chance to make representations to challenge proposed enforcement action, unless immediate action is necessary. It will also require enforcers to give reasons for taking action and explain how an appeal can be made. These rights have already been applied to health and safety regulations and will shortly be applied to environmental standards, food safety and building regulations, with a range of consumer affairs legislation to follow.

The model appeal mechanism provides for appeals to be considered on the merits of the case by a three person panel. Common procedural rules would apply to all enforcement appeals with time limits and active case management to ensure a simple, speedy and inexpensive process. I have arranged for copies of the consultation paper to be placed in the Library of the House.

Deregulation Unit

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the estimated cost of maintaining the deregulation unit within the Cabinet Office; and how many permanent staff are employed in it. [18646]

Mr. Freeman: The cost of the deregulation unit was set out in the annual MINIS 95 return for the Department of Trade and Industry, as the unit was at that stage part of that Department. The return was published on 12 June 1995 and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

The staff complement of the deregulation unit at January 1996 was equivalent to 43.5 man years.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what vehicles carrying calves were loaded on ships at Dover bound for French and Belgian ports on 8 February 1995; and what was the declared country of destination on each journey plan and the health certification for the purposes of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1995. [15716]

Mrs. Browning: Scheduled ferry operators announced their intention to stop carrying farm animals for further fattening, or immediate slaughter, in 1994. No specialist livestock ships operated from Dover before 20 April 1995.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19414]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The number of letters to which I, or my predecessors, have asked executive agencies to reply during the last five calendar years are as follows:

Year	Number	As a percentage of all letters from hon. Members or Peers
1991	234	2.35
1992	357	3.25
1993	475	4.26
1994	872	9.24
1995	828	9.70

The answer to the vast majority of such letters were partially or wholly prepared by agencies but signed by MAFF Ministers.

(b) Parliamentary questions are not passed to chief executives, although chief executives are asked to write to the Member concerned when the question seeks information about operational matters delegated to them.

The number of questions for which I, or my predecessors, have asked executive agencies to respond to by letter are as follows:

Parliamentary Session	Number	As a percentage of all questions
1993–94	6	0.30
1994–95	35	1.84
1995–96 (to date)	16	2.09

These figures include parliamentary answers where a partial answer has been given by me or my predecessors in respect of the core Department

Figures are not readily available for earlier sessions of Parliament.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the ages of cattle confirmed as having BSE between 6 October 1995 and 29 December 1995. [19354]

Mrs. Browning: The following table shows the age distribution of BSE confirmed cases by age at clinical onset during the period 6 October to 29 December 1995:

Age (years)	Number

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

13. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his assessment of the costs of the Government's rail privatisation programme; and if he will make a statement. [18004]

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the costs to public funds of rail privatisation. [18019]

Mr. Watts: Total Government privatisation costs by the end of 1995–96 are estimated to be some £145 million.

Total sale proceeds are in excess of £2 billion.

Maritime Safety

15. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new proposals he has to improve maritime safety. [18007]

Sir George Young: The Government are committed to further improvements in maritime safety, both in the United Kingdom and internationally. We have successfully pursued a range of proposals through the International Maritime Organisation and we will continue to work towards higher standards and their proper implementation. This commitment has been clearly demonstrated recently with regard to roll-on roll-off passenger ferries. Working first through IMO and then with our regional neighbours, we played a leading role in securing agreement to the application of a higher stability standard to ferries operating in north-western Europe.

UK-US Air Services Agreement

16. Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to resume discussions with the United States Government about the air services agreement between the United Kingdom and the United States. [18008]

Sir George Young: The US suspended formal air services talks in October last year. However, informal contacts are continuing at official level.

Marine Pollution

19. Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to take to improve the protection of the marine environment from accidents to oil tankers. [18011]

Sir George Young: In addition to our policies to improve vessel safety, we are committed to ensuring that the United Kingdom has the resources to respond quickly and effectively to marine pollution incidents. We have accepted the vast majority of the recommendations of Lord Donaldson's inquiry into the protection of the marine environment from pollution from ships, and we are implementing those recommendations vigorously.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his assessment of the danger of marine pollution arising from the presence of oil tankers off British coasts; and if he will make a statement. [18018]

Sir George Young: The carriage of any hazardous or polluting cargo by any transport mode inevitably involves some element of risk. The Government remain committed to reducing that risk so far as is possible.

Trunk Road Construction

20. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on attracting private finance initiative bids to assist trunk road construction. [18012]

Mr. Watts: We have made excellent progress in attracting private finance initiative bids to assist trunk road construction. Industry enthusiasm for the DBFO programme has meant there has been no shortage of bidders and we have already awarded the contract for the A69 and expect to announce the award of other tranche 1 projects shortly.

Royal Train

21. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much Wisconsin Central paid for the royal train. [18013]

Mr. Watts: Wisconsin Central Transportation has not bought the royal train.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the date of manufacture of the royal train locomotive and rolling stock; and what was the purchase price in current prices. [18910]

Mr. Watts: One of two class 47 locomotives—built in the 1960s—owned by Rail Express Systems Ltd, is generally used to haul the royal train, and they are also used for other purposes. The royal train coaches are owned by Railtrack, and were originally manufactured between 1969 and 1986. Apart from four which entered royal train service from new in the mid-1980s, they are all conversions from prototype or redundant coaches. The conversions took place in 1976–97 and between 1988 and 1991. The cost was approximately £10 million at historic prices. The purchase price at current prices is not available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, in order of precedence, those members of the royal family entitled to use the royal train on official business. [19343]

Mr. Watts: If on official business, the following members of the royal family are entitled to use the royal train: the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of York, the Prince Edward, the Princess Royal, the Princess Margaret, Princess Alice, Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, Prince and Princess Michael of Kent, and Princess Alexandra, the Hon. Lady Ogilvy.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

22. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how long after the inquiry has closed it has taken on average in each of the last 10 major road inquiries for the decision to be announced; and when he expects to announce the decision into the Birmingham northern relief road. [18014]

Mr. Watts: Sixteen months. The decision on the Birmingham northern relief road will be announced when my by right Hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport, have received and considered the inquiry inspector's report.

Railway Investment

23. Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans next to meet the chairman of Railtrack to discuss future investment; and if he will make a statement. [18015]

Mr. Watts: My right Hon. Friend has regular meetings with the chairman of Railtrack to discuss all aspects of Railtrack's business. Railtrack's plans for its expenditure on the network are set out in its network management statement, published on 20 December 1995. This document shows that Railtrack is planning to spend over £1 billion per year over the next 10 years.

Bus Deregulation

25. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to review the impact of bus deregulation. [18017]

Mr. Norris: Bus deregulation outside London has meant more bus operators running more bus miles at lower cost than previously, with new buses on many routes, and with greatly reduced public subsidy. The bus working group, which I chair and on which are represented bus operators, local authorities and bus users, has been reviewing the scope for further enhancement of the role of buses in meeting public transport needs, within the deregulated framework. I announced its initial conclusions and a further programme of work on 8 January.

Vehicle Emissions

29. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of the Freight Transport Association to discuss exhaust emissions from heavy goods vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [18021]

Mr. Norris: My right Hon. Friend has met the Freight Transport Association twice in the past six months but has not discussed with it the subject of exhaust emissions from goods vehicles. Officials of the Department and the Vehicle Inspectorate do, however, hold regular meetings with the FTA to discuss matters of mutual interest, including exhaust emissions.

Blind People (Public Transport)

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Government assistance towards access for blind people to all means of public transport. [18016]

Mr. Norris: The needs of blind and partially sighted people have, over a number of years, been an integral part of the work to improve access to transport for disabled people. Many of the features which are now commonplace on our public transport systems—colour-contrasted step edges and handrails and the use of tactile indicators—have been developed and introduced in consultation with visually impaired people.

The regulations which will be introduced under the transport section of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will build on current developments to ensure that the needs of people with sensory impairments are addressed, in the same way as those of people with physical disabilities. Consultation with disabled people will be an essential element in the development of those regulations.

Rail Safety Standards

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that adequate safety standards are maintained by Railtrack. [18009]

Mr. Watts: We have implemented in full the health and safety commission's recommendations for an enhanced safety regime. The independent Health and Safety Executive will continue to ensure that standards and commitments are met, and will react as necessary.

Chiltern Line

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of rail services on the Chiltern line; and if he will make a statement. [18382]

Mr. Watts: None. Current levels of service are a matter for Chiltern. The franchising director has invited indicative bids for the Chiltern franchise by 22 March. The passenger service requirement, which is the contractually agreed level of service that the franchise operator will be required to provide, was finalised on 22 January following consultation between the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising and relevant local authorities—including the London boroughs of Ealing and Brent—and rail users' consultative committees.

London to Colchester Rail Services

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the train operating companies running services between London and Colchester will be taken over by the private sector. [18596]

Mr. Watts: Services between London and Colchester are currently operated by Great Eastern and Anglia. The franchising director issued invitations to pre-qualify for the Anglia franchise on 22 February, and the deadline for expressions of interest is 22 March. Invitations to tender will be issued as soon as is practicable. The Great Eastern franchise will be offered to the private sector in due course.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18647]

Mr. Norris: This information is not collected.

London to Greenwich Transport

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase transport capacity between central London and Greenwich. [18903]

Mr. Norris: Transport links between central London and Greenwich will be substantially improved by both the Jubilee line extension, which is under construction, and the proposed extension of the docklands light railway to Lewisham. Together with members of the River Thames working group, which I chair, the Government are also considering a report by London First on the potential for improving access to Greenwich by boat and ferry services via the River Thames. We are also considering the responses received to our consultation document on possible river crossings to the east of Tower bridge.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of his Department in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19792]

Mr. Norris: I will place a table containing the figures in the Library of the House.

Environmental Appraisals

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of Transport if he will publish the result of the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by the Department of the Environment on the forthcoming transport policies and programmes circular 1997–98. [19547]

Mr. Norris: The transport policies and programme circular contains guidance to local authorities on their annual TPP submissions, and is not in itself susceptible to environmental appraisal. Environmental considerations play a large part in the development of the Government's local transport policies. For example, we have introduced the package approach to local transport investment, which encourages local authorities to develop alternatives to road building and discourages use of the private car where effective alternatives exist.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the result of the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by the Department of the Environment on the forthcoming transport policy paper. [19548]

Mr. Norris: The Government have not yet published their report drawing together the threads of the national debate on transport, so it would be premature to discuss the report's contents.

Buses (London)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for transport what arrangements are in place to ensure that, in central London, bus journeys between the same stops attract the same fares whatever the number of the bus service on the route or the operator; and if he will make a statement. [20240]

Mr. Norris: Fares on London Transport bus services are set by London Transport. With certain exceptions, fares in central London are determined by a zoning system, and are not related to the operator and route. Special fares apply to journeys on night buses, limited stop express services, and the Red Arrow network. For any local service provided independently of the London Transport network, fares would be a matter for individual operators.

M40

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to start on the widening of the M40 between Denham and Loudwater. [19443]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Tim Smith, dated 11 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about widening the M40 between Denham and Loudwater.

As you know, the M40 Junctions 1A to 3 (Denham to Loudwater) widening scheme has been included as part of the larger DBFO project M40 Junctions 1 to 15. Tenders for the DBFO project were invited in June 1995 and bids were received at the end of October. Since then negotiations have been taking place with the tenderers and we would hope to sign a contract with the successful tenderer this summer. On that basis work could still start on the widening in late summer.

I am sorry that I cannot be more precise about the date for the start of works, but that depends on progress with negotiations and the successful tenderer's programme. However, we have included a strong financial incentive in the contract for the contractor to complete the widening as quickly as possible and I expect work to progress speedily once it starts.

Kensington Olympia (Train Marshalling)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the site at Kensington Olympia where facilities for train marshalling are being provided; and what value was attached to the asset. [20303]

Mr. Norris: The site at Kensington Olympia has been valued during 1995–96 with a historic cost value of £800,000.

English Channel (Collisions)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many collisions were reported in (a) the English channel and (b) the western approaches in each year since 1987. [20309]

Mr. Norris: Figures for collisions reported to the marine accidents investigation branch are available only from 1991 onwards and are as follows:

Collisions in the English channel

1991: 12

1992: 7

1993: 11

1994: 11

1995: 14

1996: 1 (to date)

Collisions in the western approaches

1991: —

1992: 1

1993: 1

1994: 2

1995: —

1996: — (to date)

Challenge Funding

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce challenge funding into the transport policies and programmes—transport supplementary grant process. [19768]

Mr. Norris: We already incorporate the essential features of the challenge approach in our TPP process, a competitive bidding process which requires local authorities to set out a clear local transport strategy aimed at meeting overarching local objectives, and to prioritise their capital requirements in support of that strategy.

Traffic Flow

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if new roads are required to meet a British Standard with regard to carriageway traffic flow rates. [20043]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 11 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking if new roads should be designed to a British Standard with regards to carriageway traffic flow rates.

No. There is no British Standard for carriageway flow rates.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the clearance work being carried out for the Newbury bypass is on schedule; and if the targets and deadlines for clearance work will be met. [19667]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Rendel, dated 11 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking if clearance work being carried out for the Newbury bypass is on schedule; and if the targets and deadlines for clearance work will be met.

We are broadly on schedule despite the efforts of the protestors. Good progress is being made with felling the trees and shrubs. We may need to carry some work over into the main contract later this year, but we do not anticipate any delays to that contract.

British Rail Freight Business

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken in negotiations with prospective buyers of the British Railways Board's freight businesses to ensure that he complies with section 113 of the Railways Act 1993. [19860]

Mr. Watts: Negotiations with prospective purchasers are a matter for the British Railways Board. My right hon. Friend considers the board's recommendations for disposal in the light of his objectives under section 113 before deciding whether to consent to a sale.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been spent by (a) his Department, (b) the Office of the Rail Regulator and (c) the British Railways Board in the reorganisation of the British Railways Board's freight business. [19858]

Mr. Watts: The expenditure by my Department and by the Office of the Rail Regulator on reorganising the British Railways Board's trainload freight division cannot be identified separately, nor could the expenditure by the board without a detailed analysis at disproportionate cost to the board.

Highways Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct the Highways Agency to co-operate with local authorities on preparing package submissions. [19769]

Mr. Watts: No such instruction is necessary—the Highways Agency already discusses trunk road aspects of package submissions with local authorities when requested.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 150, if he (a) commissioned and (b) received valuations of the assets to be transferred to the successful bidder for the channel tunnel rail link. [19940]

Mr. Watts: The bidders in the CTRL competition made their own assessment of the value of these assets as part of the calculation to determine the amount of public sector support they required.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the consortia bidding for the CTRL contract were invited to consider in their submissions a direct link from the CTRL to the west coast main line. [20307]

Mr. Watts: No.

Railway Bridge, Kidsgrove

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on plans to demolish the unused railway bridge in Kidsgrove. [19947]

Mr. Watts: The British Rail Property Board is responsible for several disused railway bridges at Kidsgrove and several others have been sold to the local council. BR has no plans at present to demolish any of the bridges in its ownership.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a list of all overseas visits made by all Ministers of his Department since 1990, including (a) details of the places visited and brief reasons for the visit, (b) details of the size, composition and cost to public funds of the delegation and (c) the names of non-ministerial members of each delegation and the capacity in which each was present. [17492]

Sir George Young: I am placing the information requested in the Library.

London Underground Penalty Fares

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, (1) how many people have had penalty fares waived on appeal by London Underground on the ground that they had a valid travelcard but had forgotten to take it with them on their journey; and what proportion of people appealing on those grounds this represents; [19508]

(2) how much income has been received by London Underground from penalty fares on travellers who had valid travelcards but had forgotten to take their travelcard on their journey. [19507]

Mr. Norris: London Underground does not generally uphold appeals where the reason for issuing a penalty fare is that the customer has left his or her travelcard at home. This is because travelcard holders are required to carry their tickets with them as proof of their entitlement to travel. However, London Underground has made an exception in some 105 cases—just over 1 per cent. of people appealing on these grounds—where there were extenuating circumstances.

London Underground estimates that it has received £37,600 to date in penalty fares from customers claiming that they had forgotten to take their travelcard with them.

Railtrack (Compensation Agreement)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the compensation agreement between Railtrack and (a) InterCity and (b) the west coast main line, stating the amount which is payable in compensation for each minute of delay. [19255]

Mr. Watts: This is commercially sensitive information between Railtrack and train operating companies.

Railways (Rolling Stock Maintenance)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are the (a) specifications and (b) time intervals between maintenance overhauls of InterCity and regional railways engines and coaches; [19253]

(2) what regular maintenance overhauls were carried out and what changes were made to the routine maintenance checks and to the regularity of those checks on the stock involved in (a) the Staffordshire and (b) the Longsight decoupling incidents in the last three years. [19254]

Mr. Watts: The stock involved in the Staffordshire and Longsight decoupling incidents consisted of InterCity west coast electrically hauled push-pull trains.

The specification for the maintenance and overhaul of Intercity west coast push-pull trains and electric locomotives are laid down in vehicle maintenance and overhaul instructions, originally issued by the InterCity fleet engineer.

A visual safety check of locomotives and coaching stock takes place each day.

For coaching stock, a more detailed safety examination is completed every three to four days, with progressively larger examinations at one, three, six and 12-monthly intervals.

The full vehicle overhaul is mileage based, but occurs approximately every two years.

For locomotives, a more detailed safety examination is completed every 120 hours in traffic equating to 10 to 14 days. There is a range of progressively larger examinations based on hours in traffic.

Locomotive overhaul is also based on hours in traffic, but the regime consists of three types of overhaul occurring approximately at two and three-quarter, five and a half and 11-year intervals respectively.

Similar specifications and frequencies apply to other engines and coaches. The contents of the vehicle maintenance and overhaul instructions are the subject of occasional review. However, British Rail has advised me that the periodicities have not been changed in the last three years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

One-Parent Benefit

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Scotland currently receive (a) one-parent benefit without any means-tested benefit and (b) one-parent benefit with a means-tested benefit, broken down by each means-tested benefit. [17164]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the following table:

Recipients of one-parent benefit in Scotland

	Number[1] of recipients
Total number receiving one-parent benefit	97,000
Number receiving one-parent benefit with a means-tested benefit (by benefit)[2].
Income support	38,000
Housing benefit	45,000
Council tax benefit	36,000

1. In Scotland, 34,000 lone parents are in receipt of family credit. It is estimated that the vast majority are also receiving one-parent benefit; however, precise figures are not available.

[1]Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

[2]It is not possible to provide a breakdown of one-parent benefit recipients between those with and without at least one means-tested benefit because a person can be in receipt of more than one means-tested benefit and not all of the overlaps between benefits can be identified.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum duration of unemployment benefit that claimants will receive if their period of unemployment commences before 8 April and they otherwise meet the conditions of entitlement but are not in receipt of unemployment benefit on this date because they (a) are in receipt of a payment in lieu of notice, (b) are still within the three-day waiting period, (c) have informed the Employment Service of their unemployment before 8 April but are given an appointment with a new client adviser on, or after, this date or have not informed the Employment Service before 8 April of their unemployment but have a good cause for a delayed claim; and if she will make a statement. [17225]

Mr. Roger Evans: The unemployment benefit scheme will continue until it is replaced by jobseeker's allowance on 7 October 1996. Those who are unemployed, entitled to benefit based on their contributions and whose entitlement spans this date will receive days of contribution-based benefit comprising unemployment benefit and jobseeker's allowance.

If a claimant is in receipt of a payment in lieu of notice, or they are within the three-day period, the maximum duration of unemployment benefit they will receive will be 156 days.

There is a maximum of 312 days where unemployment benefit is payable for 6 or 7 April 1996, either because the claim is made before 8 April 1996 or because good cause is accepted for a claim made after that date but in respect of a period before it, and unemployment benefit is also payable for 5 or 6 October 1996. If both of these conditions do not apply the maximum number of days will be 156.

Asbestosis

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the rules governing the payment of industrial injuries compensation to current or former Government employees who contracted asbestosis before 1987. [18303]

Mr. Roger Evans: For the purposes of industrial injuries disablement benefit, crown employees, other than members of Her Majesty's forces, are treated under the same rules as all other employees. Asbestosis has been a prescribed disease since 4 July 1948.

Family Credit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effect on public revenues in 1996–97 and 1997–98 of allowing families in receipt of family credit to claim a child care disregard for each dependent child. [18241]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The estimated cost of disregarding all child care expenses for recipients of family credit would be in the region of £40 million in the long run, with or without allowing for behavioural effects. If all such costs were disregarded, there would be a strong incentive for people who do not pay for child care at the moment to declare some payment. There are about 100,000 people on family credit who would be faced with such an incentive, which could lead to very substantial further costs.

Note:

Estimates based on date 1991–92 and 1993 family expenditure surveys, and the 1994 annual statistical enquiry, uprated to 1996–97 and 1997–98 levels adjusted using data on child care in the 1993–94 family resources survey.

Income Support

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effect on public revenues in 1996–97 and 1997–98 of allowing income support claimants to disregard work-related child care expenses in calculating income support entitlement. [18235]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The estimated cost of offsetting work-related child care expenses against earnings in income support is in the region of £10 million for 1996–97 and 1997–98. This figure takes no account of around 50,000 income support claimants who currently have unpaid child care. On the assumption that these people each started to pay £10 a week for child care, the additional cost is estimated to be in the region of £25 million in both years. These figures do not take account of other behavioural changes or of the additional costs of administration.

Note:

Estimates based on data from the 1991–92 and 1993 family expenditure surveys, and the 1994 annual statistical enquiry, uprated to 1996–97 and 1997–98 levels, adjusted using data on child care from the 1993–94 family resource survey.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance he has issued to local authorities about the form in which they record expenses arising from their responsibilities to asylum seekers following the implementation of new regulations on 5 February. [19613]

Mr. Curry: I have been asked to reply.

An official in my Department wrote to all directors of housing in English local authorities on 12 February to advise them about information that they could collect. I am placing a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Income Support (Residential Care)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change income support regulations to reflect the changes in capital asset levels for residential long-term care. [18964]

Mr. Roger Evans: Regulation 12 of the Income-Related Benefits (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996—SI 1996 No. 462—which was laid before the House on 4 March, implements the changes in the capital asset levels for residential long-term care. The regulations come into force on 1 April in relation to housing benefit and 8 April in relation to income support.

Departmental Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all Departments for Social Security funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1990 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Mexborough, (c) Doncaster travel-to-work area and (d) Mexborough travel-to-work area identifying (i) title, summary and duration of the pilot or trial, (ii) target population and total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot, trial or research finding was published and the date of publication; and if he will list all other non-DSS research bodies or organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [19090]

Mr. Roger Evans: Since 1990, the following research has been carried out in the geographical areas specified:

[1] No other pilots, trials or research studies have been identified.
[2] All the above research was conducted by the Benefits Agency.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 from organisations for people with diabetes; what replies have been sent; and if he will make a statement. [18474]

Mr. Burt: Representations have been received from a broad range of organisations representing disabled people, which may include people with diabetes. All representations received are given careful consideration.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18648]

Mr. Burt: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Children's Maintenance Payments

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to ensure that no court order for children's maintenance payments are stopped by the Child Support Agency until the parent responsible for child support payments has accepted the agency's (a) temporary and (b) other assessments and agreed to make payments from a specified date. [19920]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: No. The child support scheme aims to ensure that all parents maintain their children to the extent that they can afford to do so. Making action conditional on confirmation that the absent parent accepts the assessment would allow such parents to defer indefinitely any enforcement of maintenance by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will instruct the Child Support Agency to collect information about the number of court orders for children's maintenance payments which they stop and the date, in each case, that payments begin under Child Support Act 1991 arrangements. [19919]

Mr. Mitchell: No. The Child Support Agency has no business need to record the number of such cases nor would it serve any reliable policy monitoring function.

Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many awards for benefit he has suspended under regulation 37A of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 for each year since its introduction; [20084]

(2) how many awards of benefit he has suspended under regulation 37A of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 in each year since 1990. [20086]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested as figures are not kept on an annual basis. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Provision	Estimated number of cases affected
Regulation 37A of the Social Security Claims and Payments Regulations 1987	52,100

Estimate relates to the number of cases affected since the regulation came into force on 9 March 1992.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of benefit he has suspended pending appeals in the cases of (a) Graham and (b) Halliday, aka Fairey; in how many cases the suspension was lifted following representations by or on behalf of claimants; and if he will give a breakdown of the reasons for lifting the suspension. [20194]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Lead case	Number of suspensions	Number of suspensions lifted
Graham	46,418	1,693
Halliday	2,796	13

Note:
In all cases the suspension was lifted on the grounds of hardship.

Child Support Departures Scheme

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to carry out the planned pilot exercise referred to during the passage of the Child Support Bill to test arrangements for the new child support departures scheme. [20528]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I have today laid before parliament a statutory instrument containing the regulations which will underpin the trial of the child support departures scheme. The pilot exercise will begin on Tuesday 9 April and will involve cases covered by the Hastings Child Support Agency centre. Invitations to participate in this pilot scheme will be issued from today onwards.

HEALTH

Locum Budget

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the locum budget for (a) doctors and (b) nurses in each of the last five years. [17940]

Mr. Malone: There is no national budget for locum doctors or nurses.

Message Handling Services

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has undertaken of the benefits for emergency and immediate notifications of the use of a uniform electronic messaging system at all levels of the NHS. [18787]

Mr. Horam: A system for the electronic transmission of emergency communications between the Chief Medical Officer and the national health service is currently being piloted in Kent and Birmingham. The benefits to the NHS will be assessed once the pilot is complete.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the BT Syntegra system became generally available within the NHS in October 1995. [18791]

Mr. Horam: After extensive testing in several health authorities, involving a range of users in the national health service, Syntegra launched its message handling service for use in the NHS at the Exchanging Healthcare Information conference in October 1995. So far, 222 connections have been made and this number is expected to grow over time.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if trusts are obliged to have regard to the contract awarded by his Department by competitive procurement to BT Syntegra in 1994 when making decisions concerning message handling services. [18789]

Mr. Horam: The use of Syntegra's message handling service is not mandatory in the national health service. Each NHS organisation will decide on the basis of value for money whether or not to use the Syntegra message handling service. The large corporate discounts obtained from Syntegra mean that alternatives are unlikely to be cost effective.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current estimate of the cost savings to the NHS accruing from use of Syntegra's message handling service. [18793]

Mr. Horam: It is too early to make realistic estimates of cost savings to the national health service due to the use of Syntegra's message handling service.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current number, in actual and percentage terms, of subscribers to the BT Syntegra NHS message handling system; and what was the number in October 1995 among (a) health authorities, (b) family health services authorities (c) hospital trusts, (d) other trusts and (e) general practitioners. [18792]

Mr. Horam: The number of subscribers to Syntegra's message handling system are as follows:

	October 1995	February 1996
Organisationally based systems—e.g. health authorities and trusts where there would be many individual users	44	86
Personal systems—e.g. a GP.	29	136

Numbers of users by national health service units, also expressed as a percentage of the total subscribers, are as follows:

	October 1995		February 1996
	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.
Health authorities	2	3	2	1
Family health services authorities	4	5	29	13
Hospital trusts	20	27	32	14

	October 1995		February 1996
	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.

Hoskyns Group plc: £112,300

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys: £14,000

Apart from this the Department has, since 1987, purchased total services which have included computer processing capacity from other departments and the private sector. Services have been provided by Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, Department of Social Security, Information Technology Services Agency and Chessington Computer Centre—an agency of the Cabinet Office—in the public sector and by Data Sciences and CMS, taken over recently by Hoskyns Group plc, in the private sector. The cost of computer capacity cannot be separated within the total charges.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will hold centrally records of the number of emergency patients transported more than 50 miles to receive hospital treatment and of how many subsequently died; and if he will make a statement. [19348]

Mr. Horam: I have no such plans. Health authorities and hospital trusts are responsible for the health-care of national health service patients in each locality. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 6 March a programme of action on emergency care services.

(2) what measures have been taken to shorten the waiting time for men claiming refunds as a result of the recent European Court ruling on prescription charges for men aged 60 to 65 years. [19198]

Mr. Malone: A total of 187,000 claim forms have been issued by the prescription claims processing unit. Once completed claim forms have been received, the average time taken to assess entitlement and issue authorisation of payment is one month.

Administrative procedures have been kept as simple as possible and we expect 90 per cent. of payments to have been authorised by the end of March.

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to amend the leaflet, "Contact Lenses and You", since it already makes reference to the necessary aspects of lens care and hygiene relevant to acanthamoeba.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department has taken to ensure that the leaflet "Contact Lenses and You" is available at opticians. [19503]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into seeking a cure for arachnoiditis. [19679]

Mr. Horam: We have received a number of representations from arachnoiditis sufferers and organisations representing them since 1987. The Government have offered financial assistance to the Arachnoiditis Trust for three years through the general scheme of grants to voluntary organisations under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 to help fund a pain management nurse. Since making its grant application, the Arachnoiditis Trust has re-assessed its priorities and has declined to take up our offer of funding.

My Department has not directly commissioned research into a cure for arachnoiditis. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC is always willing to consider high quality research proposals.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of the Department of Health in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19796]

Meningitis

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what money has been given for research into meningitis in each of the last five years. [19224]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 6 March 1996]: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC, which is currently doing research in this area, receives its grant in aid from the Office of Science and Technology, which is part of the Department of Trade and Industry. The Department of Health commissioned a two-year clinical trial of candidate meningococcal vaccines in 1993 at a cost of £198,528. The NHS is known to have spent £88,900 on two meningitis-related research projects since 1991.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will enable Mark Griffen of Buckley to have essential treatment at the Breakspeare hospital, Hertfordshire. [17341]

Mr. Richards: Responsibility for arranging treatment for Mark Griffen remains a matter for the Clwyd health authority.

[19918]

Mr. Richards: The available information is as follows:

	1995	1996	1997	1998

School Pupils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of children in Wales are in (a) primary schools, including voluntary primary, (b) comprehensive and grant-maintained comprehensive schools, (c) nursery schools, (d) private schools and (e) selective state grammar schools. [18926]

[1]Percentages have been calculated by dividing the number of full-time and part-time pupils in each type of school by the total number of full-time and part-time pupils in each type of school by the total number of full-time and part-time pupils in all schools.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the nursery voucher system. [18916]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 January 1996, Official Report, column 838, and to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 26 January 1996, Official Report, columns 479–80.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the cost to local education authorities of administering the nursery voucher scheme; and if he will make it his policy to provide for these costs in the revenue settlement to local authorities in the event of the scheme being implemented in 1997. [19944]

Mr. Richards: The vouchers will be distributed and redeemed by a private contractor selected through normal tendering procedures to secure best value for money. The costs of the contractor will be funded from the new money that will be available. Additional administrative burdens for local authorities should be minimal. It is open to the Welsh Local Government Association to identify additional costs in the annual revenue settlement discussions with the Department.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which voucher schemes he examined before agreeing to introduce vouchers for pre-school provision for four-year-olds; and what conclusions he reached about their success in expanding provision and improving quality. [19942]

Mr. Richards: The Government consider that a voucher scheme is the most appropriate means of expanding nursery provision, while offering parents a greater choice in the sort of provision they want for their child, stimulating greater diversity of provision to enhance that choice, and raising standards generally. The scheme is being developed and tailored specifically to achieve those objectives. It is not meaningful to seek to make comparisons with other voucher schemes.

School Inspections

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools in Wales, by county, have been commended by the inspectorate; and if he will make a statement. [18919]

[18528]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Unitary authorities in Wales are required to notify my right hon. Friend of the level of council tax set for 1996–97 by 18 March. I will write to the hon. Member when the final figures are available and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the mandatory exceptions that are taken into account when local education authorities are assessing that part of their education budget on which the minimum of 90 per cent. must be given to schools under the local management formula; and if all of the mandatory exceptions are covered by properly approved orders under which local authorities operate local management of schools properties. [19925]

Mr. Richards: Details are contained in the Education (Financial Delegation to Schools) (Mandatory Exceptions) Regulations 1995 which as a result of the Education (Financial Delegation to Schools) (Mandatory Exceptions) Revocation and Amendment) Regulations 1996 will apply to local education authorities in Wales for a financial year beginning on or after 1 April 1996.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the numbers of students at each college of the university of Wales in each of the last five years, indicating the funding provided by the Government in (a) cash and (b) real terms for each college in each of these years. [19929]

Mr. Richards: The number of students at each college of the university of Wales from 1990–91 to 1994–95[1] was:

Aberystwyth	0.5	0.6
Bangor	0.5	0.7
Cardiff	0.8	0.3
St. Davids	0.1	0.1
Medicine	—	—
Swansea	0.6	0.8

The movement in GDP between 1993–94 and 1994–95 was nearly 2 per cent.

Prior to 1993–94, funding for the higher education institutions in Wales was from a variety of sources. Comparable funding information for these years could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of the rate support grant has been included by the Welsh Office to give local education authorities the option to provide pre-school education for (a) four-year-olds and (b) three-year-olds in each of the last five years; [19924]

(2) what percentage of the revenue support grant has been included by the Welsh Office to support local authorities in meeting their statutory commitments to provide services for children under five years in each of the last five years. [19923]

Mr. Richards: Revenue support grant is not attributed to specific local authority services.

University of Glamorgan

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of students at the university of Glamorgan in each of the last five years, indicating the sums provided from public funds in (a) cash and (b) real terms in each of these years. [19928]

Mr. Richards: The number of students at the university of Glamorgan—formerly the polytechnic of Wales—from 1990–91 to 1994–95[1] was:

1990–91: 6,791

1991–92: 8,098

1992–93: 11,525

1993–94: 13,886

1994–95: 14,517[2]

[1]Includes full-time and part-time students. At November for 1990–91 to 1993–94 and at December for 1994–95.

[2]Provisional.

In cash terms, the university of Glamorgan received grant support from the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales in the academic years 1993–94 and 1994–95 of £18.7 million and £28.9 million respectively. In the financial years 1993–94 and 1994–95, it also received grant of £600,000 and £1.1 million respectively, in respect of backlog maintenance. The movement in GDP between 1993–94 and 1994–95 was nearly 2 per cent.

Information on funding in the three years prior to 1993–94 could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has for the funding of the university of Glamorgan in 1998–99; and how many students this funding will enable the university to accept; [19926]

(2) what plans he has for the funding of the colleges of the university of Wales in 1998–99; and how many students this funding will enable the colleges to accept. [19927]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend announced the financial provision for the higher education sector in Wales for 1996–97, and the planning figures for the following two years, on 13 December 1995, Official Report, column 1004. A copy of the Department's letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales setting out the details of the settlements has been placed in the Library of the House. Decisions relating to individual institutions are for the HEFCW.

Special Needs Teacher Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps he has taken in the last three years at (a) the initial teacher training level and (b) in the grants for education support and training programme to provide teachers with the skills to identify children who may be dyslexic; [19930]

(2) what steps he has taken in the process of preparation and implementation of the code of practice in the identification and assessment of special educational needs of providing training for teachers to identify children (a) learning with difficulties with particular reference to dyslexia and (b) behavioural problems with particular reference to the autistic spectrum. [19931]

Mr. Richards: From autumn 1996 all newly qualified primary teachers will have to acquire in their initial training the necessary foundation to develop the ability to identify and provide for special educational needs, including specific learning difficulties or dyslexia. A similar requirement has been in place for newly qualified secondary teachers since autumn 1994.

The Welsh Office for a number of years has made specific grant available to local education authorities under the grants for education support and training programme to develop staff expertise and provision for pupils with special educational needs. This includes grant expressly for training in the teaching of pupils with dyslexia or autism, for teachers with designated responsibilities for special educational needs in ordinary schools and for measures to support schools in the application of the code of practice. The grant is continuing in 1996–97.

(b) The Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct, the Law Commission and the Council of Tribunals are all required by statute to make annual reports to the Lord Chancellor. While there is no statutory requirement on the Advisory Council on Public Records to submit an annual report, there is a requirement that any report by it to the Lord Chancellor should be included in the Public Record Office's own annual report, for which there is a statutory requirement; and

(c) all of the annual reports in (b) are laid before Parliament by the Lord Chancellor, under a statutory requirement.

The Legal Aid Advisory Committee (NI) is required to consider the Law Society's annual report on legal aid in Northern Ireland and the Lord Chancellor is required to lay before Parliament a copy of any comments or recommendations made by the committee.

The other bodies do not publish advice or produce annual reports.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20470]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, a recent survey within the Department has shown that 93.8 per cent. of all invoices are paid within agreed terms, or within 30 days of receipt of invoice, where no such terms exist.

SCOTLAND

Railway Investment

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what grants under (a) section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 and (b) other legislation have been awarded by the Scottish Office for railway infrastructure in Scotland between 1975 and 1995 in (i) the Strathclyde passenger transport executive area and (b) the rest of Scotland. [19301]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

	Number of projects	Grant awarded (outturn prices) £ million
Section 56 grants
Within the Strathclyde Passenger Transport Executive (SPTE) area	5	103.3
Outwith SPTE area	2	11.0
Other legislation
Freight facilities grants within SPTE area	14	3.1
Freight facilities grants outwith SPTE area	18	4.7
Grants for repairs to listed buildings outwith SPTE area	1	0.2

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was spent on (a) fixed rail infrastructure in Scotland, (b) investment in new railways, upgrading and re-opening of railways, new and improved stations and new signalling and (c) maintenance of track, signalling, structures and stations in Scotland at outturn prices in each year from 1975 to 1995. [19305]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available. British Rail keeps only limited historic information on investment on a geographical basis.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures govern applications for railway rolling stock to be used in the highlands objective 1 area where the stock is owned by a leasing company and leased to a train operating company. [19310]

Mr. Kynoch: All applications for European regional development fund support must be submitted by a public agency and a minimum level of matching funding must be included within the funding package. Any grant support paid is channelled through the sponsoring public agency.

In addition, all applications must be eligible under the terms of the single programme document and must also contribute to the outputs anticipated for the programme. applications for mobile infrastructure —that is that which could be readily moved outwith the programme area— would not normally be eligible.

Squirrels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made as to whether extending the use of warfarin to control grey squirrels is in breach of the Grey Squirrels and Warfarin Order 1973; and if he will make a statement. [19983]

Mr. Kynoch: Extending the use of warfarin to control grey squirrels was approved under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 and is not in breach of the Grey Squirrels (Warfarin) Order 1973.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies into the expansion of grey squirrel distribution have been conducted by his Department. [19161]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 March 1996]: The Forestry Commission has undertaken a survey of grey squirrel distribution every year since 1958. The Institute of Terrestrial Ecology's biological records centre also maintains records of the location of grey squirrels.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of grey squirrel damage to broadleaf trees in each year for the last five years. [19160]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 March 1996]: Damage by grey squirrels can kill broadleaf trees, reduce their growth rate, degrade their timber and allow diseases into them. It is difficult to estimate the total cost of this damage as the loss in value of the timber can be calculated only after the trees have been felled, and any assessment of the impact on growth rate and mortality can be only approximate. Recent estimates have suggested that the annual cost of the damage is between £3 million and £20 million.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he had (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of secondary poisoning caused from the use of warfarin for squirrel control. [19162]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 March 1996]: We have undertaken several research studies into the risk of secondary poisoning of non-target species by warfarin, and the Forestry Commission commissioned a review of these studies which was carried out by the Central Science Laboratory.

Forestry Commission (Legal Advisers)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 267, if he will name the firm of solicitors which has been appointed to the Forestry Commission with effect from 1 April. [20389]

Mr. Kynoch: Tods Murray, WS.

Flooding

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effects of flooding in the Grampian area in September 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20641]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government have decided to trigger the Bellwin scheme for Grampian in respect of the flooding experienced in that area in September 1995. We have already held discussions with local authorities in the area, but will now be writing to all local authorities concerned, inviting them to submit formal claims in respect of expenditure which they believe to be eligible under the terms of the scheme.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the expenditure incurred by Renfrew district council as a result of flooding in December 1994; and if he will make a statement. [20640]

Mr. Kynoch: I am glad to announce that we have decided that Renfrew district council is eligible for a payment of £167,558 under the Bellwin scheme. The scheme was triggered following the flooding for severe weather sustained in Strathclyde in December 1994.

The district council's claim for assistance has been subject to detailed scrutiny. The payment relates mainly to expenditure incurred in connection with the temporary evacuation of people from their flooded homes and the provision of temporary accommodation, and the hire of plant, including drying and heating equipment, to make homes habitable again.

Forest Enterprise

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the results of the environmental appraisal conducted under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" published by the Department of the Environment on the framework document for the new Forest Enterprise agency. [19549]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The framework document for Forest Enterprise will set out its aims, responsibilities and status. It is therefore not an appropriate subject for environmental appraisal under the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment".

(c) A Royal Navy Sea King was conducting a medical evacuation from a ship off Lizard point, Cornwall, on 25 March 1994. The stern of the ship yawed rapidly, making contact with the winch wire which was transferring a diver to the vessel. (i) An Army Air Corps Gazelle belonging to the School of Army Aviation was being used to conduct hover exercises at Middle Wallop airfield on 11 November 1994. During the flight, a student was given limited control of the hovering aircraft. He made a control error and the instructor was unable to stabilise the helicopter before it made contact with the ground; the occupants sustained minor injuries.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in order of precedence those members of the royal family who may request a flight by 32 Squadron, the Royal Squadron, to be charged to the privy purse; and if he will make a statement. [19635]

Mr. Soames: My Department meets the costs of all official travel in aircraft of No. 32 (the Royal) Squadron by entitled members of the royal family. Since the introduction of arrangements on 1 April 1995, costs for the private use of No. 32 (the Royal) Squadron by the five entitled members of the royal family are met from their private funds. Services Clothing Manufacture

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the clothing requirements of the armed forces is manufactured in the United Kingdom. [19626]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DCTA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Roycroft to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 12 March 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the percentage of the clothing requirements of the armed forces that are manufactured in the UK, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency.

In Financial Year 1994/95 the MOD placed over 90%, by value, of its Clothing & Textiles orders with British suppliers. The figure for Financial Year 1995/96 is likely to be similar. Therefore, under 10% of MOD Clothing &. Textiles purchases have been from overseas suppliers. However, an increasing number of UK companies are subcontracting or sourcing from overseas because of the advantages in setting up and labour costs.

When tendering, companies are required to provide details of any manufacturing source outside the tenderer's premises i.e. the nature of any subcontract work, including the name and address of the contractor who will carry it out. The minimum percentage of UK manufacture is 10% of the order quantity which must be manufactured at the prime contractor's ISO 9000 series certificated site. Apart from this requirement there is no obligation for contractors to provide further detail of the percentage of work to be performed overseas, indeed with contractors subject to various factors e.g. exchange rates, extended lines of supply and possible offshore labour problems, percentages of manufacture in UK/offshore can often change during the duration of the contract/enabling arrangement.

You will appreciate therefore that I cannot provide you with an accurate percentage of overseas manufacture. I hope that the foregoing is helpful but, if you have any further questions do not hesitate to contact me.

Regimental Establishment Levels

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Army regiments are currently at their full establishment level; and what is the percentage shortfall in each of the other regiments. [19817]

Mr. Soames: The 9th/12th Lancers, The Corps of Royal Engineers, the Highlanders, the Kings Regiment, The Duke of Wellington's Regiment, The Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment and the Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps are currently manned to their full establishment of soldiers. The percentage surplus or shortfall of soldiers against establishment on 1 February 1996 is shown for each regular army regiment and corps in the table. Officer manning is generally satisfactory with a small surplus.

Argentina (Arms Sales)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) arms and (b) arms-related contracts were approved by Her Majesty's Government with the Argentine Government between the years 1979 and 1982. [19811]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Ministry of Defence is not the licensing authority for exports and does not otherwise normally approve contracts between exporters and overseas customers. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has set out details of contracts for the supply of defence equipment to Argentina in the relevant period, Official Report, 6 March 1996, column 228.

51 Squadron, Royal Air Force

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the role and function of 51 Squadron, Royal Air Force; what are its annual running costs; and from which subheads of which votes these funds are taken; [19960]

(2) how many aircraft are currently assigned to 51 Squadron, Royal Air Force; what plans there are to increase the number of aircraft assigned to this squadron; what are the estimated costs of such an increase; and from which subheads of which votes these funds will be taken; [19959]

(3) on what date 51 Squadron, Royal Air Force, was established. [19961]

(4) what is the current assignment of 51 Squadron, Royal Air Force. [19958]

Mr. Soames: No. 51 Squadron, Royal Air Force, was reformed on 21 August 1958 to operate electronic reconnaissance aircraft. The squadron currently comprises two Nimrod R aircraft; a Nimrod MR2 from storage is being converted to replace a third which was lost on 16 May 1995.

The squadron's forecast running costs for the current financial year are approximately £7.1 million, and are included in Air Officer Commander-in-Chief Strike Command's top level budget, vote 1 section D1.

There are no plans to increase the squadron's complement of three aircraft.

Overseas Training Deployments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what maximum authorised levels of (a) deployed RAF personnel and (b) deployed RAF combat aircraft are being requested of the Canadian authorities under the new multinational memorandum of understanding governing training activities at Canadian forces base, Goose bay, Labrador. [19745]

Mr. Soames: The new memorandum of understanding concerning allied military activity at Goose bay specifies that an annual maximum of 18,000 training sorties, of which no more than 15,000 may be at low level, can be flown by all the allied users. The MOU does not specify a maximum level of deployed RAF personnel or deployed RAF combat aircraft and does not require the RAF to request such levels.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for Royal Air Force training deployments to United States marine corps air station Yuma, Arizona. [19637]

Mr. Soames: No formal invitations have been received from the United States authorities for future RAF participation in exercises at Marine Corps air station, Yuma.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many investigations were carried out by the Royal Air Force police flying complaints flight in 1994; and how many breaches of low flying regulations were confirmed by these investigations. [19639]

Mr. Soames: The RAF police flying complaints flight carried out 632 investigations in 1994 which confirmed 70 breaches of low flying regulations.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the changes made to the minimum weather requirements for visual low flying since 1989. [19636]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the letter the then Under-Secretary of State for Defence, my noble Friend, the Viscount Cranborne, wrote to him on 29 November 1993, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House. There have been no changes to minimum weather requirements for visual low flying since that date.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the nationalities of military aircraft booked into (a) area 5E and (b) area 3A of the night low flying system between 1800 hours and 1930 hours GMT on 6 January 1995. [19746]

Mr. Soames: No military aircraft were booked into night low flying sectors 3A and 5E between the times stated on 6 January 1995.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints were received about low flying aircraft in the vicinity of Darlington on 12 July 1994. [19640]

Mr. Soames: None.

Warton Airfield

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights originated from, or bound for, Warton airfield were recorded by the military air traffic control authorities between 1700 hours and 2000 hours GMT on 6 January 1995. [19748]

Mr. Soames: Military air traffic control records of this type are normally retained for a maximum of three months. Consequently, the information requested is no longer available.

Tornado Accident

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the board of inquiry into the accident to a Tornado GR 1A on 1 September 1994 obtained evidence on the routes flown by other aircraft booked to fly in low flying area 14 at the time of the accident. [19754]

Mr. Soames: Yes. This was considered fully by the board of inquiry which concluded that there was no evidence to suggest that another aircraft was involved in the accident.

Exercise Arid Thunder

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the extent, nature and purpose of Royal Air Force participation in Exercise Arid Thunder in December 1995. [19638]

Mr. Soames: Exercise Arid Thunder 1995–96 was divided into four two-week periods. RAF participation was as follows:

Unit	Dates
13 Squadron	3–17 November 1995
14 Squadron	20 November–1 December 1995
617 Squadron	3–15 December 1995
17 Squadron	19 February–1 March 1996

Eight Tornado aircraft and 122 personnel were deployed from each squadron. The purpose of the exercise was to provide training by expending life-expired BL755 munitions.

F-117 Aircraft

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many F-117 aircraft were present in the United Kingdom on 6 January 1995. [19749]

Mr. Soames: None.

Munitions Dumps

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list (a) the exact location of munitions dumps in the English channel south of the Thames and the Severn estuaries, (b) the exact composition of the materials which were put into those dumps, (c) the ports which were used for that dumping, (d) the periods during which those ports were used for dumping, (e) the ships used for such dumping and (f) all monitoring of the dump sites for environment and safety which has taken place since 1966 or is currently taking place; [20182]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacies of the registration of munitions dump sites in the English channel. [20183]

Mr. Soames: Records of the total tonnages, ports and vessels involved in munitions disposal are not available. From surviving records it has been established that the following general areas, shown more extensively on hydrographic charts, were designated, although not necessarily used, as conventional explosive dumping grounds in the English channel before 1973:

Area	Position
Hurd Deep	49 30 00 N—3 34 00 W
St. Catherines Deep	50 34 00 N—1 12 00 W
NW of Alderney (2 sites)	49 50 00 N—2 18 00 W
NW of Alderney (2 sites)	49 47 00 N—2 17 00 W
SSW of Guernsey	49 18 00 N—2 42 00 W
Whitesand Bay, Plymouth	50 18 45 N—4 16 00 W

Current scientific advice indicates that dump sites present no significant risk to safety, human health or the marine environment if left undisturbed.

Fast Jet Training

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current average period for completion of fast jet training. [20226]

Mr. Soames: A qualified fast jet pilot needs to complete successfully three main stages of fast jet training before being deployed to an operational flying squadron. The average length of time it currently takes for a new pilot to progress through the flying training stages is 259 weeks which is longer than usual due to a backlog of pilots in training. From the end of 1996, however, the backlog should have been resolved and the current planned cycle for a new pilot starting training now, will be on average 109 weeks. This includes six weeks of breaks between courses and is dependent on pilot capability, weather and the operational conversion aircraft or course required.

The main stages, aircraft employed and the minimum flying hours/weeks are as follows:

Main stages	Aircraft employed	Minimum flying hours/weeks
Basic flying training	Tucano	120 hours/42 weeks
Advanced training and tactics	Hawk	103 hours/33 weeks
Operational conversion	Various fast jets	'88–129 hours/22 weeks

' Average.

Military Training Assistance (Ghana)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on military training assistance provided to Ghana in the last five years; how many British personnel were involved; and how many Ghanaian (a) military and (b) police officials have visited the United Kingdom for training since 1990. [19840]

Mr. Soames: The United Kingdom has provided a number of small teams of United Kingdom military personnel to carry out training of Ghanaian military personnel in the last five years and a team of several British officers has also assisted at the Ghanaian staff college, one of whom remains. Since 1990, several Ghanaian officers have visited the UK for training. Precise details of military assistance are regarded as confidential between Governments. I understand that 10 Ghanaian police officials have visited the UK for training since 1990.

Bulford Camp Primary Schools

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rents or charges he makes to Wiltshire county council in respect of services or land occupied by (a) Haig county primary school and (b) Kiwi county primary school, in Bulford camp, Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement. [20244]

Mr. Soames: The following charges have been raised over the last 12 months:

Haig county primary school
Land for playground—rental charge	'130.00
Sewer connection charge	'20.00
Water connection charge	'20.00
Water	1,390.00
Electric	1,011.00
Kiwi county primary school
Sewer connection charge	'20.00
Water connection charge	'20.00
Water	559.00
Electric	1,984.00

' Fixed annual charge.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make representations to Wiltshire county council opposing the proposed closure of Haig county primary school in Bulford camp, Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement. [20243]

Mr. Soames: Wiltshire county council has discussed the proposed closure of Haig county primary school with the local military authorities and has consulted with parents, governors and staff. The outcome of these consultations will be considered by the county council's education committee and any proposal to change the current provision will be published by way of public notices. Objections can be registered at this stage and these will be passed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for adjudication.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the service families with children at Haig county primary school in Bulford Camp, Wiltshire, have a parent currently serving in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement. [20247]

Mr. Soames: Twelve per cent. of service families with children at Haig primary school have a parent currently serving in Bosnia.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost to his Department of security attributable to (a) Haig county primary school and (b) Kiwi county primary school in Bulford camp, Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement. [20245]

Mr. Soames: There is no identifiable extra cost to my Department attributable to security arrangements for either school.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has made of (a) the married quarters population and (b) the numbers of nursery and school-age children dwelling in the married quarters and within designated catchments of (i) Haig county primary school, and (ii) Kiwi county primary school in Bulford camp, Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement. [20246]

Mr. Soames: The estimated population of the married quarters estates at Bulford camp is 2,564. Within the designated catchment area of Haig county primary school, there are an estimated 49 nursery and 94 school-aged children living in the married quarters. The corresponding figures for the Kiwi county primary school catchment area are estimated to be 118 nursery and 188 school-aged children.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of the advisory non-departmental pubic bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20102]

Mr. Soames: The independent board of visitors was established in accordance with the Imprisonment and Detention (Army) Rules 1979 for military corrective training centres. This is the only one of the non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department which has a statutory base. I regret that in my earlier answer to the hon. Member, Official Report, 27 April 1995, column 695, I erroneously stated that the Dartmoor steering group and working party also had a statutory base.

There is no statutory requirement for any of MOD's advisory non-departmental public bodies to publish their advice to Government, publish an annual report or lay their annual reports before Parliament.

The annual reports of the Dartmoor steering group and working party and the review board for Government contracts are placed in the Library of the House on a voluntary basis.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20472]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Bills Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. R. Thurgate to Mr. Clive Betts, dated 12 March 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March 1996, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, if no date was specified, older than 28 days. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Defence Bills Agency I have been asked to reply.

As the Defence Bills Agency pays approximately 3 million bills each year, the information requested is only available at disproportionate cost. However, we do monitor our payment performance closely in terms of volume of bills. So far this financial year over 99.9% of bills have been paid within 30 days fo receipt at our office in Liverpool. We also measure our performance against the higher departmental standard of payment within 11 days, we have achieved an average of 97% so far this financial year.

ENVIRONMENT

Landfill Tax

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the timetable for finalising his Department's proposed waste classification system will be coincident with that for implementation of the landfill tax; and if he will make a statement. [19138]

Mr. Clappison: The landfill tax will be introduced on 1 October this year, as my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, confirmed in his Budget speech last autumn. Those wastes subject to the lower rate of tax have been the subject of extensive consultation by HM Customs and Excise and will be set out in a Treasury order. A draft of the proposed contents of the order will be circulated in April. The third stage of the consultation on the national waste classification scheme will be published next month by my Department in conjunction with the Welsh Office, the Scottish Office and the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland. This will involve the introduction of the scheme on a non-statutory basis from April, so that its use can be fully assessed.

Water Companies (Pay)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed by, and how many served on the boards of, (a) Anglian Water, (b) North West Water, (c) Northumbrian Water Ltd., (d) Severn Trent, (e) Southern Water Services, (f) South West, (g) Thames Water, (h) Welsh Water, (i) Wessex Water and (j) Yorkshire Water; and what was the total remuneration paid to those on the board of each company, in the final year before each was privatised. [19430]

Mr. Clappison: This information is given in the prospectus for the water share offers published in November 1989. A copy of the prospectus is available in the Library.

Purchase Grant Scheme

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to consult on his proposals to exempt small rural settlements from the purchase grant scheme; and if he will make a statement. [19763]

Mr. Curry: We have today issued a consultation paper asking for comments from local authorities, housing associations, rural groups and other interested parties on how we propose to exempt small rural settlements in England from the new purchase grant scheme.

As we announced in the rural White Paper, neither the voluntary purchase grant scheme for associations' existing properties, nor the planned statutory scheme for future publicly-funded developments will apply to rural villages with a population of 3,000 or fewer inhabitants. This is because we recognise the particular difficulty there can be in such areas in building or finding replacement properties for rent.

The Housing Bill currently before Parliament would give the Secretary of State the power to designate by order rural areas where the new right would not arise.

The consultation paper sets out the way we propose to implement this designation in England. It invites comments on our general approach, and on the rural detailed proposals for 15 broadly representative counties and areas. We will also consult on the remaining areas of England, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will consult on proposals for Wales in due course.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Vote Office, and in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies of supplementary papers providing further details of proposed designations for each individual county or area, including copies of any maps needed, have also been placed in both Libraries.

Building Regulations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the adequacy of part B of the Building Regulations to take account of (a) modern building methods and construction techniques and (b) requirements of current fire safety needs; and if he will make a statement. [19747]

Mr. Clappison: My Department keeps the Building Regulations and associated technical guidance under review with issues such as these very much in mind.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend part B of the Building Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [19751]

Mr. Clappison: At its meeting on 22 February, the Building Regulations Advisory Committee considered a revised draft of the technical guidance approved in support of part B of the Building Regulations. I expect to be able to put these proposals out for public consultation later this year.

National Spring Clean

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to support the national spring clean from 12 to 21 April. [19952]

Mr. Clappison: National spring clean is funded from the Department of the Environment's grant to the Tidy Britain Group. The Tidy Britain Group has received a total grant of £2,897,000 in 1995–96.

The Department also intends to support publicity events and other activities connected with the national spring clean campaign.

Deceased Council Tax Payers

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received about notices issued by local authorities following the death of a council tax payer; [20069]

(2) if he will issue guidance to local authorities in respect of the appropriate tone to be employed in notices issued following the death of a council tax payer. [20068]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am aware of only one such representation.

The form of each notice is for individual local authorities to determine. However, we have issued guidance to authorities suggesting that notices issued in these circumstances should be accompanied by a sympathetic letter to the bereaved.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 102, what sanctions are available to the Environment Agency in cases where a company has failed to implement solutions to pollution problems within the time scale agreed with the agency or with a predecessor authority. [20350]

Mr. Clappison: Section 13 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, through the Environment Act of 1995, provides for the Environment Agency to serve a company with an enforcement notice if it has failed to comply with the conditions of an authorisation issued under the 1990 Act. Section 23 also makes it an offence to operate a process without complying with all the conditions of such an authorisation.

Cement Kilns

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 101, at what intervals chief inspector's guidance notes are reviewed; and when the chief inspector will next issue guidance notes on meeting the requirements of the hazardous waste incineration directive. [20349]

Mr. Clappison: Chief inspector's guidance notes on processes subject to integrated pollution control are reviewed every four years, or sooner where developments in pollution abatement techniques or technology warrant it.

Revisions to chief inspector's guidance notes for the waste disposal and recycling sector are due to be published in May/June 1996; revised guidance dealing with incineration processes is expected in June, and will give guidance on meeting the requirements of the hazardous waste incineration directive.

Thoresby Colliery (Accident)

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Director General of the Health and Safety Commission about the fatal accident that took place at Thoresby colliery, Nottinghamshire; and if he will make a statement. [18956]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. I refer to my written answer of 19 October 1995, Official Report, columns 307–08, about the fatal accident at Thoresby colliery on 12 October 1995. I hope to be in a position to write to the hon. Gentleman later this month following the conclusion of the Health and Safety Executive's investigation and the inquest into the miner's death.

Child Employees

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) injuries and (b) deaths occurred in the last year for which figures are available among employed children where the source of injury or death was a direct consequence of employment. [19369]

Sir Paul Beresford: For 1994–95, the provisional figures for fatal and other injuries to employees under 16 years reported to the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division and local authorities are:

Severity of injury	Number of injuries[1]
Fatal	1
Non-fatal[2]	39
Total	40

[1] Includes trainees/pupils on work experience.

[2] Includes major and over three-day injuries as defined by the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.

Education Authority Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, columns 153–54, on the total amounts of grants provided to local authorities responsible for education if he will provide the figures separately for each local authority. [20278]

Mr. Curry: I have arranged for the figures for all local authorities to be placed in the Library.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20100]

Sir Paul Beresford: Details of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department are listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1995". A copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him on 27 April 1995, Official Report, column 616. The information contained in that answer remains correct.

None of the advisory bodies has a statutory requirement to publish an annual report or lay it before Parliament. The following advisory NDPBs publish annual reports on a voluntary basis: the Advisory Committee on Hazardous Substances, the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment, the Local Government Commission for England and the Property Advisory Group, the report for 1995 being its first.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20478]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and is available only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exports

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to end subsidies to the arms export trade; and if he will make a statement. [17915]

Mr. Oppenheim: It has been long-standing Government policy for the Export Credits Guarantee Department to support defence exports on no more favourable terms than apply to civil sales. The ECGD operates to a financial break-even objective on its new business, applying the same prudent underwriting criteria, cover policy and premium rates to civil and defence business.

Although there is the possibility of a subsidy arising from fixed rate export finance supported by the ECGD, the United Kingdom has been at the forefront of international negotiations to progressively eliminate the potential for such subsidy. The minimum interest rates supported under FREF are determined by international agreements, and fixed by reference to market levels.

While defence-related exports are not covered by these agreements, the ECGD applies the same rules in financing support for defence sales as for civil sales.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all cases since 1987 in which his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19467]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department does not purchase raw computer capacity as such. Instead, a range of computer-related services is procured from a variety of sources. Following decentralisation of related budget responsibilities to individual management units, central records do not cover all uses of such services. In addition, the costs of those services reflect not only the computer capacity required but the specialist manpower and communication facilities needed to deliver them.

The majority of these services are currently delivered to my Department by Hoskyns plc following its success in a market test in 1994. The total value of services delivered during the first year of the contract was £6.7 million. Prior to the market test these services were delivered from in-house capacity. In addition, my Department has used the Treasury's Chessington Computer Centre for staff pay and pensions since 1980 at a current annual cost of £354,000.

Inward Investment

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) where inward investment seminars and conferences were held by his Department in 1995; and what was the range of numbers participating; [19939]

(2) how many inward investment seminars or conferences were held by his Department in 1995 and at what cost; and what cost was incurred in renting the venues. [19946]

Mr. Oppenheim: For the financial year 1995–96, my Department's Invest in Britain Bureau has been involved with the following seminars and conferences for inward investors:

Where held	Overall costs	Cost of venue £	Number of participants
Copenhagen, Denmark	Seminar sponsored by Den Danske Bank	Nil	15
Munich	£25,000	864.80	130
Stuttgart	Sponsored by BW Bank	Nil	50
Seminar with IHK Frankfurt	Arranged by Chamber of Commerce	Nil	20
Osaka, Japan	[1]£80,075	[1]4,678	153
Aomori, Japan	[1]£1,952	[1]1,861	35
Akita, Japan	[1]£1,623	[1]1,664	36
Morioka, Japan	[1]£2,415	[1]2,254	46
Yamagata, Japan	[1]£1,709	[1]1,407	24
Taipei Computer Association, Taiwan	[2]£140	Nil	6

[1] £1 = 140 Yen.
[2] £1 = 40 NT$.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, columns 135–36, if he will give powers to shareholders of public companies to enable them to receive a detailed explanation of the reasons for a creditor company's refusal to initiate an action for bankruptcy in instances where the debt is in excess of £50,000 and where the debtor is an hon. Member. [19936]

Mr. Oppenheim: In general, shareholders of companies delegate to their board to management decisions such as the enforcement of debts owed to the company. A power for shareholders to intervene in these specific circumstances would not be appropriate.

Government Contracts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what procedures are in place to verify the credentials of private companies who tender for Government contracts. [20189]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A copy of the chapters from my Department's procurement manual providing guidance on the procedures for verifying the credentials of private companies which tender for DTI contracts has been placed in the Library of the House.

Reform Assistance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the criteria used for establishing areas eligible for regional assistance in the United Kingdom are identical with those used in other EU countries; and if he will make a statement. [20009]

Mr. Oppenheim: The criteria for eligibility for grants under the regional objectives of the EC structural fund are, in general terms, identical. They are contained in Council regulation (EEC) 2052/99 as amended by 2081/93 (OJ L193 of 31 July 1993). The criteria for designating areas eligible for support under the regional selective assistance scheme are based on travel-to-work areas and are not therefore identical to those used in other EU countries.

Compliance Unit

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what cases are currently being pursued by his Department's single market compliance unit. [20221]

Mr. Oppenheim: The single market compliance unit is currently pursuing about 70 cases. The details of these are commercially confidential.

Manufactured Exports (Germany)

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps his Department is taking to investigate the extent of German non-tariff barriers against the import of manufactured goods from the United Kingdom. [20220]

Mr. Oppenheim: My Department has issued studies on the operation of the single market in public procurement, the chemicals sector and in respect of standards, testing and certification. The Department also analyses the complaints to its single market compliance unit. The unit received 13 complaints in 1995 alleging specific unjustified German non-tariff barriers to trade in manufactured goods. The Department has taken all of these up with the European Commission, the German Government, or both.

Fuel Suppliers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received (a) during 1995 and (b) since 1 January alleging that certain fuel suppliers are (i) practising selective price support in favour of company-owned sites and (ii) discriminating against independent dealers through allegedly uncompetitive contracts; what representations have urged him to refer this matter to the Director General of Fair Trading; and if he will make a statement. [20214]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has received a number of representations on behalf of independent retailers during 1995 and this year regarding the pricing policies of fuel suppliers. These have been brought to the attention of the Director General of Fair Trading, who has responsibility for investigating allegations of anti-competitive behaviour or abuse of monopoly power. The Office of Fair Trading investigated these complaints, which included some concerned with Esso's pilot pricewatch campaign, and concluded that action under competition legislation was not appropriate. However, the Office of Fair Trading will continue to monitor the market.

Plutonium Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will specify the origin of the reactor, the isotopic composition, point of departure, mode of transport and final end use of the United Kingdom plutonium exported to the United States of America between 1967 and 1988 in the form of fuel elements. [20268]

Mr. Page: Plutonium exported from the United Kingdom to the United States of America under civil bilateral agreements was used for fuel elements as part of the US civil programme. All such exports were, where applicable, subject to the application of International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards. Plutonium exported for civil purposes was derived from UK reactors. Given the period over which these exports were made, information relating to the isotopic composition and mode of transport could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cost Accounting

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the proposal of the Accounting Standards Board for abandonment of historical cost accounting. [20269]

Mr. Oppenheim: The draft of the proposed "Statement of Principles for Financial Reporting" published for public comment by the Accounting Standards Board does not propose an abandonment of historical cost accounting. Present practice already incorporates certain current values. The draft statement of principles makes clear the ASB's belief that, as markets develop, current values will become increasingly relevant and reliable. The ASB therefore encourages the development of practice in that direction but has stressed that it will not move faster on this subject than the business community will accept.

I welcome the publication of the draft statement as apart of the ASB's valuable work on improving the quality of financial reporting. I hope that the business community will consider what the statement has to say on the numerous important issues it addresses and will take the opportunity to contribute to the debate on them.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the total number of workers in receipt of the national minimum wage in (a) the USA, (b) Japan, (c) Australia, (d) Canada, (e) New Zealand and (f) each EU state; and what percentage this represents of the total work force in employment in (a) to (f). [20318]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government do not collect this information, and believe that it could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Employment Rights

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the number of claims referred in each of the last three years to (a) the commission for the rights of trade union members and (b) the commission for protection against unlawful industrial action; and in each case how many were successful; [20337]

(2) what was the expenditure of (a) the commission for the rights of trade union members and (b) the commission for protection against unlawful industrial action in each of the last three years; [20342]

(3) if he will list (a) the numbers employed and (b) the expenditure on administration by (i) the commission for the rights of trade union members and (ii) the commission for protection against unlawful industrial action in the last three years; [20341]

(4) if he will list (a) the hours of work per week and (b) the remuneration of (i) the Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members and (ii) the Commissioner for Protection against Unlawful Industrial Action. [20340]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is no commission for the rights of trade union members nor commission for protection against unlawful industrial action. One person, Mrs. Gill Rowlands, currently, occupies both the office of Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members, CRTUM, and the Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action, CPAUIA. The CPAUIA was established in August 1993. The number of formal applications made to the CRTUM and the CPAUIA, and the numbers supported by the commissioners in each year are as follows.

	CRTUM		CPAUIA
	Total applications supported	Total applications supported
1993—94[1]	47	8	1	—
1994–95	57	12	—	—

[1] For the CPAUIA, August 1993 to 31 March 1994.
[2] 1 April 1995 to 8 March 1996.

The expenditure of each of the commissioners for each of the last three years has been as follows:

	CRTUM £	CPAUIA £
1993–94[1]	274,941	85,880
1994–95	293,716	104,543
1995–96[2]	287,888	86,218

Five staff have provided support for both Commissioners for the last three years.
[1] For the CPAUIA, August 1993 to 31 March 1994.
[2] 1 April 1995 to 8 March 1996.

Expenditure on administration (comprising staff salaries, accommodation and fuel and utilities) has been:

	CRTUM £	CPAUIA £
1993–94[1]	100,910	24,342

[19583]

[20052]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 11 March 1996]: No DTI computer disk has been stolen in the incident referred to by the hon. Member. The President had no responsibility for the decision not to prosecute for the misuse of information held by the Treasury Solicitor.

Insolvency Service

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to public funds of the proposed contracting out of insolvency casework as broken down into (a) the pre-feasibility study, (b) the feasibility study, (c) the 1995 advertisements, (d) the handling of the 149 expressions of interest, (e) the requirements scoping document, (f) the sifting of the 91 initial proposals, (g) the negotiations with 34 companies, (h) the invitation to tender, (i) the identification of three tenders offering value for money and (j) the stringent technical and financial evaluation; and what was the total cost of this exercise. [19584]

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The cost of the pre-feasibility and feasibility studies into the scope for private sector involvement in the work of official receivers was £65,251 and £61,500 — excluding VAT—respectively.

The costs of the contracting out exercise undertaken by the Insolvency Service, in the period beginning October 1994 when the Government announced their intention to pursue the preferred option identified by the then consultants to the announcement on 28 February 1996 of the outcome was £2,288,594. This figure could be broken down into the areas specified only at disproportionate cost.

As a result of the drive for greater efficiency implemented during the period of the contracting-out exercise, the service will achieve a reduction this financial year of 3 per cent. in the unit costs of bankruptcy and company liquidations.

I expect to announce shortly the targets which I have set for the Insolvency Service in 1996–97, which will look to the service to delivery substantial further savings above that level.

Structural Funds

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if there will be a revision of the areas eligible for grant from the EU structural funds under objective 2. [9379]

Mr. Eggar: [pursuant to his reply, 11 January 1996, Official Report, co. 293]:

On 8 March, the Commission announced that member states' total populations eligible for objective 2 grant will remain unchanged.

This is welcome news for the United Kingdom, preserving our national share of the total population in objective 2 areas, which is the largest of all member states. It follows strong representations made by the Government to the Commission and reflects the consensus at the meeting of EC Ministers in Madrid on 1 December in favour of complete continuity between the current list and the new list of areas.

The Commission is, however, inviting member states, if they wish, to make in the near future proposals for marginal additions to the list, to be balanced by proposed deletions of areas of equal population. I have considered carefully the question of proposing marginal changes to the list of UK objective 2 areas.

The programmes for current eligible areas have been running for less than 18 months. This is insufficient time to address the long-term structural problems which led to their designation under objective 2. I have had some representations in favour of additions to the list, and some in favour of no change, but only one proposing deletions, in a different part of the country from the proposer. I therefore do not intend to put forward any proposals for changes in the UK list. The list of eligible British areas will therefore remain unchanged.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19429]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Roxborough and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 16 February 1996, Official Report, column 728.

These figures as a percentage are:

1992–93: 0.19 per cent.

1993–94: 0.13 per cent.

1994–95: 0.19 per cent.

1995–96: 0.62 per cent.

There is no record of any letters from hon. Members being transferred to executive agencies.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to raise at the forthcoming meeting of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva, the subject of violations of human rights in Sudan; and if he will make a statement. [20223]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We deplore the continual and widespread violations of human rights in the Sudan. Together with our EU partners, we will seek to ensure continued monitoring of the situation by the UN Commission on Human Rights.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the evidence of violations of human rights in Sudan presented by Baroness Cox and John Eibner of Christian Solidarity International; and if he will make a statement. [20222]

Mr. Hanley: We read the reports of Baroness Cox and John Eibner with interest and concern. They contain many disturbing first-hand accounts of human rights abuses. We expect the Government of Sudan to investigate them fully and take appropriate action when allegations are well founded. Investigating human rights abuses in Sudan is not easy, but it is important to establish the facts. We look to the Government of Sudan to allow human rights monitors, including the UN Special Rapporteur, free access to all areas of Sudan.

British Council

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the British Council now has to withdraw facilities and services previously available to its staff. [21227]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia's mandate covers the whole territory of the former Yugoslavia.

China (Missile Testing)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what occasions the testing of missiles by China near Taiwan's main ports has been raised in the European Union; and if he will make a statement; [20119]

(2) if Her Majesty's Government will protest at the Government of China's decision to have missile tests close to Taiwan on 11 to 15 March; and if he will make a statement. [20118]

Mr. Hanley: The European Union partners issued the following statement in Rome on 8 March:

"The EU deeply regret the firing by the People's Republic of China of missiles, beginning in the morning of March 8th, into test zones in the Taiwan Straits. The planned week-long exercise could lead to further tension in the region and increase the possibility of any miscalculation eventually leading to confrontation.

The EU, recalling the pledge always made by the PRC to stick to its fundamental policy on the Taiwan issue, which is to seek a peaceful solution, call on the PRC to refrain from actions which could have negative effects on the security of the entire region and urge early resumption of the cross-Strait talks".

We continue to monitor this difficult situation very closely.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20099]

Mr. Hanley: I have nothing to add to the answer that the then Minister for State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury, (Mr. Goodlad) gave to the hon. Member on 27 April 1995, Official Report, columns 707–08.

Mr. Imshah Syed

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which Mr. Imshah Syed was refused leave to board a plane for Pakistan on 6 February to attend the Human Rights International General Assembly in London. [20120]

Mr. Hanley: We assume that the question relates to Mr. Syed Imdad Shah. We understand that Mr. Shah was refused leave to board a flight from Islamabad on 6 March on the instructions of the Pakistani authorities.

Human Rights

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the United Nations draft declaration on human rights defenders and its inclusion on the agenda of the 52nd session of the UN Commission on Human Rights. [20369]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have participated actively in the working group preparing this declaration and regret that it has not been possible to reach agreement yet on a text. The UN Commission at its forthcoming session will consider a recommendation that the working group chairman should prepare a consolidated and refined text for further consideration by the group.

EU Member States (Territories)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 260, if he will list for each EU member state those territories for whose external relations it is responsible; and in each case if the territory is (a) a member of the EU and (b) elects representatives to the European Parliament. Mr. Hanley [holding answer 8 March 1996]: Capita Managed Services and Lusis Business Solutions are not currently involved in bidding to the FCO for any of these services.

EU Working Time Directive

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to implement the European Union's working time directive; and if he will make a statement. [20332]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

I have no intention of implementing any part of the working time directive in advance of the decision by the European Court of Justice on the UK's legal challenge to the directive.

PRIME MINISTER

Government Policies (Lichfield)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the impact of Government policies on the people of the city of Lichfield. [18422]

The Prime Minister: Lichfield has benefited fully from the Government's policies, which have given this country a stronger recovery than any other large European country and the longest run of low inflation for almost 50 years. Unemployment in Lichfield has fallen by 40 per cent. since its peak.

Department of Employment

Mr. Burden: To ask the Prime Minister what functions of the former Department of Employment have been transferred to (a) the Department of Trade and Industry, (b) The Department for Education and Employment and (c) other Government Departments; and what plans he has for the further transfer of such functions. [20399]

The Prime Minister: We intend to take part in this congress in response to an invitation I have received from the Swedish Prime Minister. This figure includes both those who are awaiting trial and those who have been convicted and are awaiting sentence. The period since first remand into custody includes any intervening time spent on bail into prison. 265 of these remand prisoners were held in either Manchester prison or Hindley remand centre.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Gatsometer speed cameras are in use on trunk roads in England and Wales. [19619]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of prosecutions for speeding offences detected by automatic cameras is published in the annual Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Motoring Offences, England and Wales 1994", issue 23/95, Table B, copies of which can be found in the Library.

The information available to me suggests that some 94 per cent. of these prosecutions completed during 1994 led to a conviction.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the reliability of evidence gained by Gatsometer speed cameras. [19621]

Mr. Maclean: All radar speed meters, such as the Gatsometer, have to be type approved by the Secretary of State under the provisions of section 20 of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988, as amended, before they can be used for traffic law enforcement. To obtain type approval, such equipment must first be evaluated by the police service and it is then subjected to independent laboratory testing in which it has to meet published standards, including ones for accuracy and reliability, which have been set by the police scientific development branch. Police procedures also provide for other checks to be made on the reliability and accuracy of the equipment when it is in use.

Chinese Community

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations made in the 1985 report of the Home Affairs Committee on the Chinese community in Britain. [19644]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Football-related Offences

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British citizens were arrested in Munich before Nottingham Forest's match with Bayern Munich in the UEFA cup; and how many of them had previously been convicted in England for football-related offences. [19876]

Mr. Maclean: Of the 56 English fans arrested, three are known to have been previously convicted in England and Wales for football-related offences.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the German Government to seek to reach a bilateral agreement with that Government so that domestic courts can impose restriction orders on those convicted of football-related offences in Germany. [19875]

Mr. Maclean: Approaches were made to the German Government shortly after the Football Spectators Act 1989 was implemented. However, there has been no progress so far in reaching an agreement, largely because of the federal structure of Germany.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he is making to the German authorities to ensure that all those arrested for alleged offences in Munich before Nottingham Forest's match with Bayern Munich in the UEFA cup are prosecuted in Germany. [19874]

Mr. Maclean: The prosecution of those who commit offences in another country is entirely a matter for that country.

Prisoners' Brains

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who is responsible for decisions to remove deceased prisoners' brains; [19955]

(2) who was responsible for the decision to remove Ronald Kray's brain. [19954]

Mr. Sackville: If organs or tissue are required to be removed for further examination to establish the cause of death, the decision is taken by the pathologist under the direction of the coroner.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each of the locations in which Ronald Kray's brain was stored before being returned to the body. [19963]

Mr. Sackville: Arrangements for the care of the material are a matter for the pathologists involved.

Electoral Registration

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted and fined for refusing to enter their names on the electoral register in each of the last five years. [19690]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to use improved technology to provide for a closing date for absent vote applications nearer the date of elections; what proposals he has to abolish dies non in future calculations of election timetables; and if he will make a statement. [19803]

Mr. Sackville: The Government have been considering the question of changing the closing date for the receipt of absent voting applications and hope to make an announcement soon. There are no plans to abolish dies non.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to use improved technology to provide for a qualifying date for electoral registration nearer the publication of the electoral register; and if he will make a statement. [19804]

Mr. Sackville: The great majority of electoral registration officers already make extensive use of technology, but still require all the time between the qualifying date and the publication of the register to meet the current statutory provisions. There are no plans to change either date.

Crime (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the level of recorded crime in Bournemouth in each quarter since 1992. [19815]

Mr. Maclean: Information on recorded crime below police force level is not collected centrally.

Body Parts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all those who have made contact with (a) his Department and (b) the Prison Service in order to solicit body parts for (i) organ donation and (ii) medical research; and what was the response to each request. [19964]

Mr. Sackville: It is a matter for the relatives and the person in lawful possession of the body to authorise the removal of body parts for these purposes and we are not aware of any such applications made to the Department or to the Prison Service. The donation of organs and the removal of body parts for medical research are governed by the Human Tissue Act 1961.

Visas

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those countries whose nationals are able to enter the United Kingdom without a visa. [20070]

Mr. Kirkhope: A list of those countries or territories whose nationals require visas to enter the United Kingdom is set out in the appendix to the Immigration Rules, as amended, a copy of which is in the Library.

Betting

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers are available to enforce the original contract where a gambler places a series of ante-post bets which are subsequently successful and the bookmaker fails to pay out on the accumulator and sets maximum winnings at a significantly lower level. [19372]

Mr. Kirkhipe: In law, all wagering contracts are unenforceable. However, under the Licensed Betting Offices Regulations 1986, bookmakers are required to display a notice setting out the terms on which they invite persons to bet on those premises including any maximum limit on the amount of winnings and the procedure for the resolutions of disputed bets.

Forensic Science Laboratory, Chepstow

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes his Department plans which will affect the forensic science laboratory in Chepstow; and if he will make a statement. [19933]

Mr. Maclean: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Chief Executive of the Forensic Science Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Janet Thompson to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 12 March 1996:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question about the future of the Forensic Science Service (FSS) laboratory at Chepstow. As you know, the arrangement now is that the Chief Executive of an Executive Agency, with the agreement of the Ministers, replies to Members of Parliament on operational matters. I am therefore replying on behalf of the FSS.

The FSS announced on 29 February that, as part of a national restructuring programme, it was looking at proposals to close three laboratories. These are first the laboratory at Aldermaston and subsequently, depending on the success of the earlier restructuring, those at Huntingdon and Chepstow. The proposals are subject to staff consultation. They were announced at this early stage to allow staff to be fully involved in their development. They are also subject to consultation with the police, both nationally and with individual Chief Constables, in particular on the development of a new national network of local forensic offices to bring forensic science closer to the investigator.

It may be helpful if I briefly explain the background to the proposals. As you may be aware, on 1 April 1996, the FSS is to merge with the Metropolitan Police Forensic Science Laboratory to form a new integrated national Forensic Science Service providing an improved and streamlined resource throughout England and Wales.

Joint research conducted by the FSS with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), together with regular FSS Customer Satisfaction surveys, have identified that substantial improvements could be achieved by the creation of a new national service, organised in national business areas. This would combine centralisation of scientific analysis to reduce cost and improve asset utilisation, with the development of a number of local forensic outlets to bring the service closer to its customers. We propose therefore, to concentrate scientific analytical resources at four key sites in London, Birmingham, Chorley and Wetherby. In addition to these four sites, there will be a network of new small forensic offices and satellite laboratories across the country. This will enable the FSS to provide a wide range of scientific support that will be geographically much more closely linked to the operational centres of the various county constabularies and metropolitan forces. The FSS is working with the Association of Chief Police Officers in developing the restructuring proposals to ensure that the changes support their forensic requirements.

As I explained earlier, the proposed closures are provisional at this stage. Moreover for all three laboratories, there is a guarantee that jobs will be available for all existing scientific caseworking staff. There will be some reductions in support staff at each site, but these will be small. The proposed restructuring will involve no diminution of service. Indeed the aim is to provide a better one. The increasing success of forensic science in the detection of crime and the conviction of offenders means that as a resource it must be made as easily available to the greatest number of police in the most cost effective way possible.

Child Abuse Cases

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the treatment of victims and witnesses in child abuse cases. [20024]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have introduced a range of measures in recent years to make it easier for children in these cases to give their evidence. The Criminal Justice Act 1988 made provision for children, with the leave of the court, to give their evidence by live television link so that they need never appear in court. The Criminal Justice Act 1991 prohibited the defendant from cross-examining the child and provided for a video-recorded interview to serve as the child's evidence-in-chief at the trial, again with the leave of the court.

These changes have helped to reduce stress for children who have to give evidence, but we are determined to implement further improvements. The Criminal Procedure and Investigations Bill provides for binding rulings to be made so that children will have greater certainty about whether a video-recorded interview will be admitted as evidence-in-chief and whether they can give their evidence by live television link. We are pursuing a range of other measures, including further consideration of ways to reduce delays, improved arrangements for preparing the child for what to expect and promoting best practice in dealing with child witnesses, which will secure practical benefits for children.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is undertaken by those responsible for the video taping of victims' evidence in child abuse cases; and if he will make a statement. [20025]

Mr. Maclean: The Government issued a memorandum of good practice following the introduction of the measures in the Criminal Justice Act 1991 which allow a video-recorded interview with the child to serve as their evidence-in-chief. The memorandum was drawn up with the assistance of professionals and organisations with the experience of working with abused children and provides practical guidance to police officers and social workers who conduct video-taped interviews.

In addition to the memorandum, training for interviewing was provided by courses under the auspices of the Metropolitan police training centre and supplemented by an Open university training pack. Police officers and social workers now receive joint training known as the CAMAT—child abuse management and training course. Advice on interviewing child witnesses and victims is also included in the national investigative interviewing course which is available to all police officers and is now incorporated in mainstream police training.

We have commissioned further research to identify and promote best local practices for training child abuse investigators.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of convictions for (a) violent crime, (b) car crime and (c) serious crime in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [20049]

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table.

Stalking

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on (a) the effectiveness of current legislation and injunctions to combat stalking and (b) his plans for legislation to combat stalking. [20026]

Mr. Maclean: The existing criminal law can be used to deal with a number of aspects of stalking behaviour. It is an offence to use threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour under the Public Order Act 1986; to make an indecent, obscene or menacing telephone call under the Telecommunications Act 1984; and to send an indecent, offensive and threatening letter under the Malicious Communications Act 1988. As a recent successful prosecution has shown, more serious acts by stalkers, such as causing grievous bodily harm, are caught by the criminal law.

Under civil law, a plaintiff may claim an injunction where he or she can demonstrate an actionable tort and once this is established the courts have a wide discretion to grant injunctions to meet the circumstances of a case.

Notwithstanding these powers, the Government are considering whether there is a need for wider measures specifically to combat the conduct of stalkers.

Director of Health Care for Prisoners

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to publish the fourth report of the Director of Health Care for Prisoners and the Health Advisory Committee's commentary on the report. [20823]

Miss Widdecombe: The report and commentary are published today. Copies are available from the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drink Driving

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure incurred in the production and advertising of the "Never Ever Drink and Drive" campaign on (a) television, (b) radio and (c) printed media. [19868]

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

Television: £328,600[1]

Radio: Nil

Printed media: £17,400

[1] Includes contribution from private sector.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the production and advertising of the "Never Ever Drink and Drive" campaign went to (a) public tender and (b) quotation. [19870]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Department of the Environment advertising agency briefed film production companies on 14 August 1995. Their quotations were submitted on 24 August 1995.

Public tendering rules do not apply to the purchase of advertising time and space. Production costs for the "Never Ever Drink and Drive" campaign were subject to quotation and extensive negotiation with all candidates during the months of September and October 1995.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what rules and regulations covered the tendering and awarding of the "Never Ever Drink and Drive" campaign; and how many tenders were requested. [19869]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Department of the Environment appointed the advertising agency, McCann-Erickson Belfast, by public tender, to carry out its road safety advertising campaigns. The "Never Ever Drink and Drive" campaign is part of that contract and the successful production company appointed to produce the television and cinema commercial was selected from bids from eight competing firms.

There are no published guidelines or regulations for advertising agencies when selecting production companies to produce a film.

Schools and Colleges (Expenditure)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the capital building programme for schools and colleges in Northern Ireland for the next five years. [19682]

Mr. Ancram: No. My Department's capital programme is published on an annual basis. The capital programme for 1996–97, totalling £48 million, was published on 5 February 1996.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the capital expenditure on schools and colleges in Northern Ireland in (a) real and (b) constant price terms in each of the past 10 years. [19681]

Mr. Ancram: Capital expenditure on schools and colleges by education and library boards and grants paid by the Department of Education on approved capital expenditure incurred by voluntary and grant-maintained integrated schools for each of the financial years 1984–85 to 1993–94 is set out in the table. Capital expenditure by boards is set out in the statements and the summary of the education and library boards' accounts, copies of which are available in the Library. The boards' figures for 1994–95 will be published in July 1996.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what estimate he has made of the maintenance backlog of each education and library board in Northern Ireland; [19683]

(2) what estimate he has made of the maintenance backlog of the education and library boards in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000; [19684]

(3) what action he has taken in response to the report by the Northern Ireland Audit Office "Education and Library Boards: Maintenance of Board Property". [19685]

Mr. Ancram: The current estimated maintenance backlog of each board is as follows:

Belfast: £33.6 million

North-eastern: £12.7 million

South-eastern: £30.3 million

Southern: £22.3 million

Western: £14.8 million

The extent of the maintenance backlog in any year is dependent on the previous level of investment by the boards and any additional demands which may arise. Estimates of the total maintenance needs for the three years ending 1999–2000 are not available.

The Northern Ireland Audit Office report has been considered in consultation with the education and library boards and a programme of action has been agreed to address the report's recommendations. This matter is the subject of on-going Public Accounts Committee consideration and my Department will be responding in detail to the PAC report in due course.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20483]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, if no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20473]

The Attorney-General: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1007.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Staff

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many staff work in (a) the Palace of Westminster and (b) each of the outbuildings. [19326]

Mr. Beith: Six hundred and thirty full-time and 80 part-time staff employed by the Commission work in the Palace of Westminster. Five hundred and forty-nine full-time and 82 part-time staff work in other buildings on the parliamentary estate.

Recycling

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what plans there are to discontinue the use of styrofoam cups in refreshment facilities in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings. [19290]

Sir Colin Shepherd: This is a matter for the Director of Catering Services; I have ask her to write to the hon. Member.

Ms Anderson: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what plans there are to increase recycling facilities in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings in the future. [19294]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The policy of the two Houses of Parliament is to recycle waste whenever possible. Under the waste collection contract for the Palace of Westminster and parliamentary outbuildings the contractor is required to sort waste into its constituent streams. These waste streams are sent for recycling wherever practicable. This process is audited to ensure compliance. In addition, bulk waste paper from the Vote Office and Fees Office is collected separately for recycling.

Any further increases in recycling facilities would be subject to space and staffing constraints.

Ms Anderson: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when the use of recycled stationery and envelopes began in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings. [19295]

Mr. Martin: Stocks of recycled A4 size writing paper with the crowned portcullis embossed plain and in green, blue and red, together with recycled plain post-paid envelopes became available from the Serjeant at Arms Stores with effect from June 1991.

Ms Anderson: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee (1) what plans there are to ensure that all parliamentary stationery and envelopes are derived from recycled material; [19296]

(2) what was the breakdown of the collection of recycled goods for each of the buildings within the parliamentary estate for each year since 1992–93; [19292]

(3) what steps have been taken to ensure that people working in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings are aware of recycling initiatives; [19297]

(4) if he will set out the facilities currently available within the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings for the purpose of recycling; [19293]

(5) what is the average tonnage of (a) paper, (b) glass, (c) metal and (d) plastic from the Palace of Westminster and surrounding office buildings recycled each year; [19291]

(6) what studies have been undertaken to determine how much money could be realised through the collection and sale of recycled goods in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings; [19289]

(7) if he will list the incentives currently in place in the Palace of Westminster and the surrounding office buildings to promote the use of recycling facilities. [19288]

Mr. Martin: These are matters for the Serjeant at Arms; I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Key: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what differences in cost would arise if all parliamentary stationery and enveloped were derived from recycled material; and if he will make a statement. [20233]

Mr. Martin [holding answer 11 March 1996]: At present prices it is estimated that the House would save £14,000 per annum if all paper and envelopes were from recycled paper. The hon. Member may be interested to note that recycled paper is now becoming more expensive than good quality paper, whereas 12 months ago it was the reverse, and costs are likely to change.

TREASURY

Child Benefit

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional revenue which would accrue from taxing child benefit as income. [19346]

Mr. Jack: If child benefit were taxed, the yield for 1996–97 from taxing it as part of the father's or lone mother's income would be about £1,300 million. If it were taxed as part of the mother's or lone father's income, the yield would be about £700 million.

Investment Statistics

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the capital value of (a) £1,000, (b) £2,000, (c) £3,000, (d) £4,000 and (e) £5,000 invested 18 years ago in (i) Government bonds, (ii) the average building society savings account and (iii) the average unit trust. [18862]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Capital values of £1,000 invested 18 years ago are as follows:

Investment	Capital value	Period of investment
(i) Government bonds	£7,587	End December 1977 to December 1995
(ii) average building society savings account	data not available over this period
(iii) Unit trusts	£14,230	End February 1978 to February 1996

The earliest published data for average building society savings account rates start in January 1984. The capital values of £1,000 invested 12 years ago are as follows:

Investment	Capital value	Period of investment
(i) Government bonds	£3,616	end December 1983 to December 1995
(ii) average building society savings account	£2,295	end December 1983 to December 1995
(iii) unit trusts	£4,795	end December 1983 to December 1995

All the above figures assume that interest and dividend payments are reinvested in the same investment instruments.

Financial Services Act

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy that it is up to the investor, alone, to identify a breach of section 47 of the Financial Services Act 1986. [19966]

Mrs. Angela Knight: No. It is also for those authorities with prosecution powers under section 47 to take what action they consider appropriate in the light of information they receive.

Farmers Union of Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has recently received from the Farmers Union of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [20078]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury has recently received no representations from the union.

DIY Housebuilders

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claims by do-it-yourself housebuilders for the refund of value added tax under the provisions of customs and excise notice number 719 were met in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995. [19646]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Details of the number of claims met in 1993 are not available. The number of claims met— partly estimate—in 1994 was 8,671 and the number met in 1995 was 10,423.

Landfill Tax

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make it his policy that capital already invested by companies in research and installation of the best practicable environmental option for the disposal of waste materials can be set against liability for landfill tax; [19993]

(2) what definition of qualifying material for the lower rate of landfill tax will be the benchmark for fiscal decision; [19994]

(3) what are the fiscal objectives of the landfill tax; [19976]

(4) when he expects to receive the report on the consultation process on the scope of the lower rate of the landfill tax; and if he will publish the results; [19975]

(5) what research he has commissioned into whether reduction in employers' national insurance contributions will provide the intended benefit to industry in relation to the landfill tax; [19979]

(6) if he will consider the zero-rating the landfill tax for those companies whose processes already comply with the environmental objectives of the tax; [19977]

(7) if he will consider extending the scope of the lower rate of landfill tax to include (a) waste materials which are commonly termed as inert or inactive, other than those listed in category 1 of the proposed natural waste confiscation system in the Finance Bill; [19978]

(8) what are the environmental objectives of the landfill tax; [19693]

(9) what are the definitions of active and inactive waste used for the purposes of the landfill tax in the consultation exercise on the system for classifying waste for the national waste classification system; [19694]

(10) if water, brine or other natural elements used to carry waste materials for landfill will be included in the weight measure for the landfill tax where they are recycled for re-use; [19695]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The objectives of the landfill tax are essentially environmental. It will play a key part in achieving the aims of the Government's waste strategy in reducing our reliance on landfill and promoting more sustainable alternatives such as waste minimisation, re-use and recovery. In fiscal terms it will also enable us to reduce employer national insurance contributions which will benefit industry by cutting the cost of employment by some £500 million a year, rather more than landfill tax is expected to raise. This follows extensive consultation with business and marks a shift in the burden of taxation on business, away from employment and towards taxing its environmental impact.

We have included a number of provisions in the legislation which will reinforce the environmental objectives of the tax. The associated proposal for environmental trusts, which has the potential to generate about £100 million of private sector investment for environmental improvement, will complement and reinforce our policies for sustainable waste management.

We also wish to facilitate the recycling and re-use of materials which are sent to landfill sites. Therefore, by agreement with the local customs officer, operators will be able to define tax-free zones within their sites to enable them to carry out non-taxable activities, such as waste separation for recycling and composting. There will also be provision for credits where an operator removes waste from his landfill site for recycling or re-use within 12 months of it being landfilled. And for certain wastes that contain added water to assist with waste disposable or for mineral extraction, local customs officers will be able to agree formulae with operators so that the tax is levied on the naturally occurring weight of the waste, provided that the added water does not increase the risk of pollution through leaching. This will ensure that there is no incentive for operators to reduce the addition of water where it is needed for environmental purposes. The categories of waste to which this applies will be set out in regulations, on which we shall be consulting.

I recognise that, for a range of wastes, landfill will remain the best practical environmental option and I am aware that in some cases industry has been responsible and invested to reduce the pollution potential of its waste. However, the fact that waste from a particular industrial process is disposed of in accordance with the best practical environmental option does not in itself ensure that the full environmental cost of landfill disposal is reflected in the price paid for waste disposal. The underlying purpose of the tax is to make environmental costs explicit and ensure that those contemplating activities with environmental impacts take account of these costs. The tax will also provide an incentive for waste producers to look for new ways to reduce the amount of waste which they produce.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his Budget that there will be two rates of landfill tax—a lower rate for inactive material and a standard rate for other wastes. Customs consulted on a proposal that all wastes falling within category one, the inactive category, of the Department of the Environment's national waste classification scheme should be liable to the lower rate of landfill tax. Inactive wastes are those that do not physically or chemically react, decay or adversely affect other matter with which they come into contact in a way that is likely to give rise to environmental pollution. The term active waste is not one which is used in the context of the landfill tax—wastes which will be liable at the standard rate will be all those which are not inactive or exempt.

In considering what will be included in the list of lower rate materials, we will take account of whether the materials are commonly described as inert or inactive. But that does not necessarily mean listing only those wastes which are set out in category 1 of the waste classification scheme. There are wastes currently listed in other categories of the scheme where the risk of pollution is minimal. We will consider including such materials in the lower rate list in the light of the replies to the consultation exercise.

Customs is currently analysing these replies and will submit its findings to Ministers shortly. Once these have been evaluated, we will announce our decisions and publish a report on the consultation. The Treasury order containing the list of items to be included in the lower rate will be laid during the summer.

Income Tax (Probation Service Trainees)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations led the Inland Revenue not to repay income tax to those probation service trainees from whom it was illegally deducted before 1992; and if he will make a statement. [18507]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Payments to candidates sponsored by the Home Office to undertake training as probation officers were originally considered to be taxable and tax was deducted by the Home Office. However, following a decision of the special commissioners in 1990, it was accepted that the payments constituted a scholarship and were therefore exempt from tax. Repayments have been made to students who had tax deducted in error back as far as 1985–86. The Inland Revenue is considering further the position for earlier years with its legal advisers.

Tax Office Closures

Ms Coffey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he is undertaking into the proposed closure of the LP30 income tax office in Stockport and the LP12 and LP13 offices in Old Trafford and their relocation to Manchester; and what estimate he has made of the (a) cost and (b) savings from relocation. [18973]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 5 March 1996]: The Inland Revenue is engaged in a programme to reorganise the structure of all local tax and collection offices to ensure the right operational framework is in place to deliver its business objectives. As part of this programme, the controller of Inland Revenue north-west regional office is looking at all London provincial tax offices in the Greater Manchester area together to rationalise accommodation and form a coherent reorganisation package.

Private finance initiative options are under consideration but further detailed work is required before a final decision can be made. Preliminary indications are that the proposed reorganisation will offer significant financial savings as well as providing opportunities to provide a better quality service to the taxpayer and improve the working environment of staff.

National Health Service (VAT)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of total VAT receipts from the NHS in each year from 1979 to 1995. [20266]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 March 1996]: Estimates of the total VAT on expenditure by the NHS are as follows for each year from 1979 to 1994. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Media Ownership

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations have been received from, or on behalf of, regional newspapers in respect of the cross-media ownership proposals in the Broadcasting Bill; and if she will make a statement. [19339]

Mr. Sproat: My Department has received a large number of letters on this issue from the local newspaper industry. Ministers and officials have met its representatives on many occasions. We have listened carefully to the industry's concerns and amended the Government's proposals in the light of them. We remain of the view, however, that limits on cross-ownership between newspapers and broadcasters are needed both at the national level and at the local level.

Wrecks

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she is taking to ensure the adequate publication of the results of archaeological excavation of designated wreck sites off England and Wales. [19760]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has responsibility for designated wreck sites in English territorial waters. Those in Welsh waters are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Wales. The Advisory Committee on Historic Wreck Sites, which advises on all matters concerning designated wreck sites throughout United Kingdom waters, actively encourages licensees to publish results of their investigations. I understand that an independent body is considering a publication recording survey and excavation work on all designated sites since the introduction of the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973.

Television Licences

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what powers exists to confiscate the television set from a household where the licence has not been paid and where the owner of the set refuses, or is unable to pay; and if she will make a statement. [19878]

Mr. Sproat: The only penalty available for television licence fee evasion under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949, as amended, is a fine of up to £1,000. Non-payment can lead to the seizure of goods which may be sold to realise the value of the fine, but there is no power for the courts to order seizure of specific goods. In addition, following conviction, the courts in England and Wales have the power to order forfeiture of any property in an offender's possession which was used or was intended to be used in the commission of an offence, irrespective of whether the offender is dealt with in any other way. In making the order, however, the court must have regard to the value of the property and the effects, financial or other, on the offender. We are unaware of any licence evasion cases in which the courts have ordered forfeiture of a TV set.

Deregulation

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what deregulation orders her Department has made under sections 1 to 4 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. [20717]

Mr. Sproat: The Department laid its first deregulation order before the Parliamentary Scrutiny Committees on 4 March 1996. This will ease the burden on business by abolishing the existing statutory requirements for television dealers both to register with the BBC and to hold and pay a fee for a dealer demonstration licence.

International Sporting Events

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on her Department's response to the fifth report of the National Heritage Select Committee's report "Bids to Stage International Sporting Events", HC (1994–95) 493. [20716]

Mr. Sproat: My Department responded to the National Heritage Select Committee's report on 11 January and I have today placed copies of the response in the House Libraries.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18651]

Mr. Sproat: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

[20095]

Mr. Sproat: The Theatres Trust has a statutory base.

[1] The Library and Information Commission is less than a year old and has not yet published an annual report. When it does so it will decide if it will lay the report before Parliament.

Capita Managed Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the (a) facilities management consortia, (b) private finance initiative bids, (c) management buyout consortia, (d) contractorisation schemes and (e) market testing schemes in her Department in respect of which (i) Capita Managed Services and (ii) Lusis Business Solutions are currently involved in bidding. [19907]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer Friday 8 March 1996]: Neither my Department nor its two agencies are involved in any bids with either Capita Managed Services or Lusis Business Solutions for any of the five categories mentioned.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the implications of the resignation of John Jasper as chairman of Capital Managed Services Ltd. the liquidation of Midsummer Computer Exchange and his appointment as a director of Lusis Business Solutions on the transfer of the Midsummer contract to Lusis for the supply of software to UK public sector museums. [19782]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer Friday 8 March 1996]: I have no plans to make such an assessment. The procurement of software by individual museums is a matter for the museums concerned.

Military Knights

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 19 February 1996, Official Report, column 63, if she will state the current level of gross income set by the keeper of the privy purse for the military knights of Windsor. [19440]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer Friday 8 March 1996]: The current level of gross income set by the keeper of the privy purse for officers wishing to apply for the appointment of military knights of Windsor is £10,000.

Royal Palaces Estate

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list those members of the royal family who occupy self-contained residential accommodation on the occupied royal palaces estate. [19439]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer Friday 8 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 February, Official Report, column 547.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the names of the pensioners and the location of their accommodation within the occupied royal palaces estate. [19435]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 8 March 1996]: There have been several retirements over the past 18 months and there are now 34 pensioners in housing maintained from the grant in aid provided by my Department.

Nine were previous stables staff or are the widows of previous stables staff, four were previously members of the domestic staff or are widows of previous members of the domestic staff, one is the sister of a previous member of the domestic staff, four were previously gatekeepers or are widows of previous gatekeepers, one is the widow of a previous curator at Hampton Court palace, 11 were previously officials in the royal household and four are grace and favour occupants.

One pensioner lives in Marlborough House mews, eight in or adjacent to the Royal mews at Windsor castle, seven in Windsor Home park, eight in Windsor Great park, nine in or near to the Royal mews at Hampton court and one in Hampton court paddocks.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the names of the grace and favour pensioners and the accommodation they have within the occupied royal palaces estate. [19434]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 8 March 1996]: There are four grace and favour pensioners. One is a cousin of the Queen, one is a retired principal of the foundation of St. Catherine, one is the daughter of a wartime chief of the general staff and one is a former nanny to the Queen's children.

Three of the pensioners are housed in Windsor Great park and one in Windsor Home park.

Windsor Castle

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 17 January 1996, Official Report, column 731, if she will make a statement of the way in which the public funds contribution to the costs of fire damage to Windsor castle was calculated; and what specific restoration costs will be met from the expected £10.8 million contribution from public funds. [19482]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 8 March 1996]: Following the fire at Windsor castle, the royal household offered to fund 70 per cent. of the cost of the restoration by opening the state rooms at Buckingham palace to the public and introducing charges for entry to the precincts of Windsor castle. The balance of 30 per cent. was to be found from the existing level of funding provided by my Department for the general maintenance of the estate.

Total expenditure will be split on a 70 per cent. basis and no specific items will be allocated to either tranche.

Prince and Princess of Wales (Accommodation)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what accommodation at Kensington palace is occupied by Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales and her staff. [19365]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The Princess of Wales has an apartment at Kensington palace and two of Her Royal Highness's domestic staff occupy flats there.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what accommodation at St. James's palace is occupied by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and his staff. [19364]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The Prince of Wales has an apartment at St. James's palace. None of his staff has self-contained residential accommodation at St. James's palace, although His Royal Highness's office is there.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Fire Services

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he plans to make an announcement on the role of the fire service arising out of the report of an interdepartmental review of fire safety legislation and enforcement completed in June 1994. [20274]

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) on 6 March, column 231.

Deregulation

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many regulations relating to safety at work have been (a) repealed and (b) modified as a result of recommendations by the deregulation unit. [19574]

Mr. Freeman: In its review of regulation, the Health and Safety Commission identified 100 regulations and seven pieces of primary legislation as outdated or unnecessary which could be removed or reformed without reducing necessary protection. This represents 40 per cent. of health and safety regulations affecting the generality of business. The removal of a number of these regulations has also been recommended by the sectorial task forces under Lord Sainsbury, and the deregulation task force, chaired by Mr. Francis Maude, also recommended that the burden of health and safety needed to be significantly reduced.

As a result of these reviews, 12 sets of regulations affecting business generally and 18 other sets now have been removed, as well as some partial repeals such as 53 requirements to display posters and notices.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many regulations have been (a) repealed and (b) modified as a result of work by the deregulation unit and in which subject areas. [19573]

Mr. Freeman: We have so far repealed or amended over 500 regulations out of a target of over 1,000 regulations. Examples include the simplification of food temperature control regulations which will save business about £40 million per annum and simplification of trade marks legislation which is saving business about £30 million a year. Details of other key areas of reform are identified in "Deregulation: The Way Forward" published in May 1995 and in "The Government's Response to the First Annual Report of the Deregulation Task Force" published in September 1995, copies of which are available in the House Libraries.

Local Government Performance Indicators

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representation he has made to the Audit Commission to receive advance copies of the Audit Commission's local government performance indicators due to be published on 21 March. [20326]

The Deputy Prime Minister: None.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of member' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20116]

Mr. Willetts: The answers to each part of this question are:

(a) The Standing Committee on Standards in Public Life and The Citizens Charter Panel of Advisers.

(b) The Standing Committee on Standards in Public Life and The Citizens Charter Panel of Advisers.

(c) None.

(d) The Standing Committee on Standards in Public Life and The Advisory Committee on Advertising.

(e) None.

(f) None.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20103]

Mr. Willetts: None of the advisory non-departmental public bodies, for which I am responsible has a statutory role.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20476]

Mr. Willetts: The information requested is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost. However, the value of invoices paid by the finance division of the Department and its agencies, excluding Security Facilities Executive, during February 1996, which were more than one month old, was £1,476,334.

The value of invoices paid by the Central Office of Information, during February 1996, which were more than one month was £948,314. Information on HMSO is available only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Fire Brigades

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations his Department has recently received from the Fire Brigades Union; and if he will make a statement. [19757]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has received three written representations from the Fire Brigades Union and the Fire Brigades Union (Welsh region) about general issues.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many fire brigades in Wales failed to meet the statutory minimum standards for their rescue and firefighting role in 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [19755]

Mr. Jones: Responsibility for this matter rests with my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

EstateCare (Privatisation)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the correspondence pertaining to the decision of his predecessor to direct the chairman and Board of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to privatise its EstateCare division. [19669]

Mr. Hague: My decision on the future of the EstateCare group of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, and the work required to implement it, was conveyed via correspondence and meetings between my Department and the authority. These are properly internal management matters.

The Arts

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to take to ensure adequate regional co-ordination of strategic plans for the arts, with particular reference to the funding of theatres. [20014]

Mr. Hague: The co-ordination of strategic plans is a matter for the Arts Council of Wales and I am asking the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Education Spending

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the Government will release additional funds to enable local authorities to maintain the current level of education spending in Wales. [20011]

Mr. Hague: No. My settlement decisions were approved by the House on 8 February. I have no plans to change them.

Red Squirrels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated number of red squirrels on Anglesey; and if he will make a statement. [19986]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No reliable estimates are available, but work carried out by the Forestry Commission and the Countryside Council for Wales suggests there are about 50 red squirrels. Subject to the outcome of a local consultation exercise, the Forestry Commission and the Countryside Council for Wales intend carrying out a trial project designed to bring about the recovery of Anglesey's red squirrel population.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Government's White Paper for rural Wales will be published; and if he will make a statement. [20719]

Mr. Hague: I will tomorrow publish "A Working Countryside for Wales", the Government's White Paper for rural Wales.

The White Paper has three main themes:

supporting rural communities

promoting vigorous sustainable economic development and promoting the protection and conservation of the environment.

"A Working Countryside for Wales" represents a significant stage in the Government's development of policies to address the needs of rural Wales. We want to see vibrant communities where the vital spirit of enterprise is encouraged and nurtured. Only by promoting competitive enterprise will we ensure the creation of new jobs and reinvigorated communities. At the same time, we must not lose sight of our shared responsibility to pass on to the next generation a stronger heritage and a cleaner and better protected environment.

Ensuring an effective balance between the potentially conflicting pressures of economic growth while sustaining the environment will be the key to a bright future for our rural communities.

Housing Grants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each housing association (a) grants received from the public purse, indicating what percentage this represents of housing association spending, (b) the average rent for (i) one-bedroomed, (ii) two-bedroomed and (iii) three-bedroomed properties and (c) the amounts held in reserves and its per property figure for each of the last five years. [19932]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: These are primarily matters for Housing for Wales and the chief executive has been asked to write to the hon. Member. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20088]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 28 April 1995 by my predecessor, the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood), Official Report, column 728.

I regret that in that answer the Local Government Boundary Commission was described as under a statutory requirement to publish an annual report and lay it before Parliament; it published its report voluntarily. In addition, the Staff Commission for Wales publishes its advice voluntarily and the National Rivers Authority advisory committee lays an annual report before Parliament voluntarily.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20105]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows:

(a) None;

(b) the Local Government Boundary Commission has a statutory duty to conduct public consultation exercises. The Staff Commission for Wales conducts such exercises voluntarily;

(c) to (f) none.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department which (a) have a statutory base, (b) admit members of the public to all board or committee meetings and, (c) hold open meetings for the public; and if in each case this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntarily. [16174]

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 22 February 1996, c. 298–99]: I regret that there were two errors in the original reply.

There is no requirement for the Cardiff Bay development corporation to admit members of the public to its board meetings and access is not allowed because of the commercial in confidence nature of board business. The corporation has held many other meetings voluntarily with the public and the business community about its activities and plans.

The Land Authority for Wales is required to open its board meetings to the public under schedule 1 to the Public Bodies (Admission to Meetings) Act 1960, as amended, but the public may, by resolution, be excluded if the nature of the business is confidential or for other special reasons.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which species of (a) birds and (b) mammals were (i) oiled and (ii) killed in Milford Haven as a result of the incident involving the Sea Empress. [19483]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of oiled and dead birds recovered following the Sea Empress oil spill are in the following table. No dead or oiled mammals have been recovered.

These are minimum figures as the complete data set is not yet available.

There may also be birds which have been picked up and cared for by members of the public, or taken to other bird hospitals which are not included in the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals figures.

Many dead birds will remain at sea, or come ashore in inaccessible places, and not be counted.

Caution should also be noted with regard to the identification of oiled birds.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20488]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Emergency Medical Admissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 99, on the emergency admissions action plan, if his meeting with the unitary authorities to discuss budgetary constraints on levels of community care has taken place. [20362]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to meet local authorities to discuss the provision of community care. The local government settlement is discussed each year with the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance. The settlement for 1996–97 includes £146.6 million for community care, an increase of £25.2 million or 20 per cent. on 1995–96. It is for individual local authorities to decide how to use their resources in the light of local needs and priorities, and for health and local authorities to agree locally their respective responsibilities for continuing care.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 99, on the emergency admissions action plan, when he plans to publish the intensive care unit-bed review. [20363]

Mr. Hague: When all the substantive replies to the intensive care review have been received from health authorities, these will be assessed to establish whether the Department needs to offer further guidance to the NHS in Wales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 99, what action he has taken in respect of the undertaking given in the emergency medical admissions plan to co-ordinate the general practitioner out-of-hours scheme. [20364]

Mr. Hague: Action to co-ordinate GP out-of-hours emergency admissions and improve communications with trusts and health authorities remains a matter for the appropriate family health services authority or its successor after 1 April 1996. This is covered in the statement of fees and allowances.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 99, on the emergency admissions action plan, if the community hospital working group is functioning; and what advice he will be seeking from it in relation to support roles to district general hospitals. [20365]

Mr. Hague: The review by the community hospital working group is nearing completion. Advice will be issued to the service shortly, including guidance on how community hospitals in Wales can most appropriately support district general hospitals.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Employment Training Agencies

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employment training agencies have been created since 1979; and at what costs. [17209]

Mr. Paice: Since 1990, we have set up 74 training and enterprise councils in England and they are responsible for arranging provision locally of a range of training activities. No information is collected about the number of training providers under contract to training and enterprise councils.

Student Statistics

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the proportion of (a) male and (b) female students undertaking (i) science subjects and (ii) arts subjects, (1) nationally and (2) for Staffordshire education authority. [19490]

Mrs. Gillan: All pupils of statutory school age are required to follow the national curriculum, which covers both science and arts subjects. After the age of 16, students can choose from a wide range of academic and vocational courses up to degree level and beyond. Information on the total number of male and female students following science and arts subjects under all these qualifications is unavailable either nationally or locally.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for the Barnsley/Doncaster TEC the number of current members of the board representing (a) under 50 employees, (b) under 20 employees and (c) under 10 employees; and what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the current arrangement. [19634]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise council directors do not represent particular interests; they are appointed as individuals. The TEC has been concerned to provide a balanced board, by geography, industry and commercial sector; the board is currently in the process of electing a new member.

Grant-maintained School Ballots

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions she proposes to hold with Sheffield local education authority in respect of the prevention of interference with, and intimidation of, governors and parents during grant-maintained ballots. [20039]

Mrs. Gillan: None. The Government look to the local education authority and all other parties concerned in a ballot for grant-maintained status to ensure a fair and balanced debate for governors and parents. The Government have sought to promote this through the introduction of a code of practice on information in GM ballots. My officials have from time to time written to all chief education officers about these issues.

In addition, all formal complaints about ballots are investigated under section 31(1) of the 1993 Education Act.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines her Department has issued to parents, governors and local education authorities to ensure fair and accurate information is available for grant-maintained status ballots. [20187]

Mrs. Gillan: Ballots for grant-maintained status are held under a voluntary code of practice which states that information for governors and parents should be objective, accurate and balanced. The code is available to parents through a departmental publication—"How to Become a Grant-Maintained School"—and was commended to governors in circular 18/93. An almost identical code has been promulgated to local education authorities by the Society of Education Officers.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she proposes to take (a) in respect of the use of misleading information during balloting for grant-maintained status and (b) to ensure that balloting can take place without the interference or intimidation of governors and parents. [20038]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government are committed to ensuring a fair and balanced debate for governors and parents in ballots for grant-maintained status. A number of measures are already in place to help secure this. The voluntary code of practice on information in ballots for grant-maintained status is binding on LEA officials, officials from the Department and employees of the Grant-Maintained Schools Foundation. Measures in the 1993 Education Act enable a ballot to be declared void and re-run where it appears that there are irregularities in the conduct of the ballot or the outcome has been significantly influenced by the circulation to parents of materially misleading information.

Social Fund

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision will be made for the continued participation of the voluntary sector under the European social fund objective 3 programme for the period 1997 to 1999. [10029]

Mr. Forth: The voluntary sector will continue to be a partner in the European social fund objective 3 programme for the period 1997 to 1999 being able to bid for funds and having an involvement in the selection of projects.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure that the voluntary sector organisations in receipt of grant aid under the European social fund objective 3 programme do not face a shortfall in funding in respect of 1994 payments as a result of fluctuations in the exchange rate between sterling and the ecu. [20031]

Mr. Forth: The 1994 final payment has been received from the European Commission in ecu but when converted into sterling it is insufficient to pay all final claims. Officials in the Department's European social fund unit are working with the Commission to try to make up the shortfall. Project providers are being asked to supply information about the pattern of expenditure during 1994, which should help the European social fund unit to make a more favourable calculation of the sums due to Great Britain. The reaction of Commission officials to our approaches to date has been constructive.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to change the allocation of resources and method of distribution under the European social fund objective 3 programme. [20028]

Mr. Forth: Officials have been asked to report by April on the possibility of managing the selection of European social fund objective 3 projects on a regional basis. Any changes will be agreed with the Commission as part of the 1997–99 programme and will involve European social fund partners.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent discussions she has had with representatives of the European Commission in relation to delays in payments to voluntary sector organisations under the European social fund. [20030]

Mr. Forth: I have had no recent discussions with representatives of the European Commission about delays in payment of European social fund money to voluntary sector organisations. Officials in the Department's European social fund unit do, however, meet their counterparts in the European Commission on a regular basis to discuss a range of issues including delays in payment.

Sheffield Local Education Authority

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of local education authority funding is retained for administration by Sheffield local education authority; how much of this was delegated to support services for each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [20040]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table sets out Sheffield local education authority's expenditure in the last thee years, as a percentage of its total education spending, on (a) management and administration and services strategy and regulation; (b) inspection and advisory services; (c) other education support services, including the education welfare service, educational psychology services and operational units; and (d) school catering services.

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
(a)	3.4	3.4	3.9
(b)	0.5	0.2	0.4
(c)	2.3	2.6	2.7
(d)	3.7	4.2	4.0

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people who have been found capable of work under the all-work test of capacity who have subsequently signed on as unemployed receive (a) unemployment benefit only, (b) income support only and (c) unemployment benefit and income support; [20163]

(2) how many people who have been found capable of work under the all-work test of capacity have subsequently signed on as unemployed (a) in total and (b) for each of the months since April 1995. [20164]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 12 March 1996.

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of people found capable of work under the All Work Test who subsequently sign on as unemployed. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

In the period April 1995 to January 1996, 27,719 people disallowed Income Support following the All Work Test have made a claim to unemployment benefits. A monthly breakdown of these claims is attached. No figures are available as to whether these people are receiving unemployment benefit only, Income Support only or unemployment benefit and Income Support.

I hope this is helpful.

April 1995 to January 1996

Month	Number of claims	Cumulative total
April	—	—
May	428	428
June	518	938
July	1,448	2,386
August	2,880	5,266

Temporary School Buildings

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list for each education authority in England and in total the proportion of temporary buildings as a percentage of school buildings as a whole; [20489]

(2) if she will list for each education authority in England (a) the number and types of temporary school buildings which have been in use in each year since 1990 and (b) the purpose for which these units have been used. [20490]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not collected centrally.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by her Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20101]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Name	Statutory base	Publish advice	Publish annual report
National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities	Yes	Yes	No[1]
Race Relations Employment Advisory Group	No	No	No
Women's National Commission	No	Yes	No[2]
Committees for the Employment of People with Disabilities	Yes	No	No
Supported Employment Consultative Group	No	No	No

[1] A periodic report of activities is placed in the Library of both Houses of Parliament.
[2] An annual report is produced which is not laid before Parliament, but is sent voluntarily to Members of Parliament.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what values of payments were outstanding within her Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20477]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information required could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Department. The Department does not maintain the statistical information in this form.

Careers Service

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about plans to close the careers service office in Hulme, Manchester; and what discussions she has held with the local careers service. [19839]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 8 March 1996]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received no representations about the closure of any careers service office in the Hulme area of Manchester.

The existing contract between the Department and the careers service provider in Manchester recognised the need to review a number of issues, including premises. This review has now been completed and proposals arising from it will be a matter for discussion with the Department by the end of March 1996.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what directions she has issued to the careers service in Manchester, Salford, Trafford and Tameside about the need to maintain levels of service in inner-city areas. [19838]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 8 March 1996]: The service expected from careers service providers is specified in "The Requirements and Guidance for Careers Service Providers." This describes the service required, the principals on which it should be based, and the standards to which it must be delivered.

Substantial amounts of careers service activity takes place within schools, and so is delivered to students in situ. For other clients, services should be available at times which are convenient to them, prominently displayed, and within reasonable daily travelling distance. These matters are clearly set out in the contract between the Department and the respective careers service provider. They include a strong focus on meeting clients' needs, taking into account any relevant factors impinging on clients in inner-city areas.

Maritime Skills

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department spent in the last financial year on courses to provide education and training in maritime skills; and where such courses are provided at (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) tertiary levels. [20195]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 11 March 1996]: Such information is not held centrally.

TRANSPORT

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all cases since 1987 in which his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19464]

Mr. Norris: Since 1987 the Department of Transport has bought computer capacity from:

(a) other Departments—NIL.

(b) the Private Sector:

Dell Computer Corporation

Electronic Data Systems

P and P Corporate Systems Limited

The value of the contracts is classified "commercial in confidence".

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19424]

Mr. Norris: Between January 1994 to date—the only period for which figures are available—1,707 letters from hon. Members have been referred to agencies for response. This represents approximately 3 per cent. of the total.

With regard to point (b), I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 12 February 1996, Official Report, column 421.

Fishes Royal Wreck

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the nature of the responsibility that the receiver of wrecks has for Fishes Royal. [19879]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 12 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the Receiver of Wreck.

The Receiver of Wreck is responsible for the disposal of "Fishes Royal" which become stranded in or on the shores of the United Kingdom. Since 1993 this has been a responsibility of the Coastguard Agency.

Coastguard

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the Coastguard's national constituency plan. [19880]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 12 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the Coastguard Agency's Marine Pollution Control Unit's National Contingency Plan.

A copy of this document is already in the House of Commons' Library.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount of compensation for previous investments Railtrack will be required to pay to local authorities and passenger transport authorities before privatisation; and if this amount will be included in the writing off of Railtrack's debts before privatisation. [19861]

Mr. Watts: The British Railways Board executed deeds of assumption in March 1994 to compensate passenger transport executives for the loss of pre-April 1994 lower costs that BR had charged in return for PTE capital grants. Deeds relating to infrastructure were transferred to Railtrack by way of the Railtrack transfer scheme in March 1994. Further deeds were executed by Railtrack in July 1995. In 1995–96, Railtrack made payments of £69.9 million to the PTEs, net of tax withholdings, under the deeds of assumption. Railtrack is currently scheduled to pay a further £5.2 million, net of tax withholdings, on 1 April 1996. Final details of the capital structure which Railtrack will take into the private sector have yet to be concluded.

Railway Contracts

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 485, what is the total number and value of contracts let by Railtrack to Hall and Tawse. [19895]

Mr. Watts: I understand that Railtrack plc have awarded two planned maintenance and two call-off maintenance contracts to Hall and Tawse, having a value of circa £5 million.

St. Pancras Station

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of St. Pancras station; and what value was attached to the asset. [20304]

Mr. Watts: The last valuation of St. Pancras station was carried out for the British Rail Property Board in March 1995. Based on the capitalisation of station income, the existing use value of the station was estimated to be £3.7 million.

Leicester Link Road Inquiry

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations led him to restrict the remit of the Department of Transport inspector for the Leicester A46/47 link road public inquiry to the A46/47 link road only. [20041]

Mr. Watts: The remit of the inspector appointed to conduct the inquiries into Leicester county council's proposed A46/47 link road was that he should consider objections to, and representations about, the proposed orders. No restriction was made, apart from that made in every case, that the inspector should resist broadening his considerations into matters which are not directly involved with the proposed orders.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration was given to problems of induced traffic on new road schemes and their surrounding areas in the recent public inquiry into the Leicester A46/47 link road. [20042]

Mr. Watts: The issue of induced traffic was covered at the inquiries into Leicestershire county council's proposed A46/A47 link road. The Secretary of State is currently considering the inspector's report on those inquiries including the question of induced traffic.

Car Parking

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action is being taken to relieve car parking problems in urban areas; and if he will make a statement. [20075]

Mr. Norris: Detailed decisions about local parking policies and practice are matters for local authorities. The Government set the framework by issuing advice and guidance. Urban areas need adequate parking provision to cater for trips for which there is no realistic alternative form of transport. It is the Government's policy to encourage people to travel by other means—cycling, walking and public transport—where that option is open to them.

Union Railways

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on recent developments relating to the work of Union Railways. [20324]

Mr. Watts: Union Railways is continuing its work in developing plans for the channel tunnel rail link. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 29 February, ownership of Union Railways will be transferred to London and Continental Railways as a result of the CTRL competition.

Wisconsin Central

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the value of the contract awarded to Wisconsin Central to (a) operate the royal train, (b) carry the Royal Mail and (c) run other aspects of the railway; [20496]

(2) what period is covered by the contract awarded to Wisconsin Central to operate the royal train. [20497]

Mr. Watts: This information is commercially confidential.

Braer Incident

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many claims, and for what amount, there were for compensation in respect of the Braer incident in the Shetlands; what percentage of such claims has been accepted by the insurers and, of those, what percentage has been settled; what is the percentage of the amount claimed that has been paid; and if he will make a statement. [20242]

Mr. Norris: Information on the total amount claimed is not held by the Department and is not readily available from the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund. Records produced by the fund indicate that 1,950 claims have been made, some 1,700 or about 85 per cent. of these claims have been agreed and some 1,500 or about 75 per cent. have been paid. To date, £46.9 million has been paid.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to demand full compensation payments for all those who directly or indirectly have suffered financial loss as a result of the Sea Empress disaster; and if he will make a statement. [20248]

Mr. Norris: Officials of my Department have already made representations to the executive committee of the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund for full payment of eligible claims for compensation, insofar as these payments are compatible with the international instruments which established the IOPC fund.

Humber Sea Terminal Project

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding his Department's objections to European regional development fund funding for the Humber sea terminal project being proposed at Immingham. [20398]

Mr. Norris: A decision on whether my Department could support the provision of ERDF grant for this project will be made shortly. The decision will be based on the view the Department takes about whether such grant would cause substantial distortion of competition with other ports in Great Britain. The Government's successful ports policy over the past 15 years has been based on the avoidance of such distortion, and creating conditions in which ports can compete on an equal footing.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interest, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20107]

Mr. Norris: The following are the answers for the Department of Transport's only advisory, NDPB, the Disabled Person's Transport Advisory Committee.

(a) DPTAC does not hold public meetings.

(b) Yes, but the Committee has not held a public consultation exercise since 1990.

(c) Yes, it does conduct exercises with outside commercial interests.

(d), (e) and (f) No, it does not publish a register of interests, agendas of meetings or minutes of meetings.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20090]

Mr. Norris: The following are the answers for the Department of Transport's only advisory NDPB, the Disabled Person's Transport Advisory Committee.

(a) DPTAC does not publish advice to the Government.

(b) and (c) It publishes an annual report which is laid before Parliament under a statutory requirement.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal accidents involving heavy goods vehicles have occurred in each of the last five years arising from the driver having lost his spectacles or contact lenses during an emergency. [20361]

Mr. Norris: This information is not available.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20486]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available.

North-West Main Line

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer of 27 February, Official Report, columns 730-31, if he will list the improvements currently planned for the North-West main line and the likely date of implementation; and if he will make a statement on proposals for (a) improved journey times between Manchester and London, (b) improved passenger access to cross-channel services and (c) improved customer comfort and convenience on the Manchester to London line. [19884]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's core modernisation programme for the west coast main line includes the introduction of a modern train signalling system, an improved power supply system, and track renewal. Railtrack intends to let a contract for development of the signalling system by the end of March with contracts for the bulk of the modernisation to be let during 1996.

Beyond the core modernisation, Railtrack is also considering possible upgrade options for the line which would include opportunities for faster trains and improved journey times between London and Manchester.

London and Continental Railways proposals for the channel tunnel rail link include an action plan for enhancing Eurostar services from the regions which would include a direct twin-track connection to the west coast main line.

InterCity west coast is currently examining proposals with private leasing companies for the refurbishment of passenger coaches.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the national regulations, orders and rules which apply to bovine animals of under 15 days of age. [19888]

Mrs. Browning: There are nearly 3,500 provisions in UK legislation relating to animals, many of which will apply to calves. These provisions can be found in volume 2 of the current editions of Halsbury's Statutes and Halsbury's Statutory Instruments, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House.

The only legislation which includes provisions referring to bovine animals under 15 days of age is European Council directive 64/432/EEC, which is implemented in Great Britain by the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce the results of his inquiry into the allegations contained in the Channel 4 "Dispatches" programme on the inspection of calves exported through Dover. [19896]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 5 March 1996, Official Report column 126.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) bovine, (b) ovine and (c) porcine animals were rejected at the point of export health certification as unfit to travel for each month of 1995. [19887]

Mrs. Browning: The number of cattle, sheep and pigs rejected at the point of export certification as unfit to travel for each month of 1995 is summarised in the table:

Month	Cattle	Sheep	Pigs
January	171	987	101

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the United Kingdom quota for (a) beef, (b) cows and (c) sheep; and if he will indicate the number in each case allocated to (i) less favoured areas and (ii) non-less favoured areas in each of the component parts of the United Kingdom. [19827]

Mr. Baldry: There are no quotas for beef. The approximate amount of quota available to the UK for sheep and suckler cows is set out in the table.

	In thousands of quota units
	LFA	Lowland	Total

England	3,639	4,974	8,613

Sub-totals may not add up to owing to rounding.

Radiation (Livestock)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of which areas restricted as a result of radiation from Chernobyl, livestock are classified as not fit for human consumption. [19659]

Mrs. Browning: Following the latest derestrictions, which took effect from 17 January 1996, about 122,600 hectares of land in the UK remain subject to statutory restrictions to prevent the sale of sheepmeat containing levels of radiocaesium in excess of an action level of 1,000 becquerels per kilogram. These restrictions apply in parts of north Wales, parts of west Cumbria, parts of County Antrim and County Londonderry in Northern Ireland, and parts of Dumfries and Galloway, Strathclyde and Central regions of Scotland.

Sheep grazing these areas are the only livestock affected by the restrictions. The mark and release scheme ensures that radiocaesium levels in sheep are at an acceptable level before the meat reaches the human food chain.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the pattern of voting in the Council of Ministers required to amend common fisheries policy regulations on quota hopping. [19999]

Mr. Baldry: The regulations implementing the common fisheries policy are based on article 43 of the EC treaty under which decisions are taken by qualified majority voting.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what Her Majesty's Government's objectives for the reform of the common fisheries policy are for 1997; and if he will meet hon. Members from fisheries constituencies before the IGC to discuss those objectives. [19998]

Mr. Baldry: I am always happy to meet hon. Members from fishing constituencies from wherever in the United Kingdom to discuss fisheries issues and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland is similarly happy to meet hon. Members from Scottish fishing constituencies.

The Government will continue to pursue initiatives to achieve improvements in the way that the common fisheries policy operates. These include working with the industry to improve conservation measures and seeking to ensure that the fishing opportunities arising from national quotas provide real benefits to the fishing communities of the flag member state.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Scottish Fisherman's Federation and the National Federation of Fisherman's Organisations to discuss (a) the common fisheries policy and (b) its place in the IGC discussions in March. [19996]

Mr. Baldry: During the Council of Fisheries Ministers of 21 to 22 December 1995, my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland and I met both the Scottish Fishermen's Federation and the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations to discuss those aspects of the common fisheries policy on the agenda of the Council. We shall next be meeting the two organisations together on 14 March.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what legal advice has been sought by his Department on making amendments to the European treaties in connection with quota hopping at the IGC. [19997]

Mr. Baldry: Any necessary legal advice will be obtained for any amendments to the European treaties put forward by the Government. It is not customary, however, to disclose such advice.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20475]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is not readily available and could not be produced without disproportionate cost. MAFF aims to pay all invoices within 30 days of the receipt or in accordance with terms agreed with suppliers. Currently 85 per cent. of all payments are made by the due date.

Guidance Notes

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pages of guidance notes have been issued by (a) his Department, (b) regulatory authorities and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last three years. [18650]

Mr. Boswell: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive a copy of the forthcoming European Commission discussion document on vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements; and what plans he has to ensure that (a) copies of that document are available immediately upon its publication to (i) the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy, (ii) other organisations representing practitioners of nutritional therapy and (iii) organisations representing consumers of dietary supplements, and (b) British consumers' access to such supplements is not adversely affected by any directive arising out of the consultation on that document. [19671]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The timetable for the production of the proposed discussion document on vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements is in the hands of the European Commission. I understand that it is unlikely to be issued before the summer. The Ministry has undertaken to consult fully with all interested parties, including the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy and organisations representing consumers of dietary supplements, as soon as the document is received. The consultation exercise will also be announced in the food safety information bulletin.

The Government's policy is to ensure that consumers have as much choice as possible in their access to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements, provided that public health is not compromised. If any formal proposal for legislation on the sale of dietary supplements were to be made following discussion of the document, the United Kingdom position would reflect this policy.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what drafts of the forthcoming European Commission discussion document on vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements his Department has received; and if he will place copies of these drafts in the Library. [19672]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 11 March 1996]: My Department has not received any drafts of the forthcoming European Commission discussion document on vitamins, minerals and other dietary supplements.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy on the availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements. [19673]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The Government's policy is to ensure that consumers have as much choice as possible in their access to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements, provided that public health is not compromised.

Scientists and Engineers

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many professional scientists and engineers of each category were employed at each grade in the headquarters division of his Department in each year from 1991 to the current year. [19798]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The numbers of qualified engineers employed in my Department in the headquarters division of flood and coastal defence, excluding those based outside London, are as follows:

At 1 March:

1991: 8

1992: 6

1993: 7

1994: 7

1995: 7

1996: 6

A number of those employed in the headquarters building and estates management division also hold engineering qualifications.

The numbers of full-time equivalent staff employed in the scientific grades in the headquarters divisions now represented by the chief scientist's group and the food safety and science group are as follows:

At 1 March

	[1]1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Assistant scientific officer	12	2	2	1	1	1
Scientific officer	37	17	14	18	12	13.6
Higher scientific officer	40.5	31	28.5	32	38.5	34.8
Senior scientific officer	28	33	31.5	32	34.5	29.4
Principal scientific officer	27.5	21	21	33.5	25.5	20.4

[1] Figures for 1991 include staff based at the food science laboratory, Norwich.

For open structure grades above grade 7, records do not separately identify posts held by staff with scientific qualifications. However, it is possible to give the following breakdown for senior grades in the headquarters divisions of the chief scientist's group and the food safety and science group as of 1 March 1996:

	Postholders whose qualifications include a scientific degree or equivalent
Grade 6	16
Grade 5	5
Grade 3	2

These figures include those on fixed-term appointments, but exclude any employed on a consultancy basis.

All the figures given apply to core Department headquarters divisions only. They do not include the large numbers of staff in other areas who hold scientific or engineering qualifications, for example, those in the directorate of fisheries research, many of the employees of the agencies, veterinary surgeons, economists and statisticians. It would be disproportionately expensive to list all of these.

HEALTH

Disability Living Allowance

13. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of people with disabilities, including learning disabilities, living in national health service hospitals or residential accommodation who currently receive the mobility component of the disability living allowance. [18397]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Health does not collect this information centrally.

26. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on how the changes to the disability living allowance regulations have affected current NHS patients. [18410]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner).

NHS Trust Boards

15. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with disabilities are members of national health service trust boards (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the overall total. [18399]

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with disabilities are members of NHS trust boards; and what percentage this is of the total. [18391]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available.

17. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the representation on health boards of disabled people. [18401]

Mr. Malone: None. People from all sections of the community are encouraged to apply for non-executive appointments to national health service boards and several with disabilities have been appointed. They represent the interest of all sections of the community.

GP Fundholders

16. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients in England are currently covered by general practitioner fundholders; and what the figures will be after 1 April. [18400]

Mr. Malone: Some 41 per cent. of the population in England is currently registered with a general practitioner fundholder. We expect this to increase to more than 50 per cent. from April.

Care in the Community

18. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the Care in the Community (Direct Payments) Bill from groups of, and for, people with disabilities. [18402]

Mr. Bowis: Some 300 responses have been received to our consultation paper.

General Practitioners

19. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to ensure an adequate future supply of general practitioners in the national health service. [18403]

Mr. Malone: The goal of the Government's medical staffing policy is to enable the national health service to secure an adequate and affordable supply of appropriately trained doctors in each sector and/or specialty, in order to provide a cost-effective, quality service to patients. We accepted the main recommendation in the second report of the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee, June 1995, to increase medical school intakes to 4,970 by 2000, which will mean an increase of 15 per cent. during the 1990s.

Clinical Staff

21. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends taking to improve the morale of clinical staff in the NHS. [18405]

Mr. Malone: It is the responsibility of local employers to ensure good morale is maintained within the clinical work force. They now have greater freedoms than ever before to develop local employment strategies and implement flexible working arrangements which reflect and reward the valuable contribution of highly motivated and skilled staff.

Clinical Services

22. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the chairmen of regional health authorities to discuss the private management of clinical services. [18406]

Mr. Malone: We regularly meet the chairmen of the regional health authorities who are members of the national health service policy board to discuss a wide range of issues.

Community Care

23. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he takes to review the operation of the NHS and Community Care Act 1990. [18407]

Mr. Malone: I am satisfied that the reforms introduced by the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 are operating effectively. NHS performance continues to improve. Since 1990, the average waiting time has been halved from eight months to just under four months. Patient activity has grown by around 5 per cent. each year since the reforms, significantly greater than before.

NHS Funding (Nottingham)

24. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the amount by which current funding of the NHS in Nottingham is under target; and what action he plans to meet the target. [18408]

Mr. Horam: Nottingham health authority will be £7.4 million or 2.74 per cent. under target in 1996–97.

We plan to move all health authorities to their weighted capitation target as soon as it is practicable.

Royal Sussex County Hospital

25. Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects phase I of the building programme for the Royal Sussex county hospital in Brighton to be completed; and what is the estimated cost of the work in current prices. [18409]

Mr. Horam: The building is expected to be completed in the late summer of 1998, and to cost £61 million at current prices.

Dermatology

27. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is proposing to advance the expenditure on dermatology and skin-related diseases in the health service. [18411]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities in England are given general allocations for hospital and community health services to purchase health care services for their resident population. It is for individual health authorities to decide the level and type of services purchased, taking account of local circumstances, and within the framework of national policies and priorities.

Ecstasy-related Deaths

28. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of deaths in the past five years in which Ecstasy was (a) mentioned as a contributory cause and (b) identified as the principal cause. [18412]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State gave him on 19 February, column 34 and the reply that I gave him on 1 March, column 764.

Injured Suspects

29. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he issues to hospitals about giving the police the names and addresses of injured suspects. [18413]

Mr. Horam: All national health service bodies and staff have a legal duty to protect patient confidentiality and health information given or obtained for one purpose should not usually be used for a different purpose without the express consent or implied authorisation of the provider of the information. This duty of confidence can be overridden, most commonly when considered necessary in the public interest and this may include circumstances where the disclosure is relevant to the prevention or detection of serious crime. Any decision to do so would need to be taken locally after full consideration of the individual details of the case.

This reinforced in guidance issued to the NHS on 7 March, "Protection and Use of Patient Information", copies of which are available in the Library.

Casualty Departments

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the temporary closure of casualty departments. [18404]

Mr. Horam: The organisation of hospitals locally is a matter for health authorities and national health service trusts. Temporary closures of accident and emergency departments will occasionally be necessary but should be kept to a minimum, with alternative arrangements being made with neighbouring hospitals and the ambulance service.

Transplant Surgery

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the number of people awaiting suitable donations prior to transplant surgery for each organ required; what is the average length of time waited; how many and what percentage of people die while waiting; and if he will provide figures by (a) region, (b) age and (c) sex; [18801]

(2) how many organs offered for donation were used; what percentage this was of the total offered; and what is his estimate of the potential number of organ donors in each of the last three full years for which figures are available. [18800]

Mr. Horam: The tables show the information requested.

(2) Patients dying whilst on the waiting list in 1994

	Kidney	Heart	Lung	Heart/Lung	Liver
Number of patients	[1]197	57	19	23	46

[1] This is the figure for 1993. The figure for number of patients dying whilst on the waiting list for a kidney can be misleading as a proportion will die as a result of causes unrelated to their renal condition.

Breakdown of number of offered organs and their usage in 1995

Organ	Number offered	Number transplanted	Percentage transplanted
Kidney	1,987	1,799	90.5 per cent.
Heart	885	397	44.9 per cent.
Lung	1,250	274	21.9 per cent.
Livers	927	701	75.6 per cent.

Hearts and lungs have been simplified to individual organs. In practice, they are often offered in combination and sometimes transplanted in combination—that is, the heart and lungs from a donor can be offered as a "block" and the heart transplanted and the lungs not, and so on. Also, on a few occasions, a liver was transplanted (as lobes) into two separate patients. The reason for the non-use of donated organs, in the vast majority of cases is clinical unsuitability.

It is not known what the potential number of organ donors was for the last three years.

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19033]

Mr. Horam: For the purpose of the table, items stolen and otherwise unaccounted for are combined because it is not possible in all cases to distinguish one from the other. The losses of information technology equipment have occurred against the background of a substantial increase in the Department's provision of such equipment, and an increasing frequency of break-ins by professional criminals in search of computers and their components. The Department constantly reviews its security measures in the light of these losses.

Calender year	IT items (number)	IT items (estimated cost) £	Other items (number)	Other items (estimated cost) £

Items valued at £5,000 or more are a Toshiba T6600/DX2 laptop computer, cost £5,500; a Sun Sparcserver (including disk and memory) cost £25,590; a RAID Array, cost £23,120 and a Toshiba 3200 laptop with Feline Analyser Board, cost £8,000.

NHS Staff Shortages

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what categories of qualified staff he has identified as being in short supply in respect of NHS hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [19257]

Mr. Malone: For nurses, midwives and health visitors we agree with the findings of the national pay review body, which weighed carefully all the evidence presented and was not convinced that there is a general nationwide shortage of nursing staff. The Government accept that there are local difficulties and problems with particular specialties for some non-medical staff and drew attention to these in the 1995 annual planning guidance. Training commissions are likely to rise again in 1996–97. The Government welcome the pay review body's view that local pay may be part of the solution to these problems.

In relation to professions allied to medicine, the Government accept that demand exceeds supply in some areas for some professions allied to medicine. Good employers will concentrate on establishing flexible recruitment and retention policies and training commissions are likely to rise again in 1996–97.

In respect of the medical work force we are aware of the difficulties in recruiting to consultant posts in certain specialties. In 1996–97, £5.7 million will be provided to help create at least 300 new specialist registrar posts and to improve access to training for doctors wishing to become consultants. The available resources will be targeted where needs are greatest. Where there are isolated problems local problems of recruitment and retention, moves towards local pay determination will encourage employers to use pay flexibility to tackle them.

In the long term, the Government have accepted the recommendations of the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee to increase the medical student intake target by 500–11 per cent.—to reach, 4,970 by 2000.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Heath what is the average time of waiting between a child being referred for speech therapy, an assessment taking place and referral for treatment. [19741]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children and adults are currently in receipt of speech therapy in the city of Liverpool; how many requests for treatment are outstanding; how many assessments are undertaken each month; what is the ration of speech therapists to patients in need of speech therapy; what funding is currently available for paediatric and adult services; what is the shortfall between demand and provision of services; and if he will make a statement. [19761]

Mr. Bowis: The number of new episodes of care (initial contacts) for speech and language therapy in 1994–95 delivered at the Royal Liverpool University Hospital national health service trust, the Royal Liverpool Children's national health service trust, Broadgreen Hospital national health service trust and the North Mersey Community national health service trust was 4,348.

Breakdown by age is as follows:

0–2	486
3–4	971
5–9	988
10–15	227
16–54	435

Secure Units

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities among the 68 whose plans anticipate the development of comprehensive mental health services before the end of 1996–97 which (a) will and (b) will not be providing local secure units. [19820]

Mr. Bowis: The regional offices of the national health service executive will be closely monitoring the progress of all health authorities towards developing the full spectrum of care required for a comprehensive mental health service. This includes commissioning of care for patients in local units, or access to specialist secure units which may be located out of the patient's home area.

Tri-Star Ambulances

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which national health service ambulance trusts currently maintain Tri-Star vehicles of the chassis type alleged to exceed allowable load ratings; and, for each trust (a) how many of such vehicles are in use and (b) how long such vehicles have spent withdrawn from service in each of the last three years; and what are the corresponding figures for (i) other Tri-Star vehicles and (ii) non-Tri-Star vehicles. [19688]

Mr. Horam: The East Anglian ambulance national health service trust and/or its predecessors have purchased 39 Tri-Star vehicles, of which 19 have been withdrawn from service since January 1995 pending precautionary modifications to the chassis. The remaining 20 were different versions of the vehicle and continue in use. Other information requested is not available centrally.

Schizophrenia

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number and percentage of discharges of patients with a diagnosis of schizophrenia by length of stay from 1984 until latest available date [19822]

Mr. Bowis: The available information is shown in the table.

Anabolic Steroids

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of fatalities caused by the use of anabolic steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs in each year since 1979. [19314]

Mr. Bowis: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mental Health Information

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what form the quarterly monitoring of mental health information by the NHS executive will take. [19821]

Mr. Bowis: In 1996–97, the Department will continue to monitor levels of hospital and community activity for the mentally ill. In the coming year, this is to be complimented by monitoring indicators related to specific aspects of policy including care planning; readmission rates; mentally disordered offenders; and supervised discharge.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the 68 health authorities whose plans anticipate the development of comprehensive mental health services before the end of 1996–97 will have 24-hour nursed care in the community available for those residents who need it within that time scale. [19819]

Mr. Bowis: The regional offices of the national health service executive will be closely monitoring the progress of all health authorities towards developing the full spectrum of care required for a comprehensive mental health service.

Section 64 Grants

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to which organisations (a) in and (b) outside London grants will be paid from 1 April under the section 64 grant scheme; and of these which have not previously received such grants. [20358]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Eccles (Ms Lestor) on 5 March, column 185.

Edgware General Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to complete his reappraisal of the planned closure of Edgware general hospital accident and emergency department. [18597]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is not undertaking a re-appraisal of the planned closure of Edgware hospitals accident and emergency department.

Accident and Emergency Services

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to issue further guidance to health authorities in respect of accident and emergency services. [18904]

Mr. Horam: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made to the House on 6 March, columns 356–68.

NHS (Medical Techniques)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that services in the health service are based on the latest medical techniques. [18978]

Mr. Horam: Scientific evidence should provide the foundation for the planning and provision of effective health care. The national health service research and development programme, which began in 1991, has made substantial progress in increasing the knowledge base about the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of NHS services. The health technology assessment part of the programme provides research-based evidence on the costs and effectiveness across a range of interventions performed throughout the NHS.

The next step is to bridge the gap between research-based knowledge and routine clinical practice. Improving the effectiveness of clinical services is one of the medium-term priorities in the planning and priorities guidance for the NHS. On 10 January, the NHS executive published promoting clinical effectiveness, it sets out the resources available to health authorities, NHS trusts and clinicians responsible for developing strategies for clinical effectiveness and suggests ways in which resources may be put to best use. Copies of the booklet are available in the Library.

Working Children

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued on minimum wages, health and safety and number of hours worked, for working children; how this guidance is distributed; and what budget is available for any enforcement of minimum standards. [19370]

Mr. Bowis: No guidance has been issued on minimum wages. The restrictions on children's working hours are set in primary legislation and in local byelaws. All byelaws comply with guidance issued by the Department of Health to local authorities. Their enforcement is a matter for local authorities, and it is for them to devote to it the resources they deem necessary. Enforcement of health and safety legislation is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

South Manchester University Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 293, what assessment he has made of the effects on patient care in south Manchester of the closure of four intensive care beds; and if he will make a statement. [20366]

Mr. Horam: Availability of services is the responsibility of district health authorities and discussions are continuing between Manchester health commission and South Manchester University Hospitals national health service trust to plan service provision for 1996–97.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent further representations his Department has had from, or on behalf of, people with haemophilia who, in the course of NHS treatment were infected with hepatitis C; what plans he has to compensate them or in cases where the patient has died from infection, their dependents; and if he will make a statement. [20367]

Mr. Horam: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 5 December 1995, columns 130-31, since when, Ministers have received 34 further letters about payments to people who have developed hepatitis C through blood or blood products. Not all these letters were necessarily concerned solely or primarily with haemophiliacs.

As we have made clear in recent debates and in response to questions, the Government have great sympathy with those who may have been inadvertently infected with hepatitis C through national health service treatment, but as no fault or negligence on the part of the NHS has been proved, we have no plans to make special payments. Our view remains that the best way for the Government to help is to encourage research, and best treatment for those infected as well as supporting voluntary groups working with those infected. This we are already doing.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of deaths among people with haemophilia who in the course of NHS treatment were infected with hepatitis C at the latest date for which figures are available. [20368]

Mr. Horam: Figures for deaths of people with haemophilia infected with hepatitis C are not collected centrally by Government. I understand from the United Kingdom Haemophilia Centre directors that the cause of death of 14 out of the 159 haemophilia patients known to have died in 1994, was shown as liver disease, of which hepatitis C may have been the cause.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20480]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Primary Care-led NHS

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to develop a primary care-led NHS. [18390]

Mr. Malone: General practitioner fundholders have already demonstrated the benefits to patients of a primary care-led national health service. The new health authorities will be responsible for working with GPs and their teams to improve services across the range of primary and secondary care. The listening programme, on which we are currently engaged, will build on these strengths.

HIV/AIDS

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) he will seek an apology from the European Commissioner responsible for the decision to allocate funds to enable CSV Media to send condoms on St. Valentine's day to Members of Parliament throughout the European Union; [20507]

(2) if he will make it his policy to require the European Commission AIDS unit to promote sexual abstinence before marriage and fidelity within it, and the avoidance of injected drugs, as the most effective means of avoiding the contracting of AIDS; and if he will make a statement. [20508]

Mr. Horam: We believe that, like other public bodies, it is important that the European Commission AIDS unit communicates the means of avoiding HIV transmission in a manner which is scientifically accurate and respects the personal and cultural sensitivities of the target audience. I share entirely the hon. Member's concern that the St. Valentine's day initiative was inappropriate and will ensure that this view is made known to the organisations involved.

Heroin Addicts

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of heroin addicts registered, in each of the last five years by district health authority, family health services authority, regional health authority and nationally. [19232]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 6 March 1996]: The information available centrally by district, regions and nationally will be placed in the Library. Information by family health services authority is not available.

Human Embryos

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the probability of an ectopic pregnancy being created in a treatment cycle using (a) frozen embryos and (b) fresh embryos. [19789]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 8 March 1996]: As recorded in the records of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, the latest available data are from 1993. This suggests that the risk of an ectopic pregnancy following fresh embryo transfer is seven per 1,000 patients; the risk following frozen embryo transfers five per 1,000 patients.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Agency Computer Systems

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employees have been (a) dismissed and (b) faced other disciplinary action for unauthorised access to agency computer systems in (i) the Benefits Agency, (ii) the Child Support Agency, (iii) the Contributions Agency, (iv) the Information Technology Services Agency, (v) the Resettlement Agency and (vi) the War Pensions Agency since 1993. [19504]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table:

Employees dismissed and disciplined for unauthorised access to computer systems in DSS agencies since 1993

	Dismissals	Other disciplinary action

[1] With approximately 70,000 staff, the Benefits Agency is by far the largest of the DSS Agencies. As the vast majority of their staff have access to computer systems, there is a proportionately higher number of incidents.

Agencies (Confidential Information)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employees of (a) the Information Technology Services Agency, (b) the Resettlement Agency and (c) the War Pensions Agency have faced (i) dismissal and (ii) other disciplinary action for the improper use of confidential information since 1993. [19505]

Funeral Expenses

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average payment made to claimants under the discretionary social fund for funeral expenses since June 1995. [19882]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

1. The information covers awards in the period between 5 June and 1 August 1995. It includes help with flowers/wreaths, funeral directors fees and other expenses.

2. Funeral expenses covered by the regulated scheme were specifically excluded from the discretionary Fund from 2 August 1995.

National Insurance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) for each year since 1979 and (b) for the whole period since 1979 the extra revenue raised by changing the rate of employee national insurance contributions. [20241]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

[3] Estimates taken form Government Actuary reports on the various Contributions Re-rating Orders and Social Security (Contributions) Bills which introduced the changes in contribution rates.

[4] Reduced rates for employees were introduced form October 1985. Estimate taken from the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1985–86 and relates to part year only.

[5] Revised structure applied from October 1989. Estimate given in the Official Report, 24 April 1989 Col. 670 and relates to part year only.

[6] If the employees' contribution structure, rates and level of contracted-out rebates in force in 1979–80 had applied in 1995–96, employees would have paid about £5.3 billion less in National Insurance contributions for that year.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 147, what account was taken of the impact on businesses in deciding not to make a compliance cost assessment for the Occupational Pension Schemes (Equal Treatment) Regulations. [18383]

Mr. Heald: The Occupational Pension Schemes (Equal Treatment) Regulations 1995 are concerned with the detailed application of existing equal treatment requirements which derive from article 119 of the treaty of Rome and were incorporated into domestic legislation by sections 62 to 66 of the Pensions Act 1995. The compliance cost assessment produced in April 1995 with the then Pensions Bill, explained that article 119 had direct effect in member states and any impact on industry arose directly from it. The impact of article 119 and clarificatory rulings was therefore excluded from that CCA.

However, as my hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot) explained during the passage of the Bill, the European Court of Justice ruled that member states of the European Community may subject claims to equal treatment in occupational pensions to a domestic time limit. The Equal Treatment Regulations have the effect of applying the time limits for claims under the Equal Pay Act 1970 to claims for equal treatment in occupational pensions schemes. This means that claims must be brought within six months of leaving the relevant employment. Successful claims for retrospective access to pension schemes are limited to a maximum two-year period for any backdated award.

Rulings of the ECJ have also recognised certain exceptions from the equal treatments requirements. Accordingly, the regulations also make detailed provision as to the circumstances in which these exceptions may be relied upon. These provisions have significantly reduced the financial and administrative effect of the ECJ rulings on pension schemes and employers.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20092]

Mr. Burt: The advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by this Department are listed in "Public Bodies 1995", with the exception of the National Disability Council which was created in January 1996, and all have a statutory basis; further information is in the table:

(i) Under a Statutory Requirement	(ii) Voluntarily
(a) None	The advice given to the Secretary of State by the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board is published in its annual report.
(b) The National Disability Council	The Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board.
(c) The National Disability Council	None.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20109]

Mr. Burt: The information is as follows:

(a) None.

(b) The Social Security Advisory Committee.

The Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board also frequently consults with medical experts and outside organisations representing disabled people.

All consultations are on a voluntary basis.

(c) The Social Security Advisory Committee, on a voluntary basis.

The National Disability Council has a statutory duty to publish its proposals for a Code of Practice which may include consultation with outside commercial interests.

(d) None.

(e) None.

(f) None.

Access Committee for England

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to make a statement on his review of the role and funding of the Access Committee for England. [20360]

Mr. Burt: I am considering, with colleagues, the detailed issues involved and we hope to announce our decision in the near future.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20485]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. The Department of Social Security, in accordance with Treasury guidelines, pays its invoices within 30 days of receipt of a valid invoice. A recent sample showed a 96 per cent. level of compliance with this guideline.

To provide the information requested would involve further investigation and could be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

Earnings Top-up Pilot Scheme

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to commission independent research into the earnings top-up pilot scheme. [20608]

Mr. Burt: I have today awarded contracts to three research organisations—the Policy Studies Institute, the Institute for Employment Research and the Centre for Research in Social Policy. Over the next three years, these institutes will undertake a detailed programme of research to evaluate the effectiveness of the earnings top-up pilot.

Earnings top-up is a new step in the Government's programme to strengthen incentives to work. The challenge is to discover whether topping up wages for workers without dependent children helps them to get jobs and stay in work. Family credit tackles this issue already for families with children, helping over 600,000 families.

The research programme lasts three years. It starts this year—before earnings top-up is introduced—to set a baseline against which progress can be measured. It then continues the investigation in succeeding years to assess the impact of earnings top-up, comparing the pilot areas to the four control areas.

The Policy Studies Institute will survey over 30,000 employers, workers and unemployed people, to look at the changing circumstances of people including movement into or out of work, and the wages they receive.

The Institute of Employment Research will look at how earnings top-up affects local labour markets, that is, at changes in the rates of employment, unemployment, and any effect on local wage levels.

The Centre for Research in Social Policy will carry out more in-depth interviews with people receiving earnings top-up, those in low-paid work not receiving it, and employers. This will build up a detailed picture of reactions and attitudes to the pilot benefit.

This £3 million research project is the largest the Department of Social Security has ever undertaken but it represents excellent value for money. To extend earnings top-up immediately to all low-paid people without dependent children would be a large investment, of the order of £500 million. We are taking the prudent course of testing its effectiveness first on a smaller scale.

At the end of the three years, we expect to have the information we need to decide whether earnings top-up is of value in helping people to move into work and to avoid unemployment.

I shall, in due course, be placing further details of the research programme in the Library.

Pensioner Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an updated analysis for each quintile of pensioner incomes for single pensioners, pensioner couples and all pensioner units on the same basis as that given on 7 February 1995, Official Report, columns 196–200, table 1. [18220]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the tables.

When comparing this reply to the information given on 7 February 1995 it should be noted that the "single" and "couple" table headings for the numbers of pensioner units in each quintile were transposed in the previous reply.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19034]

Mr. Hanley: The following items of equipment have been reported stolen or unaccounted for in the past five years:

Stolen	£
1991
7 general items	865
1992

1994
1 general item and 4 items of IT equipment	6,090
These included:
4 laptop computers	[6,000]

We are currently considering various devices available on the market to protect IT equipment.

Indonesia (Human Rights)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to raise the violation of human rights faced by independent human rights organisations in Indonesia at (a) the forthcoming 52nd session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and (b) other inter-governmental conferences. [18849]

Mr. Hanley: We have no plans to raise specific concerns of independent human rights organisations in Indonesia at the 52nd session of the UN Commission on Human Rights. Together with our EU partners we will continue to raise with the Indonesian Government, bilaterally and at other appropriate international fora, our concerns about the human rights situation in Indonesia.

Commonwealth Scholarships

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the expenditure by the Government in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96 upon Commonwealth scholarships; and what estimate he has made of expenditure in 1996–97. [20046]

Mr. Hanley: The Government provided £63.5 million for awards for commonwealth students in 1994–95. Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available but are likely to be broadly similar.

The expenditure on awards for commonwealth students is likely to fall in 1996–97 due to reductions in the various budgets from which awards are funded, and policy changes affecting the pattern of training within the United Kingdom's bilateral country aid projects.

Zimbabwe (Press Freedom)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make statement on press freedom in Zimbabwe. [20457]

Mr. Hanley: The constitution of Zimbabwe provides for freedom of expression subject to certain defined exceptions. Most of the media in Zimbabwe are effectively state-controlled but there are privately owned press titles which take an independent stance and can be critical of Government.

SCOTLAND

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to review the capping limits on the environmentally sensitive areas provision; and if he will make a statement; [19949]

(2) when he expects the review of the environmentally sensitive areas provision to be complete; and if he will make a statement. [19950]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Biennial reviews of payments ceilings and rates have now been completed for all 10 environmentally sensitive area schemes. Increased ceilings and rates were introduced for the Breadalbane and Loch Lomond schemes with effect from 21 December 1995. Substantial increases in ceilings of up to 175 per cent. for the remaining eight schemes were announced on 8 March, subject to approval by the European Commission and Parliament. These increases demonstrate our commitment to the schemes and should ensure that farmers and crofters who opt to join can manage their land to achieve maximum conservation benefit.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to correct the underspend on the environmentally sensitive areas provision; and if he will make a statement. [19948]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The environmentally sensitive areas scheme is voluntary and while uptake to date has been lower than anticipated, it is steadily increasing. My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture and the Environment expects that it will continue to do so as farmers and crofters recognise the benefits of participation and take advantage of substantially increased payment ceilings which we have recently announced.

Stalking

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce a criminal offence of stalking. [19691]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have recently completed an examination of the anti-stalking laws passed in the United States, Australia and Canada and are currently considering whether specific legislation to address the problems of stalking could with benefit be introduced in the United Kingdom. In Scotland, the breadth of the common law charge of breach of the peace is such that virtually any conduct which might constitute stalking can already be prosecuted as breach of the peace.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with further education colleges on (a) provision of places in the colleges and (b) amalgamation of existing colleges; and if he will make a statement on the negotiations he has had with each college. [20079]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: None.

Electric Shock Equipment

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the Lord Advocate to make a decision on whether to bring charges in respect of allegations made in the "Dispatches" programme on the export of electric shock equipment. [20357]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate that Strathclyde police are currently investigating allegations concerning the export of electro-shock equipment. At the conclusion of the investigation, a report will be submitted to Crown Office for the consideration of Crown counsel.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19452]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My Department has not directly bought computer capacity from other Departments or the private sector since 1987 and has no current plans to do so.

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what provisions were made to protect the interests of Strathclyde passenger transport executive in rolling stock funded by them which was transferred to the ownership of Angel Train Company and Eversholt Leasing Company; and if he will make a statement. [19600]

(2) what provisions were made when the rolling stock companies were established to safeguard the interests of passenger transport executives in rolling stock which they had funded. [19599]

Mr. Watts: Constraints on the use of the passenger rolling stock, which had previously been put in place by the British Railways Board to protect the interests of the PTEs were transferred, as appropriate, to the three passenger rolling stock leasing companies—Roscos. The arrangements for Strathcylde funded passenger rolling stock was recently confirmed to Strathclyde regional council by officials in my Department.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it continues to be his policy that passenger transport executives are entitled to direct the use of rolling stock which they have funded. [19601]

Mr. Watts: I have no current plans to change the present arrangements.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps were taken to inform the European Commission of the state subsidy provided to the privatised rolling stock companies from the British Railway's Board's retention of the obligation to meet outstanding loan charges in respect of PTE-funded assets transferred to rosco ownership; and if he will make a statement. [19602]

Mr. Watts: A decision by the Government and the British Railways Board to repay a proportion of PTE capital grants, as a means of compensating the PTEs for the loss of the lower costs charged to them by British Rail prior to April 1994, does not confer any benefit on the three recently privatised passenger rolling stock leasing companies.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost to the British Railways Board in 1996–97 of meeting outstanding loan charges in respect of PTE-funded assets which were transferred to private ownership. [19598]

Mr. Watts: The current estimated cost to the British Railways Board of payments to be made to the PTEs under deeds of assumption for 1996–97, in respect of rolling stock acquired by BR as a result of PTE capital grants and subsequently transferred to private ownership, is £10.6 million.

Marine Accidents (Borga)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) interim report and (b) special bulletins he has received from the marine accident investigation branch on the grounding of the Borga; when they were received; and if he will place copies of them in the Library. [20556]

Mr. Norris: Neither an interim report nor a special bulletin was produced in the case of the Borga investigation.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 6 March 1996, Official Report, column 216-17, when he expects the marine accident investigation branch to report on the grounding of the Borga. [20572]

Mr. Norris: The marine accident investigation branch report of the investigation into the grounding of the Borga on 28 October 1995 will be published as soon as the investigation is complete. Work is continuing in co-operation with the authorities in Norway, the flag state of the vessel.

Royal Train

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the royal train and what value was attached to the asset. [20452]

Mr. Watts: I understand that in 1995 Railtrack valued the royal train at approximately £11 million for insurance purposes.

Aircraft Insurance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulatory mechanism is in place in the United Kingdom for checking that aircraft flying into and out of the United Kingdom are insured. [20468]

Mr. Norris: Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2407/92 on licensing of air carriers requires an air carrier with an operating licence granted by the competent licensing authority to be insured to cover liability in case of accidents. The regulation applies to all states of the European economic area and is implemented in the United Kingdom by Statutory Instrument No. 2992 "The Licensing of Air Carriers Regulations 1992". The competent licensing authority in the United Kingdom is the Civil Aviation Authority.

Article 102 of the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995 provides that aircraft registered in a state other than the United Kingdom or another European economic area state shall not operate into the United Kingdom without the permission of the Secretary of State. Permits are not issued to non-European economic area air carriers unless they have provided evidence of insurance.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cases there have been in the last five years of airlines flying to or from the United Kingdom that are not insured. [20469]

Mr. Norris: None that the Department or the Civil Aviation Authority is aware of.

London Underground

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total Government grant to London Underground Ltd. in each year since 1991; and what was the total annual amount of Government grant spent on (a) the Northern line, City branch, (b) the Bakerloo line and (c) the east London line. [20328]

Mr. Norris: My Department gives grant to London Transport. The distribution of grant by LT between London Underground Ltd. and its other businesses is an operational matter for LT. LT's allocation of grant to London Underground from 1991–92 is shown in the table. Grant is not allocated on a line-by-line basis. These figures exclude grant for the construction of the Jubilee line extension.

Year	Grant (£m outturn prices)[1]
1991–92	296
1992–93	598
1993–94	511
1994–95	413
1995–96	377 (estimate)

[1] Figures supplied by London Transport.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the European Passenger Services fleet of trains; and what value was attached to the asset. [20298]

Mr. Watts: Seven of EPS's 11 Eurostar train sets and the night service stock are leased. The breakdown from EPS's latest annual report and accounts show that on 31 March 1995 the rolling stock had a written down value on a historical cost basis after taking into account leasing obligations of £318 million. No other valuations have been undertaken by EPS or the Department.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the maintenance depot in Manchester for regional Eurostar trains; and what value was attached to the asset. [20302]

Mr. Watts: EPS's latest annual report and accounts show that on 31 March 1995 the Manchester Longsight depot had a written down value on a historical cost basis of £5.9 million. No other valuations have been undertaken by EPS or the Department.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the Eurostar maintenance depot at North Pole; and what value was attached to the asset. [20300]

Mr. Watts: The breakdown from EPS's latest annual report and accounts show that on 31 March 1995 the North Pole depot has a written down value on a historical cost basis of £77.5 million. No other valuations have been undertaken by EPS or the Department.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of Waterloo international station; and what value was attached to the asset. [20299]

Mr. Watts: The breakdown from EPS's latest annual report and accounts show that on 31 March 1995 the Waterloo international terminal had a written down value on a historical cost basis of £136 million. No other valuations have been undertaken by EPS or the Department.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the new Ashford international station; and what value was attached to the asset. [20301]

Mr. Watts: Ashford international station is carried in EPS's 1994–95 annual report and accounts as having a value of £41 million on 31 March 1995. This figure is based on the net present value of future leasing payments. No other valuations have been undertaken by EPS or the Department.

Orimulsion

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has carried out to check the safety aspects of transporting orimulsion. [19251]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 13 March 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about what studies have been carried out to check the transporting safety aspects of orimulsion.

The Marine Safety Agency (MSA) has not conducted research into this matter. I am aware, however, that the Marine Pollution Control Unit (MPCU), which is part of the Coastguard Agency, is conversant with studies carried out by other organisations and continues to monitor all orimulsion related research.

Milford Haven

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what occasions oil companies operating in Milford Haven or the harbour authority have suggested to his Department that aspects of the Sullom Voe system should be introduced at Milford Haven; and what was his response; [18578]

(2) if the Milford Haven port control staff are under standing instructions to monitor the harbour radar displays at all times during arrival and departure of tankers; [18583]

(3) if the port of Milford Haven has (a) permanent boom anchoring sites, (b) boom storage buildings and (c) boom layering boats; [18579]

(4) if the Milford Haven harbour radar is fitted with computer-tracking software and audible-visible alarms to warn port controllers when a ship deviates from the intended course; [18582]

(5) what is the reliability record of the Milford Haven harbour radar; and when it was last (a) overhauled, (b) upgraded and (c) replaced; [18586]

(6) if the Milford Haven harbour radar was working at the time of the grounding of the Sea Empress; [18599]

(7) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the Milford Haven port safety requirements relative to those published in the Sullom Voe port handbook; [18600]

(8) if the Milford Haven harbour authority requires masters of incoming vessels to complete and sign a check-list of safety precautions certifying that their vessel meets all the port safety requirements; [18589]

(9) what is the specified maximum time allowed for tugs to reach a tanker in difficulties in (a) the approaches and (b) the entrance to Milford Haven harbour. [18577]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 13 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Milford Haven.

PQ 1311/95/96

I am not aware that any such suggestions have ever been received.

PQ 1310/95/96

No. The purpose of the radar system is to provide information rather than to enable direct control of vessels.

PQ 1293/95/96

The Port of Milford Haven has a number of permanent boom anchoring sites and two boon storage buildings. There are a number of boom laying boats within the Haven.

PQ 1292/95/96

Yes.

PQ 1289/95/96

The provision, operation and maintenance of the radar system is a matter for the Milford Haven Port Authority. They inform me that detailed reliability records are not readily available.

The radar is in effect continuously overhauled under a maintenance regime carried out by an electronics engineer permanently employed by the port authority, supported by the manufacturers.

In 1991 the whole system was fully examined and some of the data processing and display equipment was upgraded.

The system accepted by the authority from the manufacturers in 1986 is still in place.

PQ 1308/95/96

The radar at the signal station was working, but the St. Ann's Head radar station was not.

PQ 1300/95/96

Milford Haven Port Authority requires the masters of vessels carrying dangerous or polluting goods to complete the check list set out in Schedule 2 to Merchant Shipping Notice No. M1630 in accordance with the provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995 and provide that checklist to the pilot and the Port Authority.

PQ 1299/95/96

None, so far as I am aware. Our assessment of port oil pollution plans is made in relation to the National Contingency Plan.

PQ 1297/95/96

There is no specified maximum time. Three tugs are available on immediate notice at all times within the harbour. The estimated time for them to reach the entrance to the harbour is 30 minutes. The time taken to reach a vessel beyond the entrance would be greater, depending on its position. When a tanker is approaching the harbour three tugs (four for a large tanker) are ready to meet her at the bend in the channel, where they are within 15 minutes of the entrance.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how regularly liaison takes place between the Milford Haven harbour authority and oil terminal operators. [18590]

Mr. Norris: I understand that the Milford Haven Harbour Authority has daily contact with oil terminal operators.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many harbour tugs and of what specification were waiting at the entrance of Milford Haven to render immediate assistance in the event of vessels being in difficulties at the time of the Sea Empress disaster. [18580]

Mr. Norris: On the night of 15 February, four harbour tugs, each with a 45 tonne bollard pull, were on station within the Haven.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the Milford Haven harbour authority (a) keeps records and (b) publishes details of all pollution incidents. [18588]

Mr. Norris: I understand that the Milford Haven Harbour Authority does keep records of pollution incidents, which are made available to the Advisory Committee on the Protection of the Sea on an annual basis for publication, as part of its report to the marine pollution control unit. The authority must also report individual pollution incidents to the marine pollution control unit.

Waste Oil Reception Facilities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the locations of United Kingdom waste reception facilities for waste oil from ships; [19631]

(2) if he will list the locations of United Kingdom waste reception facilities for waste oil from ships introduced since the Donaldson report; and if he will make a statement. [19629]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your questions about the locations of UK waste reception facilities for waste oil from ships, and those introduced since the Donaldson Report.

A list of the port waste reception facilities in the United Kingdom was placed in the House library in June 1995, based on a regular questionnaire survey of UK ports conducted by the Marine Safety Agency.

Information is not held in sufficient detail to enable port waste reception facilities which were introduced since the publication of Lord Donaldson's report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas" to be readily identified. However a questionnaire survey is to be carried out this year, the data collected will provide information on changes since 1995.

Railtrack (Asset Maintenance)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 145, what was the total sum estimated by W. S. Atkins as required for maintenance of Railtrack's assets in steady state over 10 years; and what maintenance works are included in this estimate. [18548]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's asset maintenance plan in respect of track and route structures, developed with the assistance of W. S. Atkins, is based on a central estimate for the 10 years from 1 April 1994 of £3,250 million. The forecast covers maintenance and renewals work on track embankments, cuttings, retaining walls, culverts and sea defences. It excludes day-to-day maintenance carried out under contract by the infrastructure maintenance companies.

Single-hulled Tankers

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proposals he has to amend regulations governing admission of single-hulled oil tankers to harbours in the United Kingdom; [17894]

(2) what action he is taking to ensure that single-hull tankers are banned from using United Kingdom coastal waters; and if he will make a statement. [17913]

Mr. Norris: The Government participated fully in international agreements that single-hulled oil tankers would be phased out by 2024, as approximately 93 per cent. of the world's oil tanker fleet are single-hulled, a faster phasing out could restrict if not halt the essential movement of oil cargoes to and from our ports.

Sea Empress

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many hours the pilot on the Sea Empress had worked before the grounding. [18585]

Mr. Norris: The special bulletin issued by the marine accident investigation branch indicates that the pilot was adequately rested before starting duty.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all cases since 1987 where his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19455]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has one contract with a private sector company, Comshare Ltd., for the purchase of computer capacity. The value of the contract is commercially confidential.

The Law Officers' departments do not have any such contract with any other Department.

TREASURY

Financial Services Act

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Treasury's policy in respect of the statutory compliance duties of industry practitioners and regulators (a) to ensure that all breaches of section 47 of the Financial Services Act 1986 are identified, (b) to ensure that all identified breaches of section 47 are investigated and (c) to ensure that, following investigation, breaches of section 47 are prosecuted in the criminal courts. [19965]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury is responsible for the general policy expressed in the legislation, but not for prosecution of matters under section 47. The Financial Services Act places no duties on industry practitioners and regulators of the kinds listed. In England and Wales, only the Secretary of State and the Director of Public Prosecutions have the power to prosecute or to consent to others prosecuting. In Northern Ireland, those powers are exercised by the Secretary of State and the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland. In Scotland, prosecutions would be brought by procurators fiscal.

Taxation

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all rates of income tax in each year since 1976–77. [19812]

Mr. Jack: Table 1.10 of the 1995–96 "Tax Benefit Reference Manual" gives income tax rates for years 1976–77 to 1995–96, a copy of which can be found in the Library.

Proposed rates for 1996–97 are set as follows:

Taxable income £pa	Tax rate for band (Percentage)
Up to 3,900	20
3,900–25,500	24
Over 25,500	40

Armaments Employees

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of people employed in the United Kingdom (a) armaments and (b) armaments-related industries for each of the last 10 years. [19773]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information available from the census of employment for 1984, 1987, 1989, 1991 and 1993 is provided in the following table. Some industrial activities previously classified to standard industrial classification 1980—SIC80—group "Aerospace equipment manufacture and repair" were re-classified to standard industrial classification 1992—SIC92—"Manufacture of weapons and ammunition". The dual figures for 1991 reflect this discontinuity.

Investment Incomes

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made, in the latest years for which information is available, of the number of taxpayers with taxable investment incomes of a (a) zero, (b) less than £100, (c) £101 to £499 and (d) over £500; and in each case what is the number of such taxpayers over the age of 65 years. [19495]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 7 March 1996]: Estimated numbers for 1996–97 based on projections from a mixture of statistical sources are given in the table. The estimates of the numbers with small amounts of investment income are very uncertain.

Range of taxable investment income in 1996–97 £	Number of taxpayers Millions	of which taxpayers aged 65 or over Millions

Pensioners' Income Bonds

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors led to the non-availability of application forms for pensioners' guaranteed income bonds (series 3) in post offices in Dewsbury during February. [20234]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 11 March 1996]: National savings sales booklets, which include application forms, for pensioners guaranteed income bonds are not related to any particular series, so could be used to purchase series 3 bonds as soon as they went on sale. I understand that Dewsbury post office had run out of stock and were awaiting new supplies. Stocks were available at the Post Office supplies depot and should have been delivered to Dewsbury post office within three weeks of being ordered.

I have written to the hon. lady in reply to her letter of 22 February with full details.

Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state, in current prices, the amount of debt written off by Her Majesty's Government in respect of each privatisation since 1979. [19603]

Mr. Jack: It is common practice for capital reconstruction to be undertaken where necessary before privatisation. For some privatisations debt is written off, for others debt is injected. Debts written off in respect of privatisations total some £22.5 billion, in current 1995–96 prices. Details are set out in the table. New debt totalling £13.94 billion at current prices was injected into privatised companies at the time of sale.

ENVIRONMENT

Orimulsion

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies his Department has carried out on the possible environmental impact of a major orimulsion spillage on land or sea. [19250]

Mr. Clappison: In 1992 a research study was carried out on behalf of the Department of the Environment which reviewed the impacts of orimulsion and the pollution abatements technologies which may be applied to orimulsion-fired boilers.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has not commissioned any research on the polluting effects of orimulsion.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports (a) his Department and (b) the Environmental Agency have evaluated regarding the environmental consequences of (i) the leak or spillage of orimulsion into seas or rivers and (ii) the operation of wind and rain on the gas generated by orimulsion. [19647]

Mr. Clappison: In 1992 a research study was carried out on behalf of the Department of the Environment which reviewed the impacts of orimulsion and the pollution abatements technologies which may be applied to orimulsion-fired boilers.

The Environment Agency does not come into being until 1 April. However, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution which will form part of the agency has evaluated reports from National Power regarding the possible effects of the gases released after abatement from the proposed burning of orimulsion at Pembroke power station. These reports are available on the public registers. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is also carrying out its own modelling into the dispersion of the potential releases from the plant. In addition Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is evaluating reports from Milford Haven Port Authority, which outlines the likely effects of a spillage of orimulsion into the Haven of up to 1,000 tonnes.

Recreation Grounds

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he plans to take to ensure that recreation grounds meet basic standards of health and safety. [19951]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 applies to recreation grounds where there is employment. Risks at recreation grounds are generally low, and inspection levels reflect this. Health and safety inspectors respond to any serious incident and follow up complaints. Sports grounds are regulated under the Safety at Sports Grounds Act 1975 on which there is guidance from the Department of National Heritage. DNH has also published guidance on playground safety.

Air Quality

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to increase the use of mobile units in measuring air quality. [20257]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has no plans to increase the use of mobile units. Mobile laboratories are generally used to monitor air quality for relatively short periods of time in a number of locations. Hence, data from mobile laboratories do not fit well into the national monitoring programmes operated by the Department, which requires long term monitoring to check for compliance with air quality standards and guidelines and to evaluate trends over a number of years.

Mobile laboratories are more appropriate for research, campaign or local investigation studies. For instance, in previous years, mobile laboratories were used by the Department to investigate the spatial and temporal distribution of chemically active pollutants such as ozone and nitrogen dioxide and, to investigate the distribution of nitrogen dioxide concentrations in local city areas, to assist in the selection of suitable long term monitoring sites.

Water Charges

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97 for each company and for England as a whole the price charged to domestic users for 1,000 gallons of water. [20219]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available in the form requested. However, information about the price of water per cubic metre, for each company and for England and Wales as a whole, is given in Ofwat's "1994–95 Report on the cost of Water Delivered and Sewage Collected", published in November 1995. A copy of this report is in the Library. Information for 1995–96 and 1996–97 is not yet available.

Marine Nature Reserves

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what policy changes he proposes to the granting of marine nature reserve status as a result of the Sea Empress disaster. [20015]

Mr. Clappison: There are no current plans to change the Government's policy on marine nature reserves.

Cement Kilns

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to give the Government's formal response to the Environment Committee's report into the burning of secondary liquid fuels in cement kilns (HC497 of Session 1994–95). [20463]

Mr. Clappison: The Government expect to publish this response in the next few weeks.

Education Authority Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each education authority in England (a) the finalised education standard spending assessment figures and (b) the total standard spending assessment figures (i) by class and (ii) in total. [20498]

Mr. Curry [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The information is given in the tables.

Safety Signs

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken to implement EC directive 92/58 on safety signs for United Kingdom products. [18699]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to my reply on 4 March 1996, Official Report, column 7, about the EC safety signs directive 92/95/EEC.

Coal Mining Accidents

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of (a) fatal and (b) serious reportable accidents per 100,000 manshifts in the deep coal mining industry between privatisation and 31 December 1995. [20199]

Sir Paul Beresford: The figures are not available for the period in question. However, provisional figures for the period from 1 April 1995 to 30 September 1995 give rates of 0.08 fatal accidents and 3.17 major injury accidents per 100,000 manshifts in coal mines.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the accident rates recorded in the first year of the privatised deep coal industry. [20200]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Full information for the year is not yet available.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action the mines inspectorate is taking to ensure that the accident reporting regime in the privatised deep coal mining industry adequately records the nature and cause of accidents so that preventative measures can be taken. [20201]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 apply to coal mining companies as they do to all other employers. Their effect is to require the coal mining companies to notify the mines inspectorate of fatal accidents; major injuries; and injuries that incapacitate people from undertaking work which they might otherwise reasonably be expected to undertake for a period of more than three consecutive days; and certain specified dangerous occurrences. As part of its normal programme of inspection the mines inspectorate seeks to ensure that the companies are complying with the 1985 regulations. The 1985 regulations will be replaced with effect from 1 April 1996 by the new revised and updated Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995. The new regulations will continue the core injury and dangerous occurrence reporting requirements.

Coal Mining (Safety Regime)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of the procedures set out in the Health and Safety Commission publication "Your Rights When Health and Safety Inspectors Take Action" on the safety regime in the deep coal mining industry; and if he will make a statement. [20202]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 8 March, Official Report, column 364.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the publication "Your Rights When Health and Safety Inspectors Take Action" (a) on the issuing of improvement notices and (b) on the issuing of prohibition notices; and if he will make a statement. [20203]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is too early to say what effect, if any, the procedures in the leaflet will have on the issuing of improvement notices. The commission is monitoring how the procedures are working in practice and will report to me. The leaflet has no effect on the procedure for issuing prohibition notices: It spells out practice that has always been followed.

Anti-competitive Behaviour, Lincolnshire

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has yet considered the response by Lincolnshire county council to the notices served upon the authority on 11 April 1995 under section 19A of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980; and if he will make a statement. [20732]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has considered carefully the responses which Lincolnshire county council has made to the two notices served on the authority for financial failure of the direct labour organisation in 1993–94 and for alleged anti-competitive behaviour. In relation to the notice for financial failure, he is satisfied that appropriate steps have been taken, and will not be taking any further action. He has however today given the authority a direction under section 19B of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 for anti-competitive behaviour.

After careful consideration, the Secretary of State remains of the opinion that the authority acted in an anti-competitive manner in awarding a contract for highways maintenance work worth £20,635,000 to its in-house direct labour organisation when it was not the lowest tenderer. He considers that the authority's concerns about the contractor's ability to do the work and financial status were not backed up by sufficient evidence, and therefore were not reasonable grounds for rejection of the lower bid which offered a saving of £2,240,000.

The direction given to Lincolnshire county council requires the authority to retender the work so that new arrangements are in place by 1 January 1997. The authority will need to obtain the Secretary of State's permission if it is intended to award the work in-house, to consult the Federation of Civil Engineering Contractors and the Association of Consulting Engineers on matters contained in the specifications and the methods of tender evaluation to be used; and to seek the comments of the Association of Consulting Engineers regularly throughout the tendering process.

Environment Agency

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decision he has made concerning the membership schemes proposed by the Environment Agency for its regional environment protection advisory committees. [20893]

Mr. Clappison: The consultation period on the membership schemes has now closed. After careful consideration of the responses received my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has approved the schemes in the form in which they were submitted by the agency. The agency will now be consulting on nominations for each committee.

Development Plans

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to amend the system of development plans prepared under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990; and if he will make a statement. [21092]

Mr. Gummer: The plan-led system requires each district planning authority to have an area-wide local plan or unitary development plan. We set a target, agreed with local authorities, of getting a substantial majority of those plans prepared, debated and formally adopted by the end of 1996. The result of the most recent monitoring survey shows that 62 per cent. of authorities expect to have adopted their plan by the target date. This shortfall is disappointing.

I have been concerned at the length of time it is taking some authorities to adopt their plan. We consulted earlier about possible changes to speed up this process. The response was lukewarm about radical change, but supported change that could be achieved within the scope of existing legislation. Already the planning inspectorate has introduced more concise reports on local plan inquiries and a system of service agreements with local authorities on their likely length and cost.

I am proposing further changes that can be brought into effect quickly, with the publication of proposals to amend both the code of practice on development plans and the development plan regulations. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

In addition, I am not ruling out further changes, including measures that will require legislation, if these are wanted by the users of the development plan system. My Department will shortly be writing to interested organisations about this wider review.

HEALTH

Relocation

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many, and which, health authorities and trusts operated negative equity buyout or similar relocation schemes prior to executive guidance being issued in October 1994; and how much was paid by each health service body under such schemes in each year. [19030]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Consultant Ophthalmology

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant ophthalmology sessions are available on average each week at present; and how many were available on average each week in each of the past five years. [19611]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Supermarket (Sale of Drugs)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on community pharmacies of large supermarket chains selling (a) non-prescription and (b) prescription drugs below the recommended retail price. [19810]

Mr. Malone: (a) None. (b) prescription drugs are not available for sale.

Schizophrenia

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis the relative effectiveness of admission of patients with schizophrenia to (a) a district general hospital and (b) an area mental hospital is assessed; and over what period after discharge. [19824]

Mr. Bowis: We are working with the Royal College of Psychiatrists to develop outcome scales to assess the health and social functioning of mentally ill people.

Human Embryos

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is taken in respect of human embryos stored for more than five years, but less than the 39 years specified by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (Statutory Storage Period for Human Embryos) Regulations in the event that the woman for the relief of whose infertility they had been stored ceases to receive treatment. [19657]

Mr. Horam: Embryos will normally remain in store until used for treatment purposes or until the storage period agreed with the couple expires. The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is preparing guidance for licensed centres on the steps that should be taken to review the situation with the couple concerned before the storage period ends.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of all forms of consent authorised by his Department for use by infertility and research clinics in connection with the creation, storage and use of human embryos. [19656]

Mr. Horam: Copies of consent forms issued by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority will be placed in the Library. These forms are not subject to authorisation by the Department of Health.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of all codes of practice issued by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority in connection with the consent which is sought by the donors of gametes and human embryos, with specific reference to (a) maximum storage periods, (b) the individuals for the relief of whose infertility those embryos may be used and (c) the research or other non-therapeutic purposes for which those embryos may be used. [19655]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's code of practice provides guidance to licensed centres about consent to storage of gametes and embryos, consent to use of gametes and embryos in treatment and consent for use of gametes and embryos in research. Copies of the code of practice are available in the Library.

HIV (Anti-viral Medicines)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 184, what assessment he has made of the funding requirements of health authorities necessary to ensure that where combination therapies of antiviral medicines are determined by clinicians as being the best response to HIV for a particular patient, there will be no financial obstacle to their prescription. [19937]

Mr. Horam: The Department allocates specific funding in relation to treating people with HIV and AIDS. The AIDS treatment and care budget is no longer ringfenced, and health authorities have the flexibility to move funds into HIV/AIDS from their main allocations if they so wish. The AIDS treatment budget already allows for significant costs for drug therapies and we will be monitoring the uptake and impact of combination therapies.

Blind and Partially Sighted People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what evaluation he has made of the benefit of specialised computer equipment for blind and partially sighted people; [20236]

(2) what proposals he has to encourage the use of specialised computer equipment by blind and partially sighted people. [20239]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has not carried out such an evaluation. We have, however, made a grant of £25,000 per year for three years to the computability centre in Warwick. The centre is a national charity which provides information and advice on computers to disabled people, carers, employers and professionals.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of blind and partially sighted people in the United Kingdom are under the age of 18 years. [20238]

Mr. Bowis: Local authority registers show that at 31 March 1994 in England, around 2 per cent. of people registered as blind and 2.5 per cent. of those registered as partially sighted were aged under 18.

Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many blind and partially sighted people live in (a) Coventry, (b) the west midlands and (c) the United Kingdom. [20237]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the numbers of people registered with local authorities as blind or partially sighted is shown in the table. As registration of blindness with local authorities is voluntary the figures may not provide a wholly reliable indicator of the prevalence of blindness or partial sight in the population.

Blind and partially sighted people registered with local authorities—at 31 March 1994

Numbers

	Blind and partially sighted people	Blind people	Partially sighted people
Coventry	1,440	730	720

Mentally Ill People

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the qualification of staff of residential accommodation for mentally ill people in (a) the community and (b) psychiatric hospitals. [19825]

Mr. Bowis: Registering authorities decide the level of qualification and suitability of staff in residential homes. Each trust determines the staff and skills that they need to deliver the service which they provide through their contracts.

GP Fundholding, North Essex

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the population in the North Essex health authority area are now served by fundholding general practitioners. [18598]

Mr. Malone: A total of 47 per cent. of the population in North Essex health authority are currently registered with a fundholding practice. We expect this to rise to 60 per cent. this April.

Trust Directors (Insurance)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with the chairmen of NHS trusts concerning insuring trust directors against liabilities other than in cases of malfeasance. [20555]

Mr. Malone: None. Guidance to the national health service on the personal liability of non-executive directors is in course of preparation. The decision as to whether insurance is appropriate will remain one for individual trust boards.

WALES

Housing Rents

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current average gross weekly rent (a) for council rented accommodation and (b) housing association rented accommodation in Wales; and what were the corresponding figures five years earlier. [17882]

Mr. Hague: The available information on average actual rents is as follows:

	1990–91 £	1995–96 £
Rented from:
Local authority	24.26	36.11
Housing Association[1]	n/a	42.31

[1] Comparable information is available only from 1994–95 and even then such overall average rents do not reflect the different sizes, ages and locations of dwellings in the local authority and housing association stocks.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in his Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. De Montfort University (since March 1992)

The total value of the contracts listed above is £1,610,442.00

The precise amounts paid under each of these contracts are commercially confidential.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the way in which the Environmental Protection Act 1990, section 48(6) and (7) prevents local authorities from recycling the domestic and commercial waste they collect; and if he will make it his policy to allow local authorities to recycle as much of the waste they collect as is feasible. [19941]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about section 48(7). This subsection has not yet been brought into operation but its effects would be to prevent waste collection authorities in Wales from providing plant and equipment for the sorting and baling of waste themselves and would require them to engage independent contractors for this purpose. In making arrangements for recycling, district councils in Wales will be aware of the additional powers available to them under sections 51 and 55 of the 1990 Act.

In the recent White Paper "Making Waste Work", the Government made clear their intention to review the role of local authorities in recycling. We also reaffirmed our commitment to the target of recycling or composting 25 per cent. of all household waste by 2000.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has received from each of the counties and boroughs due to take responsibility for local government on 1 April of the amount of waste they will recycle in the first year of their existence. [19938]

Mr. Jones: None.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the numbers of his departmental staff in the (a) economic development, (b) industrial and training, (c) agriculture, (d) local government, (e) health, (f) health professional, (g) nursing, (h) social services inspectorate, (i) CADW, (j) education, (k) translation unit, (l) establishment, (m) finance, (n) legal and (o) private office division (i) in 1995–96 and (ii) under management proposals in 1996–97. Mr. Hague: The information is given in the following table:

	General Medical Practitioners
	Total[1]	Unrestricted principals
1 October 1991	1,808	1,647
1 October 1992	1,835	1,676

Welsh Tourist Board

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the maximum number of board members of the Welsh tourist board; what is his policy for filling vacancies which arise from time to time; for what periods during the past three years the Welsh tourist board has operated with less than a full complement of board members; and what plans he has for making further board appointments. [20232]

Mr. Hague: The maximum membership of the Wales tourist board is a chairman and not more than six other members. When filling vacancies I consider the best interests for Wales and select people on the basis of merit who through their abilities, experience and qualities match the needs of the public body in question. The board has operated effectively below its complement over the past two years; but I shall be bringing it up to full membership as soon as possible.

Agriculture Department

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total value of payments made by the Welsh Office agriculture department's divisional offices in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20080]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A total of £198.4 million in 1994–95 and an estimated £231.5 million in 1995–96.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many divisional offices the agriculture department had in Wales in (a) 1991, (b) 1993 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20081]

In addition there are three schemes in the medium—under £3 million—programme for construction in the next three years. Further schemes are planned.

the sale of Welsh Development Agency capital assets in 1994–95; and how much is forecast to be so generated in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [20249]

Mr. Hague: The agency's budget for its 1996–97 base programme has been set at £120 million. This will be increased by £6.8 million following my decision to transfer responsibility for urban investment grant to the agency. The agency also expects to attract £10 million of European regional development fund receipts to support projects additional to its base programme. The sale of capital assets generated £72.4 million in 1994–95 and is forecast to yield £75.0 million in 1995–96 and £68.0 million in 1996–97 for re-investment in the Welsh economy.

NHS Trust Directors (Insurance)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of NHS trusts in Wales concerning insuring trust directors against liabilities other than in cases of malfeasance. [20558]

Mr. Hague: I have not formally consulted the NHS trust chairmen about this issue. Guidance on non-executive liability will be published in the near future.

Copies of the letters have been placed in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Eastwood Park Prison

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the size of the prison cells at Eastwood Park prison. [19332]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 March 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 13 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the size of prison cells at Eastwood Park Prison.

The sleeping accommodation at Eastwood Park prison is divided into 4 areas:

1. Health Care Centre which has cellular sleeping accommodation. The 10 medical cells are each 4.20m by 2.95m (12.39m_2).
2. Segregation Unit which has 2 cells which are each 2.425m by 3.01m (7.3^2).
3. East Block which has 37 redecorated sleeping accommodation single cubicles measuring 2.200m by 3.050m (6.7m^2).
4. "Mid and West" Blocks which each have 43 redecorated single cubicles with a room size measuring 1.593m by 2.630m (5.076m^2.

Prisoners (Non-Payment of Fines)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women served terms of imprisonment in the last three years for which records are available for non-payment of fines; how many sentences were for non-payment of television licence fines; what is the average term served for such non-payment; and what measures alternative to prison he is considering. [19877]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter Richard Tilt to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 13 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, how many (a) men and (b) women served terms of imprisonment in the last three years for which records are available for non-payment of fines; how many sentences were for non-payment for television licences; what is the average term served for such non-payment; and what measures alternative to prison he is considering.

Information on the number of fine defaulters received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for the years 1993 and 1994, analysed by offence group is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (Tables 7.1 and 7.3 of the 1994 edition, Cm 3087), a copy of which is available in the Library. Estimates are given of time served in custody.

Provisional information for 1995 shows that 19,341 male and 1,401 female fine defaulters were received in to Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. Of these, 508 males and 241 females were received for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence. The average time served by fine defaulters is about one week.

Courts may not imprison a fine defaulter unless they have used or considered all other methods of enforcing the fine. These include deductions from benefit or attachment of earnings, or a money payments supervision order. They must also be satisfied that the failure to pay the fine is the result of wilful refusal or culpable neglect.

The Government has set up a Working Group including representatives from the Magistrates' Association and the Justices' Clerks' Society, to examine urgently what improvements can be made to the enforcement of fines and other financial penalties. The Working Group will issue best practice guidance to courts within the next few months which will detail improvements which can be implemented immediately by the courts. The Government will also consider whether more wide-ranging changes are needed, which may require legislation.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if hands of visitors visiting prisoners in Doncaster prison since it opened have been dye-stamped; and if he will make a statement. [19743]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the dye-stamping of hands of visitors at Doncaster prison.

The prison opened on 20 June 1994 and the practice of dye-stamping visitors' hands with an ultra-violet reactive liquid began on 23 September 1994. This is one of a number of security procedures in place to ensure that people leaving the prison are genuine visitors rather than prisoners posing as such.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there is a one year break in the contract for Doncaster prison; and if he will make a statement. [19632]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about a one-year break in the contract for Doncaster prison.

There is no one-year break clause in the Doncaster contract, but the Authority has the option to terminate the contract by giving six months' notice to the contractor.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since it opened he has had to make a decision on trans-sexuals in Doncaster prison; and if he will make a statement. [19642]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 March 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about transsexuals in Doncaster prison.

Since Doncaster prison opened on 20 June 1994, it has never knowingly received any transsexual prisoners into custody. No decisions have therefore had to be made about their treatment.

Police Car Chases

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police car chases have resulted in (a) death and (b) injury in each of the last five years; [20192]

(3) how many deaths there have been involving police car chases in each police authority area in each of the last five years. [20186]

Mr. Maclean: Information in the precise form requested is not available centrally, but the available information is given for the years 1991–93 in the first table. The figures from 1994 to 31 March 1995 are given in the second table. In both cases, the information relates to incidents where death or serious injury has arisen in the course of either police pursuits or responses to emergency calls in England and Wales.

Mr. Mohammed Al Fayed

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Mr. Mohammed Al Fayed concerning the Immigration and Asylum Bill; when he intends to respond; and if he will place the correspondence in the Library. [19805]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 12 March 1996]: Mr. Al Fayed wrote to me on 14 February suggesting that the Bill would restrict the rights and freedoms of immigrants irrespective of how long they had lived and worked here. I shall send a reply shortly explaining that such concerns are groundless. I will place a copy of the correspondence in the Library.

Immigration

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has (a) to review immigration rules and (b) to ensure that tabled amendments are moved to the Immigration and Asylum Bill to meet the criticisms made by Mr. Justice Judge; and if he will make a statement. [19806]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 12 March 1996]: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to recent observations made by Mr. Justice Judge when dismissing an application for judicial review of decisions made under the British Nationality Act 1981. We will consider the observations when the transcript is available. Nationality matters fall outside the scope of the immigration rules and of the Bill.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department has issued in respect of the consideration by his officials of cases of persons who are liable to be removed as illegal entrants or deported but who have married a person settled in the United Kingdom. [21110]

Mr. Howard: New guidance has been issued setting out the factors to be considered in cases involving the removal or deportation of people married to a person settled here. The guidance, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, will take immediate effect.

Prisons (Drugs Tests)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 184, on mandatory drugs testing, if he will list how many added days were restored to prisoners appealing for restoration of remission lost during sentences. [20185]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 13 March 1996.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question, further to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 184, asking for the number of added days restored for offences of unauthorised use of a controlled drug and refusing to provide a sample for drug testing.

Information on the number of added days remitted to prisoners on their application is not collected centrally. However, an investigation of a sample of prisoners who received added days in 1994 for any offence against prison discipline showed that an estimated 1 in 6 added days were remitted.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many random drugs tests were carried out in the male prisons in the random mandatory drugs testing pilot study; and of these tests for each of the months from February to December 1995, how many proved positive for (a) cannabis only and (b) class A drugs only. [20448]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 13 March 1996.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of random drug tests and the numbers of prisoners testing positive for cannabis and class A drugs.

During the four month initial programme of mandatory drug testing, drug tests were carried out on 1,029 male prisoners. From June until December last year a further 2,010 tests were carried out on prisoners in the initial seven male establishments.

The attached table shows the number of confirmed positive tests for cannabis and for class A drugs in each of the seven male establishments. Because of the way in which the statistics are collected, it is not possible to subtract from these figures samples which were positive for both cannabis and class A drugs.

Mr. Clifton-Brown : To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will assist the Purcell school development appeal. [20876]

Mrs. Gillan: We have decided to make a capital grant of £250,000 towards the Purcell school development appeal. This will encourage private donors also to contribute, and will enable the school to secure the larger premises needed to enhance the specialist education it provides for children with exceptional musical talents. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary grant regulations, the payment will be made within the existing cash limit for class x vote 1 for 1995–96.

School Building Programme

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment and by what criteria he has made of the adequacy of the capital building programme for schools. [20287]

Mr. Ancram: My Department regularly reviews the capital needs of schools in consultation with the education and library boards and other school authorities. Each year, potential capital projects are reassessed and a priority rating of 1 to 6 is assigned to each project to ensure that available resources are directed to the highest priorities in terms of educational need.

Artistically Gifted Children

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision is made for the education of artistically gifted children; and at what annual cost. [20279]

Mr. Ancram: The statutory programmes of study are sufficiently broadly couched to enable schools to teach each child, including the most gifted, at his or her own pace. Boards will continue to offer help through their curriculum support services to meet the needs of these pupils, as all others. In addition, children who are especially talented in music or dance may receive assistance to attend certain specialist schools in Great Britain. In 1994–95, my Department supported seven children through this scheme at a cost of £47,000; in 1995–96 four children were supported at a cost of £21,000.

Supported Study Initiatives

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what supported study initiatives his Department has taken; and what assessment he has made of their success. [20280]

Mr. Ancram: Twelve homework centres have been supported under special initiatives. These have been inspected by the Department's inspectorate and my Department is presently considering how the lessons learnt might be applied in future projects.

Surplus School Places

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many surplus places there are within the school system in Northern Ireland. [20281]

Mr. Ancram: Based on the latest estimate in 1994–95 there are 32,000 surplus school places—15,000 in primary schools and 17,000 in secondary schools.

Integrated Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current provision for integrated education in Northern Ireland in terms of (a) schools, (b) cost, (c) pupil numbers and (d) percentage of children in such schools. [20282]

Mr. Ancram: There are currently 28 integrated schools in Northern Ireland catering for 5,748 pupils which represents 1.7 per cent. of the total primary and secondary school pupil population. Their total 1995–96 recurrent budget is £13.5 million.

General Teaching Council

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to establish a general teaching council in Northern Ireland. [20283]

Mr. Ancram: None.

Dearing Inquiry

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what contribution he has made to the review by Sir Ron Dearing of qualifications for 16 to 19-year-olds; and if he will place it in the Library. [20284]

Mr. Ancram: Apart from setting his remit, the Government have made no input to Sir Ron Dearing's consideration of the issues: that is a matter for him as he considers appropriate. Schools, colleges, training organisations and employers in Northern Ireland were, however, consulted on the same basis as other regions of England and Wales as part of Sir Ron's national consultation exercise, and in that context my officials offered some informal comments. The Government will respond formally when Sir Ron presents his report later this month.

Civil Service

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what discussions he held with and what notice he gave to (a) Commonwealth members and (b) the Republic of Ireland of his intention to introduce amendments to the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 1986; and if the ban on employment will apply to the children of Commonwealth and Republic of Ireland citizens who are currently in posts but without British nationality; [20401]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of (a) Commonwealth citizens and (b) Republic of Ireland citizens currently employed in the civil service. [20402]

Sir John Wheeler: The amendments announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 1 March, Official Report, column 771, and which take effect from 1 June 1996, concern civil service nationality rules, which, for the Northern Ireland civil service, are made under the Civil Service (Northern Ireland) Order 1986. The amendments are not to the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 1991.

On the question of discussions with or notice given to Commonwealth members or the Republic of Ireland, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

The eligibility for employment in the Northern Ireland civil service of the children of Commonwealth and Republic of Ireland citizens currently in service will depend, as now, on the nature of the civil service post concerned and the nationality of the individual at the time of application.

No estimate was made of the number of Commonwealth citizens or of Republic of Ireland citizens currently serving in the Northern Ireland civil service. This information is not recorded.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what factors underlay his decision to omit the absent parent's right to a review in the new drafting of the Child Support Agency regulations on clean-break settlements; [17738]

(2) what action he is taking to reinstate absent parents' rights to review when they have applied for clean-break settlements to be taken into account in Child Support Agency maintenance calculations. [17737]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: There is nothing in the regulations introduced in April 1995 relating to property and capital settlements which affects an absent parent's normal review rights.

Pensioners (Benefits)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of pensioners claiming (i) council tax benefit and (ii) housing benefit and entitled to, but not receiving, income support. [19765]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people claimed cold weather payments in the area covered by his benefits offices in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough from mid-December 1995 to the end of February 1996; on which dates they qualified; and what was the total amount paid to those whose claims were met; [19742]

(2) how many times since 1 November 1995 have the (a) Leeds and (b) Warrington monitoring stations triggered the system of cold weather payments; and if he will make a statement. [19766]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency on 6 March, Official Report, column 349.

Income Support (Administration Costs)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the total spending on income support is spent on administration costs for (a) pensioner recipients, (b) non-pensioner recipients and (c) all recipients of income support. [20264]

Mr. Roger Evans: The total expenditure on income support that is spent on administration is about 10 per cent. Administrative expenditure is not broken down into costs arising from pensioner and non-pensioner claims.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the impact of the cost of meeting 80 per cent. of local authority expenditure incurred in assisting asylum seekers following benefit withdrawal from Exchequer funds, on the savings he has projected for the benefit changes. [20276]

Mr. Roger Evans: Grants will be paid on unavoidable additional expenditure above a certain threshold and will be assessed in arrears on the basis of claims. Threshold levels are still to be determined. The level of grant will depend on the actual claims made by local authorities.

State Retirement Pension

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will uprate the state pension to one-third of average earnings for each pensioner; and if he will make a statement. [20657]

Mr. Heald: I have no such plans. Retirement pension will rise by 3.9 per cent. next month, in line with the annual increase in the retail prices index to September 1995.

SERPS Rebate

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to announce the new levels of contracted-out rebate to apply from April 1997. [20976]

Mr. Heald: The relevant reports by the Government Actuary and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Social Security, have been laid today together with draft amending orders to establish the level of the rebates for the period beginning in April 1997 in accordance with the Pension Schemes Act of 1993 as amended by the Pensions Act of 1995.

Contracted-out occupational pension schemes and appropriate personal pension schemes provide an alternative to SERPS and thereby relieve the state of part of the liability to provide income in retirement; this is recognised by a rebate on class 1 national insurance contributions. Since April 1993 this has been set at 4.8 per cent. of earnings between the lower and upper earnings limits.

Since the rebate was last set the Pensions Act 1995 has been passed. Amongst other measures designed to restore confidence in the security of pension funds following Maxwell and implement the main recommendations of the subsequent Pension Law Review Committee report, the Act simplified the future arrangements for contracting out of SERPS and introduced a new system of age-related rebates for those contracting out of SERPS into money purchase contracted-out schemes and appropriate personal pensions.

In his report to Parliament, the Government Actuary indicated his view that the contracted-out rebate for salary-related schemes should be set at 4.6 per cent. This figure reflects the fact that, under the new arrangements, individuals will forgo entitlement to the benefits which would otherwise accrue under SERPS; the Government Actuary as required by the new legislation has therefore provided an assessment on the basis of the actuarial value of the SERPS forgone rather than, as at present, the cost of providing guaranteed minimum pensions. We agree with his report and with the figures set out therein, which we propose to split between a 1.6 per cent. rebate for employees and a 3 per cent. rebate for employers.

The Government Actuary's report also discusses the levels of age-related rebate needed in the case of both money purchase and appropriate personal pensions which are required to provide equivalent levels of funded pensions as a replacement for SERPS. His figures include estimates of the expenses of both typical and the more efficient commercial pension providers. We have decided to set the rebates which include an allowance for the reasonable costs and charges of the more efficient providers of appropriate personal pensions and contracted-out money purchase pensions. The new rebates will therefore vary by age from 3.1 per cent. for the youngest member of a money purchase scheme and from 3.4 per cent. for those with personal pensions to a maximum of 9 per cent. We have set the maximum age-related rebates at 9 per cent. to restraint the costs to public finances.

These proposals underline our firm and continuing commitment to the partnership between private and public sector in the provision of pensions. Coupled with our policy of maintaining the value of the basic state retirement pension in line with prices, we believe they will help build on our success in creating a strong pensions structure for the 21st century.

Compensation Recovery

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of benefit recovered from persons receiving compensation for personal injury and disability in the last year for which figures are available; how many individual compensation cases were involved; and, as a global figure, what was the proportion of the amount recovered by his Department compared with the total awarded to those seeking compensation and in receipt of reclaimable benefits. [19371]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Peter Mathison to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 12 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what was the value of benefit recovered from persons receiving compensation for personal injury and disability in the last year for which figures are available; how many individual compensation cases were involved; and, as a global figure, what was the proportion of the amount recovered by his Department compared to the total awarded to those seeking compensation and in receipt of reclaimable benefits.

There is no legal requirement for the compensator to notify the Compensation Recovery Unit about the size of settlements. Therefore, the information about the proportion of the award recouped is not available. The rest of the information you requested is given below:

Period	Number of cases	Total amount recovered
11/4/94—31/3/95	39,915	£110.1M[1]

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

[1] This figure includes monies recovered from both final and interim payments.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

DEFENCE

Ministerial Meetings (France and Germany)

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions have been held between Ministers in his Department and their French and German counterparts; and if he will make a statement. [21081]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I met State Secretary Simon and Délégue Général pour l'Armement Conze on Monday 11 March. I told them that the Government have decided that, subject to amendment of the tender documents to reflect UK requirements, we will join the current competition which is planned to lead to a collaborative programme for an armoured utility vehicle. This decision was welcomed by France and Germany, who have agreed that the industries of all three nations should take part in the project on an equal basis.

I also confirmed that the UK wished to join the armaments agency, which France and Germany announced last year that they would be establishing. We agreed that, once work has been completed on amendments to the tender documents for the armoured utility vehicle, the UK will participate with France and Germany in their current work on the setting up of this agency.

Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has for replacing the anti-oil pollution functions currently carried out from the RMAS depot at Fairlie; [19597]

(2) if he will list the dates on which the RMAS in-house team had discussions with his officials on the strategic implications of concentrating the buoys task at Pembroke and closing Fairlie; [19585]

(3) if he will make a statement on the implications of the RMAS market-testing exercise for the British underwater test and evaluation centre and associated civilian employment at Kyle at Lochalsh; [19586]

(4) what estimate he has made of the time which would be taken for personnel and equipment from Pembroke to arrive at the Clyde nuclear base in the event of an incident; [19587]

(5) on what grounds the lowest tender for the RMAS ports contract was rejected; and if he will make a statement; [19588]

(6) if the privatised parts of the RMAS functions will continue to be subject to royal charter; [19589]

(7) what estimate he has made of (a) the number of (b) the location of job losses resulting from the RMAS market-testing exercise; [19590]

(8) what was the value of investment by RMAS at (a) Pembroke and (b) Fairlie in each of the past five years; [19591]

(9) if he will postpone a final decision on the future of RMAS Fairlie pending an examination of the strategic implications of transferring the buoys task from it to Pembroke; [19592]

(10) if the will list the locations of moorings and navigation buoys currently serviced from the RMAS depot at Fairlie; [19593]

(11) if the bids from Denholm-Serco and Ocean Group in respect of the moorings and navigation buoys functions of the RMAS were predicted on the retention of north and south bases; and if he will make a statement; [19594]

(12) what consultations he has had with NATO concerning the proposed closure of the RMAS depot at Fairlie; [19595]

(13) when his Department was first informed of the proposal to close the RMAS depot at Fairlie, as part of the in-house bid for the moorings and navigation buoys functions of the RMAS. [19596]

Mr. Soames: The results of the market test of marine services announced on 28 February 1996, Official Report, columns 553-54, will involve the transfer of the upkeep and maintenance of moorings and navigation buoys from the NATO mooring and support depot—NMSD—Fairlie to the depot at Pembroke. There are no strategic grounds for postponing implementation of this decision and no discussions have been held with the in-house bid team on any such strategic implications.

The invitation to tender—ITT—did not oblige any bidders to use any of the existing MOD mooring maintenance facilities. The commercial bidders and the in-house bid team all elected to operate from one prime depot. The in-house bid team did not select to use NMSD Fairlie as a centre for its moorings and buoys bid. The Department was first made aware of this formally when bids were submitted in May 1995.

The relevant NATO authorities were informed of the market test's potential to affect the MOD's future involvement in NMSD Fairlie. Their long-term intentions in the light of the decision not to use the depot for moorings and navigation buoys work will now be sought. The provision of marine service support to the British underwater test and evaluation centre—BUTEC—at the Kyle of Lochalsh was not included in the ITT and the impact of the market test on this service is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, which operates the establishment.

The following 15 general locations of moorings and buoys are currently serviced from NMSD Fairlie:

Firth of Clyde
Isle of Skye
Hebrides
Kyle of Lochalsh
Rona and Raasay
Loch Ewe
Loch Eriboll
Cape Wrath
Carlingford loch
Luce bay
Firth of Forth
Ocean met buoys
Moray Firth and Aberdeen
Humber and the Wash
North sea met buoys.

No oil pollution control—OPC—equipment is held at NMSD Fairlie, but the depot has a contingency role in the Clyde port authority emergency plan as a mobilisation point and as a waterfront loading facility. This role will not be directly affected by the market test decision.

No special mooring equipment or personnel are retained at NMSD Fairlie to respond to incidents at HM naval base Clyde. Should mooring materials be required to support an incident at the base after the task has been transferred to Pembroke dock, the timing would very much depend on the size and amount of equipment involved and whether it could be shipped by road, rail or sea.

Investment at Pembroke and Fairlie over the past five years is as follows:

Pembroke

Financial Year 1993–94: £1.165 million

Financial Year 1994–95: £0.106 million

Financial Year 1995–96: £0.339 million

Of this sum £1.370 million was attributable to the closure of the central salvage depot, Swanmore.

Fairlie

Financial Year 1991–92: £0.031 million.

No part of the marine services is being privatised. The ports element will be Government owned and contractor operated—GOCO. The vessels required by the contractor will continue to be MOD-owned assets and will be operated under bareboat charter conditions, one of which requires the contractor to retain the same livery for the vessels and to fly the RMAS ensign.

The relatively minor cost advantage of the in-house team's bid for the ports contract was outweighed by the much greater potential cost to the MOD associated with the high risk nature of its non-complaint management proposals. The bid failed to achieve a single point of responsibility and accountability at each naval base. Furthermore, no acceptable system for tasking and prioritising marine services resources at each base had been developed.

It is estimated that approximately 500 posts will be surplus to requirements as a result of the market test. The precise details of the reductions have yet to be worked out, but their regional implications are expected to be in the order of 160 at Devonport, 120 at Portsmouth, 200 at Clyde plus 45 at the Bath HQ. Trade Union consultation has now commenced.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he was first informed of the proposal to transfer functions and activities at present performed by vessels, their crews and other personnel located at RMAS Greenock; and if he will make a statement; [19844]

(2) how many (a) men and (b) women were employed at RMAS Greenock in each of the past 10 years; [19845]

(3) if he will postpone a final decision on the future of RMAS Greenock until the completion of an analysis of the strategic and financial consequences of the transfer of functions and employment away from RMAS Greenock; [19846]

(4) which (a) marine services and (b) other activities will continue to be performed by vessels and personnel based at RMAS Greenock, following his decision concerning the marine services market test; and if he will make a statement; [19847]

(5) what guarantees he has sought concerning the continuity of employment and utilisation of (a) vessels, (b) personnel and (c) physical facilities at RMAS Greenock; [19848]

(6) what estimates he has made of the number of jobs which will be lost at RMAS Greenock as a result of his decision concerning the marine services market test; and if he will make a statement; [19849]

(7) if he will list the functions undertaken by RMAS vessels operating out of Greenock in relation to the operations of nuclear submarines in and close to the firth of Clyde; and if he will make a statement; [19850]

(8) on how many occasions RMAS vessels operating out of Greenock have been called to the collisions, near-collisions and other incidents involving (a) nuclear submarines and fishing vessels, (b) conventional submarines and fishing vessels and (c) nuclear and conventional submarines and other vessels in and close to the firth of Clyde in each of the past 10 years. [19851]

Mr. Soames: Ministers gave careful consideration to the results of the marine services market test in the weeks leading up to the announcement on 28 February 1996, Official Report, columns 553–54, that the contract for the provision of ports services have been awarded to the private sector consortium, Denholm-SERCO, and the remaining moorings/buoys and armament freighting contracts had been awarded to the in-house team.

The impact of this decision on RMAS Greenock will involve the transfer of moorings/buoys and associated diving activities currently performed there to Pembroke dock, which the in-house team proposes to use as the centre of this task in future. Two vessels, Salmoor and Salmaster, currently based at RMAS Greenock will be affected by this transfer.

Under the management of Denholm-SERCO, RMAS Greenock will continue to provide the full range of marine services under the ports contract to the Clyde area. This will include support to the operations of nuclear submarines in and close to the firth of Clyde, full details of which are classified. No strategic or financial reason is seem to postpone the implementation of the market test at RMAS Greenock, which is expected to lead to significant savings.

Not all of the vessels and personnel currently employed on ports-related tasks will be required under the terms of the new contract. It is too early to estimate how many posts and vessels at RMAS Greenock would be surplus to requirements. This will be the subject of detailed discussions between the Department, Denholm-SERCO and the work force over the coming weeks. Continuity of employment would be provided under the terms of TUPE regulations. It will be subject to full consultation with the work force and its trade union representatives. The utilisation of vessels and facilities would be subject to Denholm-SERCO's requirements. MOD vessels required would be transferred under commercial leasing arrangements and the company intends to operate from the existing great harbour support base making use of most of the buildings.

The number of employees at RMAS Greenock is currently estimated to be some 252.2, of whom some 12.5 are women. It is not possible to provide the information on employment levels in each of the preceding 10 years and the ratio of men and women employed since data are not held centrally in this format and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Similarly, the details of RMAS vessels called out to collisions or other incidents in the Clyde area in each of the past 10 years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, it would be standard practice in an emergency involving a collision between an MOD and a commercial vessel for any marine service vessel able to assist to be directed to do so. This would continue to be the case following the market test.

Service Quarters

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from hon. Members regarding empty Ministry of Defence service quarters in Chester. [20377]

Mr. Soames: My Department has not received any representations in the past 12 months from an hon. Member concerning empty dwellings owned by my Department in Chester. One has been received, however, from the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall) relating to Cheshire, Official Report, 22 May 1995, column 393.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what representations he has received from hon. Members regarding empty Ministry of Defence service quarters in Gravesham; [20375]

(2) what representations he has received from hon. Members regarding empty Ministry of Defence service quarters in Dover. [20376]

Mr. Soames: My Department has not received any representations in the past 12 months from hon. Members concerning empty dwellings owned by my Department in the Gravesham and Dover areas.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service married quarters are owned by his Department in each parliamentary constituency in Staffordshire; and how many are currently empty. [20374]

Mr. Soames: My Department owns 280 properties in the Stafford constituency at RAF Stafford. Of these, there are 30 vacant service families quarters, of which nine have been allocated to new families in April/May 1996.

My Department owns 205 properties in the Staffordshire, South-East constituency, at Whittington barracks. Of these, 90 are vacant service families quarters, of which 57 have been identified for alienation. Of the remaining 33 empty homes, seven have been allocated for incoming families during April 1996.

Air Accidents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates, locations, aircraft types and circumstances of all incidents since June 1993 in which military aircraft have made unintentional contact with the ground or with ground features with special reference to trees and power lines; and which of these incidents involved breaches of low flying regulations. [19744]

Mr. Soames: The information requested for the Army Air Corps and RAF is as follows:

Date	Location	Type	Circumstances
14 October 1993	Lyneham	RAF Hercules	Struck obstruction on approach to land in turbulent conditions
15 November 1993	Kafjord, Norway	RAF Harrier	Wirestrike

19 October 1995	Sennybridge	RAF Puma	Rotor blades struck a tree following uncommanded yaw on landing
28 February 1996	Northern Ireland	AAC Lynx	Tail of the aircraft struck the ground during landing

The Royal Navy does not hold this information centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

None of the incidents was formally classified as a breach of United Kingdom military low flying regulations.

Scott Inquiry

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member referred to in D.4.33 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16953]

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member referred to in D.4.33 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16957]

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member in D.4.33 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16955]

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take as a result of the finding of the Scott inquiry that the letter written to the hon. Member referred to in D.4.33 concerning changes in the Government's policy on the supply of arms to Iraq was misleading. [16954]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Government continue to take the view that the Howe guidelines were not changed and do not consider that further action is necessary.

Remote Piloting

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights in United Kingdom airspace by military remotely piloted vehicles were authorised on 6 January 1995. [19750]

Mr. Soames: One such flight was authorised within the Llanbedr danger area—EGD202.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates, locations and aircraft types involved in all incidents since 1990 of breaches of low flying regulations which were witnessed by RAF police deployed on covert monitoring duties. [19641]

Mr. Soames: Details of apparent breaches of low flying regulations detected by the RAF police during covert monitoring of the United Kingdom low flying system, including deployments with Skyguard, are as follows:

Date	Location	Numbers and types of aircraft
2 October 1990	East Leyton, Richmond North Yorkshire	1x RAF Tornado
16 July 1991	Eshottt airfield, Northumberland	3x German Air Force F4

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis the Ministry of Defence police are responsible for security at (a) Royal Ordnance premises and (b) other private company premises; what payment is made for the service; and if he will make a statement. [20356]

Mr. Soames: Ministry of Defence police are responsible for security at some Royal Ordnance plc premises under the terms of an agreement made in 1985. Ministry of Defence police are not responsible for security at other private company premises. My Department recovers the greater part of the cost of the services of the MOD police from Royal Ordnance plc.

Extended Range Ordnance

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning extended range ordnance under development for the AS 90 SP Howitzer. [20198]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 11 March 1996]: Proposals for the extended range ordnance and modular charge system for the AS90 SP Howitzer have recently been submitted to my Department by the prime contractor, Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. These proposals are currently being assessed.

M107 Shells

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which companies his Department purchases M107 shells. [20460]

Mr. Arbuthnot: M107 ammunition is currently supplied by Simmel Difesa of Italy.

Simmel

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions the Italian company Simmel has been investigated in relation to United Kingdom procurement fraud; and what action was taken. [20459]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Following an investigation by the Ministry of Defence police fraud squad which commenced in early 1991, James Taylor—a MOD civil servant—was convicted of corruptly agreeing with an agent for Simmel SPA to accept payment by Simmel for hotel accommodation in Venice for himself and his wife to the value of £880. On 22 December 1993 Taylor was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment and ordered to pay £13,500 prosecution costs. A confiscation order for £32,710 was also made. He received concurrent sentences on five other counts of corruptly receiving £24,000 from Gordon Foxley. On the advice of the Crown Prosecution Service no action was taken against Simmel or its agent.

F16 Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of his Department's examination of the option to lease American F16 aircraft. [20458]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In order to ensure the achievement of value for money, the cost-effectiveness of our procurement decisions is routinely tested in a combined operational effectiveness and investment appraisal—COEIA. In the case of the decision to upgrade the Tornado F3's weapons systems, this proposal was tested against alternative options including the lease of F-16 aircraft from the United States. The estimated total cost of the COEIA was approximately £295,000. The specific costs attributable to evaluating the F-16 option are not separately identifiable.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many vehicles containing more than one consignment of live animals for export were inspected by his officials at the port of Dover, prior to loading on to the MV Sea Road to sail from Dover to Boulogne in the period 1 January to 9 February; and what assessment he has made of whether welfare requirements as to feeding and watering for the purposes of the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1994 were observed for each consignment. [19891]

Mrs. Browning: During the period 1 January to 9 February 1996, 112 vehicles, carrying more than one consignment, were seen by officials prior to loading on to the MV Sea Road at the port. It is not part of the Ministry's responsibilities to assess whether the statutory welfare requirements are in the event met in respect of each consignment, although checks are carried out.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the country of destination declared on (a) the journey plan and (b) the health certificate for the purposes of the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1994 of the vehicle which left Dover on 8 February 1995 loaded with two consignments of calves. [19890]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 11 March 1996, Official Report, column 465.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the MV Caroline conforms with the requirements of the Animals (Sea Transport) Order 1930, as amended, when used for the carriage of livestock from a United Kingdom port. [19889]

Mrs. Browning: No information available to the Ministry suggests that the MV Caroline failed to comply with the appropriate conditions specified in the Animals (Sea Transport) Order of 1930.

Badgers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the Government of the Irish Republic in respect of the interaction between badgers and tuberculosis in cattle; and if he will make a statement. [19826]

Mrs. Browning: On 7 February, I visited Dublin for discussions with Mr. Deenihan, Minister of State at the Irish Department of Agriculture, to discuss Irish policy in relation to badgers and bovine tuberculosis and in particular to learn of the project which had been undertaken in East Offaly. I found those discussions extremely helpful and will be reflecting on them in the context of the consultations I am currently undertaking on our policy for the control of tuberculosis in cattle.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the re-introduction of a statutory compulsory treatment period to control sheep scab; and if he will make a statement; [20048]

(2) if he will make a statement on the notifiable status of sheep scab; and what plans he has to change that status; [20051]

(3) if he will make a statement on the control of sheep scab; [20047]

(4) if he will make a statement on the control of sheep scab in areas of concentrated common and unfenced grazing land. [20050]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 12 March 1996]: A public consultation paper was issued by the agriculture departments on 21 December 1995 setting out possible measures to help control sheep scab in Great Britain without detracting from farmers' responsibilities in this area. A copy was placed in the Library of the House.

The paper reflects the Government's latest assessment of the issues. It proposes, among other things, the creation of a criminal offence not to have treated infested sheep with an authorised treatment within a reasonable time of its having become detectable or upon service of a notice by an inspector authorised under the Animal Health Act 1981. The re-introduction of a compulsory treatment period across Great Britain is not, however, proposed.

The paper reiterates the Government's commitment to remove all references to sheep scab in the Animal Health Act 1981, including the requirement to notify the disease. A separate consultation paper will be issued on this specific issue in the spring.

The paper also includes a proposal for a measure to help deal with the particular problem caused by sheep scab in areas of common and unfenced grazing land.

The deadline for comments closed on 1 March 1996. A further round of consultation show follow once the comments received have been evaluated.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Electricity

20. Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of the nuclear electricity industry following privatisation. [18710]

Mr. Eggar: The external financing requirement of the nuclear electricity industry is shown in table 6A.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97".

Information Society Initiative

22. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the information society initiative will be available through business link offices in the south of England. [18712]

Mr. Page: All business links have information on the information society initiative and I hope that as many as possible will want to be actively involved. A number of business links in the south of England have already expressed an interest and we will be pursuing this with them.

Investment

23. Mr. Benton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those countries in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development in which investment per head is currently less than in the United Kingdom. [18713]

Mr. Oppenheim: In 1994 investment per head was lower than in the United Kingdom in Finland, Greece, Ireland, Mexico, Sweden and Turkey. Since 1979 business sector investment has been a larger proportion of GDP in the UK than in France, Germany, Italy and the US.

Electrical Sockets

26. Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the proposed EU directive on electrical sockets. [18716]

Mr. Eggar: There is no proposal for an EU directive on electrical sockets. We understand that the European electrotechnical standards body, CENELEC, which is industry-led, will shortly put a new proposal for a harmonised European standard for plugs and sockets to national standards committees for consultation and voting. The Government continues to keep a watch on developments in CENELEC.

Derelict Coal Mining Areas

28. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new initiatives his Department is introducing to bring industry into derelict coal mining areas; and if he will make a statement. [18718]

Mr. Page: A substantial package of measures was put in place to help regenerate coal areas, set out in a parliamentary answer by the Minister for Industry and Energy on 19 July 1994. As he points out, the 1993 assisted areas map included assisted area status for a number of these areas. They continue to benefit from eligibility for regional selective assistance.

British Coal Enterprise

29. Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met the chairman of British Coal to discuss the future of British Coal Enterprise. [18719]

Mr. Page: My ministerial colleagues and I meet the chairman of British Coal as necessary to discuss a range of issues. Officials in my Department remain in close touch with British Coal about the future of British Coal Enterprise.

Information Super-highway

30. Mr. David Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to encourage small businesses to use the information super-highway. [18720]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. friend, the President of the Board of Trade launched the information society initiative on 13 February; a four-year programme in which up to £35 million of new money will be invested. It will help United Kingdom businesses to take full advantage of the opportunities offered by new information and communication technologies to boost their competitiveness.

This new framework of support and awareness programmes is a partnership between industry and Government, addressed at all who work in manufacturing, service and creative sectors—particularly small and medium sized companies.

Manufacturing Output

31. Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in the level of manufacturing output in the last 12 months. [18721]

Mr. Eggar: Over the last 12 months manufacturing output was at a record level, almost 2 per cent. higher than a year earlier.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the growth in manufacturing output since 1990. [18709]

Mr. Eggar: Since the end of 1990 manufacturing output has grown by 3.5 per cent.

Gas Consumer Council (Complaints)

32. Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the level of complaints to the east midlands office of the Gas Consumer Council in 1995. [18722]

33. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the level of complaints to the west midlands office of the Gas Consumer Council in 1995. [13723]

Mr. Eggar: It will be for British Gas Trading Ltd. to take the steps it judges necessary to retain customer loyalty as competition approaches. Similarly, the service business, which is already operating in a competitive market, will need to meet that competition.

Manufacturing Investment

34. Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the level of manufacturing investment per head in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. [18724]

Mr. Oppenheim: In 1993 manufacturing investment per employee was £2,800 in the United Kingdom, £4,900 in the US, £3,700 in Canada and Finland, £3,500 in Denmark, £3,400 in Germany and £2,900 in Sweden. UK manufacturing industry invested a similar proportion of its output to Germany and the US over the last economic cycle.

Manufactured Exports

35. Mr. Dykes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on manufactured exports. [18725]

Mr. Oppenheim: The volume of manufactured exports grew by almost 7 per cent. last year and has nearly doubled since 1979. Since the mid 1980's our share of the volume of world trade in manufactures has stabilised after years of decline.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, columns 140–41, if he will list in each case (a) the value of the offer and (b) the name of the firm and the constituency in which it is located. [15626]

Mr. Oppenheim [pursuant to his reply 20 February, Official Report, column 91]: Information by constituency is as follows. For reasons of commercial confidentiality we do not publish information on individual offers accepted until the first payment of grant has been made.

Telecommunications (Key Escrow)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 229, if he will make an assessment of the impact on Britain's civil liberties of the adoption of a telecommunications key escrow. [20467]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The rights of the individual, and those of civil liberties, will be fully taken into account, as will the responsibility of the Government to protect the interests of the state and its citizens against serious crime, in any decisions the Government may make concerning the provision of confidentiality services on public networks.

Nuclear Industry (Privatisation)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the current state of negotiations to sell the United Kingdom nuclear industry to Duke Power. [18692]

Mr. Eggar: There are no negotiations with Duke Power.

Local Enterprise Councils

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many local enterprise councils are currently supported out of public funds; how much money is involved; and if he will make a statement. [18981]

Mr. Page: Local enterprise agencies are private sector companies and are not directly supported from public funds. Many, however, will have contracts with their local training and enterprise council or business link to deliver a range of services to the local business community.

Fireworks

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people were killed or injured as a result of accidents involving fireworks in each year since 1966 by region and firework type. [20206]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The numbers of firework injuries since 1966, in total and by firework type, are given in the figures.

Analyses of firework accidents by region have been published and are available for 1990 and succeeding years until 1994. Copies of these analyses have been deposited in the Library of the House.

For years earlier than 1990, obtaining regional data would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the volume of firework sales in each of the last five years. [20208]

Mr. Taylor: The number of individual fireworks sold to consumers throughout Great Britain in the years 1991 to 1995 is estimated by my Department as follows:

Year	Million
1991	134
1992	138
1993	141
1994	154
1995	[1]172

[1] Provisional.

These figures have been drawn from discussions with all parts of the industry.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the latest firework injury statistics; and what evidence he has as to how they relate to the changing volume of fireworks on the market. [20207]

Mr. Taylor: The firework injuries statistics from the 1995 census in Great Britain are not yet available but should be so by the end of this month. Analysis of the relation of accident numbers to sales volume will be possible when the statistics are available.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firework injuries occurred on new year's eve 1995. [20205]

Mr. Taylor: An estimate of the number of firework accidents occurring on 31 December 1995 would have to be based on data collected in a sample of hospital accident and emergency units by the home accident surveillance system. These data are not yet available.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the latest firework injury statistics for 1995 by region and by firework type. [20204]

Mr. Taylor: Statistics from the 1995 census of fireworks injuries are not yet available but my Department hopes to publish them before the end of this month.

Mergers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the proposals by the European Commission to reduce the thresholds according to which mergers are brought under European Commission jurisdiction. [20335]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Commission has issued a Green Paper outlining various proposals for reform of the EC merger regulation, including possible threshold reductions. Once the United Kingdom and other member states have made their views known it will be for the Commission to decide whether it wishes to proceed with formal proposals to the Council.

"Employers Guide to Stress"

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what costs his Department incurred in the production of the employers guide to stress. [20547]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Department of Trade and Industry incurred no costs in connection with the production of the Health and Safety Executive's document 'Stress at Work: A Guide for Employers'.

Employment Rights

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the Green Paper, "Resolving Employment Rights Disputes: Options for Reform." [21080]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government intend to publish, for consultation, a draft Bill on industrial tribunals. The draft Bill will contain important reforms to streamline the industrial tribunals system. It will also aim to increase the proportion of employment rights disputes resolved by employees and employers themselves, or through conciliation by the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service or by other third party means. These proposals were widely welcomed in our consultation on the Green Paper, "Resolving Employment Rights Disputes: Options for Reform".

We intend to publish and consult on the Bill in the summer. Consultation on an advance draft of the Bill will help give tribunal users a better opportunity to comment on legislation of direct interest to them; identify any remaining areas of contention so that they can be considered before the Bill is introduced and so aid implementation of changes to the tribunal system. This will help us to produce better legislation and ensure that the changes we are proposing to make are of benefit and are workable.

Robotics (Nuclear Plant Decommissioning)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on robotic technology used in the decommissioning of nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement. [18706]

Mr. Page: None. Operations at licensed nuclear sites must be carried out to the satisfaction of the nuclear installations inspectorate. The procurement and evaluation of research into the decommissioning of nuclear power stations is the responsibility of the operators of those stations.

Orimulsion

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has had since 15 February alleging orimulsion to be toxic and advocating a ban on its importation into the United Kingdom; and what studies his Department has undertaken of the arguments adduced in those Organisations for Economic Co-operation and Development countries which have (i) considered and (ii) implemented such a ban. [19648]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Since 15 February my Department has received no such representations; nor has my Department undertaken any studies of OECD countries' decisions concerning orimulsion. However, in 1992 a research study was carried out on behalf of the Department of the Environment which reviewed the impacts of orimulsion and the pollution abatement technologies which may be applied to orimulsion-fired boilers.

I understand that Milford Haven port authority has produced a report about the likely effects of spillages of up to one thousand tonnes of orimulsion into the Haven. This report is on the planning public register.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20091]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 12 March 1996]: None of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department has a statutory base except the Industrial Development Advisory Board. The answers to the other questions are as follows:-

(a) none except the Council for Science and Technology and the Advisory Committee on Arbitration Law who may sometimes publish their advice to Government;

(b) none except the British Overseas Trade Board, the Industrial Development Advisory Board, the Regional Development Advisory Boards and the Advisory Committee on Coal Research;

(c) none except the British Overseas Trade Board, the Industrial Development Advisory Board and the Regional Development Advisory Boards.

In each of the exceptions listed in (a) to (c) above it is voluntary rather than under a statutory requirement.

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20108]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 12 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 December 1994, Official Report, columns 912–13.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Scott Inquiry

Sir David Madel: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total cost to public funds of the Scott inquiry for arms for Iraq. [18653]

Mr. Freeman: The total cost to date of Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is assessed as £6,344,000.

This figure includes the direct salary, legal and other estimated costs of the inquiry itself; the direct salary cost of officials wholly employed on matters relating to the inquiry—but not the cost of officials who have worked on inquiry-related matters from time to time as part of their normal duties, which is unquantifiable; the cost of providing external legal services for witnesses to the inquiry, and the value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department—some legal advice has been provided by Government lawyers as part of their normal duties, which is also unquantifiable and therefore not included.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what have been the costs incurred for each draft deregulation order in respect of (a) printing, (b) consultation and (c) drafting and amending orders. [18652]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not held centrally. Such costs as there are will be primarily incurred by the lead Department, which is responsible for consulting on the proposed changes and then for drafting, amending and printing the order.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what discussions he held with and what notice he gave to (a) Commonwealth members and (b) the Republic of Ireland of his intention to introduce amendments to the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order; and if the ban on employment will apply to the children of Commonwealth and Republic of Ireland citizens who are currently in posts but without British nationality; [20403]

(2) what estimate he has made of (a) the number of Commonwealth citizens and (b) Republic of Ireland citizens currently employed in the civil service. [20404]

Mr. Freeman: The amendments which I announced on 1 March, Official Report column 771, and which take effect from 1 June are made, for the home civil service under the Minister's powers in the Civil Service Order in Council 1995, and, in Northern Ireland, under the Civil Service (Northern Ireland) Order 1986. The amendments are not to the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order.

No discussions about the changes were held with Commonwealth Governments or with the Republic of Ireland. They were notified of the changes by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the day before the announcement was made.

No estimate has been made of the number of Commonwealth and of Republic of Ireland citizens currently employed in the Civil Service. This information is not recorded.

Whether the children of Commonwealth and of Republic of Ireland citizens who are currently employed in the civil service will be eligible for employment in the civil service, will depend, as now, on the nature of the post concerned and the nationality of the individual at the time of the application.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Board

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the members of the Legal Aid Board were last appointed or reappointed; and how many complaints he has had about the boards or their individual members since the start of 1995. [19645]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The current members of the Legal Aid Board, with their most recent dates of appointment or reappointment, are as follows:

Sir Tim Chessels (Chairman): 4 May 1995
Fred Collins: 1 April 1995
John Crosby: 5 April 1994
Jean Dunkley: 2 May 1994
Colin George: 3 May 1994
Kate Markus: 1 March 1993
Steve Orchard: 1 January 1994
Diana Payne: 2 May 1994
Penelope Pearce: 1 July 1993
George Pulman: 1 March 1993
David Sinker: 2 May 1994
Andrew Thomas 1 April 1993

My predecessor and I have received numerous letters about the operations of the Legal Aid Board since January 1995. A number of these have been critical of aspects of the board's work.

In addition, there are 1,183 lawyers serving on the 13 Legal Aid Board area committees, which hear appeals on various legal aid matters. The appointment or reappointment of their members is the responsibility of the Legal Aid Board.

Court of Protection

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the practice rules relating to the Court of Protection were last revised; and if he will make a statement. [20073]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Public Trust Office is best placed to provide an answer. I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Julia Lomas to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 14 March 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 7 March 1996, asking when the practice rules relating to the Court of Protection were last revised.

The Court of Protection Rules and the Court of Protection [Enduring Powers of Attorney Rules] were last revised in 1994. They were made on 29 November 1994, laid before Parliament on 1 December 1994 and came into effect on 22 December 1994.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Commonwealth Scholarships

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Commonwealth scholarships were funded by the Government in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and what is the planned number for 1996–97. [20045]

Mr. Hanley: A total of 7,144 Commonwealth students were given awards to study and train in the UK in 1994–95. Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available but are likely to be broadly similar.

The number of scholarships is likely to fall in 1996–97 due to reductions in the various budgets from which awards are funded and policy changes to improve the effectiveness of training within the UK's bilateral country aid projects.

DEFENCE

Works of Art

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made since the start of the National Audit Office inquiry into the management of works of art with the recovery of those works of art reported to be missing or stolen. [20566]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since the start of the National Audit Office study in January 1995, one work of art has been recovered, in addition to the 15 that had been found before the study began. Two works of art listed as missing by the Government art collection were found to be duplicate records of works that were not missing. Four works recorded as missing by the Government art collection were found to have been returned to their lender.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the works of art belonging to the departmental art collection which are considered missing or stolen; [20561]

(2) if he will list the works of art on loan from the Government art collection that are considered missing or stolen. [20565]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I am placing the information requested in the Library of the House.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what actions he has taken to safeguard works of art loaned to his Department. [20755]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Works of art are safeguarded by securing the rooms in which they hang, asking the staff who occupy those rooms to verify that the works are safe and by inspections by staff responsible for works of art.

Royal Navy (Female Members)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many female members of the Royal Navy, having served one tour on a ship at sea, have volunteered for a second tour. [20516]

Mr. Soames: Female members of the Royal Navy—in common with their male counterparts—do not volunteer for tours on a ship at sea; they are required to go to sea according to the exigencies of the service. To determine how many women have served at sea for two or more tours is not possible without incurring disproportionate costs.

Army Medical Staff

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of medical staff required by the Army in conflict are reservists; and how many of these posts are manned. [20517]

Mr. Soames: The proportion of medical personnel required by the Army in conflict, who are ex-Regular reservists or members of the Territorial Army, and the number of posts to be filled by them, will depend on the nature of the operations at the time.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the number of medical staff required for each brigade in a conflict. [20518]

Mr. Soames: Depending on the size of a brigade, the number of medical personnel required varies between 199 and 206.

Female Soldiers (Bosnia)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many female soldiers have returned early from service in Bosnia because of pregnancy; and what this figure is as a percentage of the female soldiers serving in Bosnia. [20519]

Mr. Soames: My Department has no record of any female soldier returning early from service in Bosnia because of pregnancy.

Air Training Corps

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the Air Training Corps concerning the availability of surplus uniforms for its use; and what is his policy on the provision of surplus uniforms for use by the Air Training Corps. [20749]

Mr. Soames: No representations on this matter have been made by the Air Training Corps. It is the policy of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency that any part-worn or superseded items of uniform clothing are made available to cadet organisations before disposal. In addition, those Royal Air Force units which parent Air Training Corps squadrons are required to consider the needs of these squadrons before disposing of surplus uniform items.

Armed Forces (Manpower)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the (a) trained and (b) untrained strength of (i) the Army, (ii) the RAF and (iii) the Royal Navy at (1) 1 April 1996 and (2) 1 April 1997 under his Department's current plans. [20751]

Mr. Soames: The forecast trained and untrained strengths for the services at the specified dates are as follows:

Army

	Trained	Untrained
1 April 1996	104,000	8,000
1 April 1997	101,000	10,000

These figures include forecast Gurkha strengths, but exclude the Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service Force).

Royal Air Force

	Trained	Untrained
1 April 1996	62,700	2,250
1 April 1997	54,700	2,700

Royal Navy

	Trained	Untrained
1 April 1996	45,000	3,000
1 April 1997	42,000	4,000

These figures include the Royal Marines and Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current shortfall in manpower for the Army; what action he has taken to reduce this shortfall; and if he will make a statement. [20752]

Mr. Soames: The trained strength of the Army is expected to be below its establishment by around 3,000 personnel as at 1 April 1996. The shortfall is primarily due to poor recruitment and retention.

A number of measures have been introduced to make good the shortfall. These include the payment of a retention bonus to soldiers in those arms with the greatest deficits who choose to serve beyond the minimum three-year commitment. A bounty has also been offered to suitable ex-Royal Artillery, Royal Armoured Corps and Infantry soldiers who left in the last three years and who are below the age of 30 who accepted an invitation to re-enlist. A further bounty has been offered to soldiers who persuade friends to enlist, and we have substantially increased the recruiting and advertising budget. A revised programme for the closure of Army careers offices has been agreed, coupled with an initiative, launched in January, to recruit through the Employment Service network. In addition, some 400 Gurkhas who would otherwise have been made redundant will be retained for three years from 1977.

Next month we are holding a conference on "Armed Forces recruiting in the 21st Century", to which members of the careers service and the Employment Service throughout the UK have been invited, with the aim of developing ways of working together to attract the young people the armed forces need.

Trident Programme

Sir Jim Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme; and if he will make a statement. [21359]

Mr. Portillo: The current estimate of the total project cost of the Trident programme, with all expenditure, including payments already made, brought up to current prices and the exchange rate assumed in the long term costing of the defence programme is £12,153 million. If payments already made are expressed at the prices and exchange rates actually incurred, with future spend on constant bases, the equivalent estimate is now £9,926 million. Expenditure on the Trident programme to 31 October 1995 represented some 83 per cent. of the latter estimate.

The revised estimate of £12,153 million represents an increase in cash terms of £471 million. After allowing for the effects of inflation and exchange rate variations there is a real cost increase of £112 million, or less than 1 per cent. Despite this variation since last year, the programme continues to show an overall reduction in real terms on its original 1982 estimate. This reduction, including the savings resulting from the decision to process missiles at the United States facility at King's Bay Georgia now stands at some £3.4 billion.

The proportion of the estimate for work undertaken in the United Kingdom has increased from 71 per cent. to 72 per cent. reflecting the effects of the change in exchange rate, price base and volume changes in the year.

I am pleased to confirm that HMS Victorious, the second of the four planned Vanguard class submarines, entered service on time at the end of last year and is now operational. The remainder of the Trident submarine programme is also still on schedule. I am, as in previous years, sending to the Chairmen of the Public Accounts Committee and of the Select Committee on Defence a more detailed report on the programme. I am also placing a copy of this report in the Library of the House.

Ethnic Minorities

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policies he has introduced to increase the number of ethnic minorities in the armed forces. [20753]

Mr. Soames: The services are committed to a range of measures to increase ethnic minority recruitment. These include increased use of recruiters from an ethnic minority background, better representation of ethnic minority service personnel in recruiting literature, special training for recruiters, production of brochures in ethnic minority languages to target parents, development of contacts with ethnic minority communities and advertising in the ethnic minority press and on local radio.

Each of the services' recruiting organisations has an officer responsible for making contact with ethnic minority organisations to ascertain the best approach to take to aid the recruitment of ethnic minorities.

In addition, we have appointed an independent consultant, the Office for Public Management, to undertake a review of existing service and civilian equal opportunities policies and employment initiatives for ethnic minority groups and recommend any improvements.

Otterburn Training Range

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on recent developments in respect of his Department's plans to enlarge the Otterburn training range. [20805]

Mr. Soames: My Department's proposals are not to enlarge Otterburn training area, which lies largely within the Northumberland national park, but to provide additional infrastructure to accommodate essential AS90 and multiple-launch rocket system training. My officials have been in discussion with the Northumberland national park authority for over two years about these proposals, with the aim of achieving an acceptable balance between my Department's training requirements and environmental concerns. While much progress has been made in this direction, I was very disappointed to learn that, at its meeting on 11 March, the national park authority resolved to object to my Department's proposals unless further scheme changes and environmental balancing measures were forthcoming. This is the first occasion that the national park authority has made its position expressly clear about each individual element of the scheme and accompanying balancing package.

It is difficult to see how these further measures could be accommodated, given that my Department's proposals represent the minimum infrastructure requirements for AS90-MLRS training.

My officials are, nevertheless, now considering whether it will be possible to meet the further concerns which have now been expressed by the national park authority, and it is my intention that a statement of my Department's position should be prepared for submission to the policy and resources committee of Northumberland county council when it meets on 25 April, prior to final determination by the full county council on 15 May 1996.

Service Boarding Scheme

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many children who received support through the service boarding scheme attend (a) Finsborough school, Suffolk, (b) Quantock school, Somerset, (c) Rodney school, Nottingham and (d) Lime House school, Cumbria; and how much each school received in each of years (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94, (iii) 1994–95 and (iv) 1995–96. [20793]

Mr. Soames: In the case of Quantock school, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 478.

As at June 1995 the number of children who received support through the service boarding school allowance scheme, attending the other three schools in question, were:

Finsborough School: 123

Rodney School: 26

Lime House School: 90

The information on how much each school has received during the last four academic years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Racism

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many incidents of racism have been investigated by his Department in each of the last five years; [20754]

(2) what measures his Department uses to monitor racism in the armed forces. [20804]

Mr. Soames: The armed forces are fully integrated, non-discriminatory organisations, subject to the Race Relations Act 1976. It has been made clear throughout the services that racial abuse or discrimination of any sort will not be tolerated.

The three services monitor complaints involving a racial element; details of numbers of recorded cases are:

No cases have been recorded in the Royal Navy since the central recording of these complaints began in February 1995.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or are otherwise unaccounted for from the former Department for Education and its agencies in each of the past five years, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [19413]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table details the cost and number of items of equipment which were recorded as stolen or unaccounted for during each financial year from 1991–92 to 1995–96. Of the items recorded during this period, only one falls into the valuation category of £5,000 or more. This is a dispatch van, stolen in January 1996 and not yet recovered.

School Premises

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations she received from (a) local education authorities, (b) school governors and (c) organisations representing school governors regarding the removal of minimum space requirements for teaching accommodation and recreation space during the consultation on the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981; and if she will make a statement; [20569]

(2) what plans she has to place the responses to (a) the five-year review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 and (b) the consultation on School Premises Regulations 1996 in the Library; [20568]

(3) what representations she received on (a) class size and (b) the condition of school buildings by local education authorities or governors during the consultation on the Education (School Premises) Regulations in 1995. [20571]

Mrs. Gillan: The review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 was an internal one. Its conclusions were reported to Ministers by officials and were not intended for publication.

A summary of the response to last year's consultation has been placed in the Library of the House.

The new regulations take account of many specific suggestions from consultees. Few, if any, responses specifically mention the condition of school buildings. A number of consultees made the incorrect assumptions that there is a link between the removal of minimum teaching and recreation areas and increased class sizes or overcrowding and that, once the new regulations come into force, there will be no yardsticks for assessing new and existing buildings.

In fact, governors and local education authorities will continue to have exactly the same control over admissions as they do now, and new guidance documents to be published by the Department in the summer will be up to date and wide reaching in scope.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place a copy of the Department's action plan responding to the recent efficiency scrutiny into the TEC contract and management fee in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [21189]

Mr. Paice: A copy of the action plan that the Department has produced in response to the findings of the scrutiny has been placed in the Library. A copy has also been sent to all TECs.

The efficiency scrutiny was a thorough and timely piece of work which should help the Department to reduce the administrative burden on TECs. We accept the vast majority of its recommendations. A number have already been implemented.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Executive Agencies

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions in each of the past five years Ministers in her Department have passed (a) hon. Members' letters and (b) hon. Members' questions to agencies for response; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of letters and questions received. [19428]

Mr. Sproat: The information could be extracted in the form requested only at disproportionate cost.

National Lottery

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list for each region and by distributing body (a) the number of projects that have received lottery funding and (b) the amount. [20380]

Mr. Sproat: A report on the distribution of national lottery proceeds is placed in the Library of the House each month which includes information in the format requested. The February edition will be placed in the Library of the House in the coming week.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which projects in Nottinghamshire have benefited from lottery funding; and what sums they have received. [20378]

Mr. Sproat: To date, 60 awards totalling £8.9 million have been made to organisations in Nottinghamshire. They are:

TREASURY

Close Companies

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals declared themselves close company men for the purposes of tax relief in each of the last three years. [18172]

Mr. Jack: Corporation tax records held centrally do not enable us to identify close companies or those with only one individual associate.

Former British Rail Employees (Travel Passes)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Inland Revenue calculates the personal tax liability for railway status travel passes and staff travelcards issued to former British Rail employees who now work for private railway companies; what estimate he has made of the revenue which will be raised in a full tax year as a result of tax deductions for these travel passes and cards; and what tax deductions were made for these passes and cards when issued by British Rail to its own employees. [19608]

Mr. Jack: Employees are generally liable to tax on vouchers for free or cheap travel. The taxable benefit is the cost to the employer of providing the voucher. However, there is statutory exemption from the tax charge for British Rail employees earning less than £8,500 per year. This exemption continues for people who were employed by British Rail on 11 January 1994, even if as a result of the Railways Act they are transferred to Railtrack, a train operating company, or certain other successor bodies which are engaged in the railway industry.

No estimate exist of the amounts of revenue raised, now or in the past, in connection with the issue of travel passes and cards.

Smuggling

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many smuggling operations have been broken up in each year since 1987; and what estimate he has made of the extent of smuggling. [19857]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No statistics are available for years prior to 1990. The number of smuggling organisations which have been broken up as a result of the work of the Customs and Excise investigation division in each year since then is as follows:

1990–91: 180

1991–92: 183

1992–93: 178

1993–94: 188

1994–95: 172

There are too many uncertainties to form any reliable estimate of the extent of smuggling of prohibited or restricted goods. Customs and Excise is at present working with the drinks and tobacco industries to improve estimates of the extent of smuggling of excise duty goods.

EU Budget

Mr. Radice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the net payments made to the European Union budget by the 12 member states in 1994, on a per capita basis. [20464]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The table sets out the figures. These are drawn from the European Court of Auditors' calculations of member states' total financial contributions to and receipts from the European budget published in the "Annual Report covering the financial year 1994". Net payments figures show the balance from the two sides of the budget, by deducting total receipts from the gross contribution for each member state. A minus sign therefore indicates that a member state receives more from the EU budget than it pays.

The figures for net payments can only be indicative because the Court of Auditors does not allocate all Community spending by member states. In particular, administrative spending in Belgium is not fully attributed. In addition, net payments can vary significantly from year to year owing to adjustments in own resource payments and fluctuations in receipts.

The Commission has committed itself to provide a detailed breakdown of member states' receipts from the Community budget on an annual basis once the new own resources decision comes into force. This, together with Commission figures on member states' gross contributions, should help provide us with more information about member states' net payments.

Net payments to the EU budget in 1994 (in ecu per head)

Germany	167.7
Netherlands	119.6
France	45.4
Italy	44.5
Belgium	30.6
UK	19.9
Denmark	–38.2
Spain	–79.7
Portugal	–184.5
Greece	–370.4
Ireland	–486.7
Luxembourg	–634.3

These figures are net of the UK's abatement.

Income Tax

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average rate of income tax in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987, (d) 1992 and (e) the latest year for which figures are available for those taxpayers on (a) half average personal income, (b) average personal income and (c) twice average personal income. [20345]

Mr. Jack: Standard comparisons are based on calculating income tax liabilities with incomes at multiples of full-time male average earnings—adult rates, all occupations. These are given in tables 13.6a to 13.6c of the 1995–96 tax benefit reference manual, a copy of which can be found in the Library.

Estimates for 1996–97 are given in the table.

	Multiple of average earnings[1]
	0.5	1	2
Single person	13.7	18.9	26.1
One earner married couple with no children	11.1	17.6	25.5
One earner married with two children under 11[2]	1.3	12.6	23.0

[1] Full time males, adult rates, all occupations.

[2] Net of child benefit.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on employment of the measures necessary to meet the budget deficit criteria for membership of the European monetary union. [20336]

Mr. Waldegrave: None. It is in any case the Government's objective to bring the public sector borrowing requirement back towards balance over the medium term. The achievement of sound public finances is a necessary condition for a sustained increase in employment.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the most recent recommendations made by the European monetary committee on the progress of the United Kingdom towards achieving the Maastricht convergence criteria for economic and monetary union. [20597]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Article 109c of the treaty on European Union explains the role of the monetary committee in preparing the work of the Council. The most recent Council recommendation on the progress of the UK towards achieving the Maastricht convergence criteria was the recommendation of 12 July 1995 with a view to bringing an end to the situation of an excessive deficit in the UK.

Exports (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total value of exports from Wales in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [20648]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The location of the business enterprise making an export is not held by HM Customs and Excise; only the address registered for VAT purposes is available which may be at a different location within the UK. Consequently regional analyses of the trade statistics are not produced, and information relating to the value of exports by business enterprises located in Wales is not available.

Scott Inquiry

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons and at what level in his Department were involved in considering the Government's response to the report of the Scott inquiry. [16560]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 22 February 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 February, Official Report, columns 239–40.

Building Societies Review

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish his building societies review; and if he will make a statement. [18563]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 4 March 1996]: I hope to publish a draft Building Societies Bill on Monday 18 March, for three months' consultation.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20089]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The School Teachers Review Body has a statutory base. Its reports, containing its recommendations to the Government, are published under a statutory requirement and laid before Parliament. Similarly, the other pay review bodies'—covering the armed forces; doctors and dentists; nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine; and senior salaries—recommendations are published and laid before Parliament, but not under any specific statutory requirement.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meeting and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20106]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The pay review bodies take evidence from the interested parties. The School Teachers Review Body does so under a statutory requirement. The other pay review bodies do so voluntarily.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the discrepancy between the originating capital debt allocated to the Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospitals national health service trust in SI No. 350 and that set out in the Treasury minute on dissolution and reconfiguration of certain national health service trusts. [20329]

Mr. Horam: I have been asked to reply.

The amount of originating capital debt allocated to the Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospitals national health service trust represents the excess of the valuation of the assets over the liabilities which were transferred to it on, or in connection with, its establishment. The figure in SI No. 350—£135,395,656 split evenly between public dividend capital and interest-bearing initial loan—was arrived at by aggregating the values of land and buildings provided by the district valuer, the values of equipment taken from the asset registers and the values of debtors and creditors taken from the audited books of account of the two dissolved trusts. These values were certified by auditors appointed by the Audit Commission prior to the setting of the OCD of the new trust.

The figures contained in the departmental minute on the dissolution and reconfiguration of certain NHS trusts which was presented by the Treasury on 20 February 1996 are the liabilities outstanding to the Consolidated Fund at 1 April 1995 in respect of the OCD and further long-term loans issued by the Secretary of State for Health to Royal Liverpool University Hospital NHS trust and Broadgreen Hospital NHS trust before their dissolution. These liabilities, which were transferred to Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospitals national health service trust, were left out of account in determining the latter's net assets for the purposes of SI No. 350.

The total of £114,112,928 proposed to be remitted comprises:

Royal Liverpool Hospital Trust
OCD—Initial loan	34,112,288
OCD—PDC	39,665,451
Further borrowing	7,531,600
Total	81,309,339

Broadgreen Hospital NHS Trust
OCD—Initial loan	15,042,059
OCD—PDC	17,491,230
Further borrowing	270,300
Total	32,803,589

There need not be any direct relationship between the public debt of a dissolving trust or trusts and the OCD of any successor body. The former arises as a result of the OCD set at some point in the past, based on net asset values at that time, and subsequently changes as a result of principal repayments and new borrowing. The latter is based on the net asset values at current valuation on the date of a trust's establishment.

Mrs. Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy not to implement the Treasury minute on the dissolution and reconfiguration of certain national health service trusts—remission of outstanding debt, until he has published an explanation of the calculations of the basis contained therein. [20355]

Mr. Jack: The explanation is as follows:

The amounts totalling £448,876,543 which are proposed for remission are the outstanding liabilities to the Consolidated Fund as at 31 March 1995 of seven NHS trusts which were dissolved on 1 April 1995. These liabilities are in respect of their outstanding originating capital debt, which is deemed under section 9(3) of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 to have been issued out of moneys provided by Parliament, and their further borrowings and any issues of public dividend capital from the Secretary of State for Health which have been paid out of moneys provided by Parliament.

The figure of £494,027,365 is the total originating capital debt of the five new trusts, which were established on 1 April 1995 from mergers of the dissolved trusts with each other or with directly managed unit. The trusts concerned are listed in paragraph 7 of the minute, and their individual originating capital debt is specified in SI 350. In accordance with section 9(1) of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, each new trust's originating capital debt represents the excess of the valuation of the assets over the valuation of the liabilities transferred to it on or in connection with its establishment.

The difference between the newly created capital debt and the amounts being written off reflects differences in composition and valuation between the net assets of the new trusts and those of the dissolved trusts concerned.

PRIME MINISTER

Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the minute circulated on 1 August 1990 of the meeting chaired by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 19 July 1990 in regard to the changing of the 1985 Howe guidelines concerning the sale of goods to Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [20331]

The Prime Minister: This document was submitted as evidence to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry. I understand that Sir Richard Scott proposes to publish as soon as possible any documents which he considers relevant to his report, consistent with his procedures.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 14 March. [19239]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

House of Commons Notepaper

Mr. Morgan: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, (1) what representations he has had concerning the die-stamping of House of Commons notepaper with the official stamp and portcullis crest by Wilprint Ltd. since October 1995; [20852]

(2) when Wilprint Ltd. won the contract for die-stamping the official stamp and portcullis crest on the notepaper of the House; and what is the duration of the contract. [20853]

Mr. Beith: I have received one representation from the hon. Member himself. Her Majesty's Stationery Office is, of course, responsible for contracts with individual firms, but I can tell the hon. Member that the contract for die-stamping House of Commons stationery was awarded by HMSO to Wilprint Ltd. in February 1995 after competitive tender. The contract will cease in October 1996.

ENVIRONMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he has computed the figure of 80 per cent. in determining what percentage of local authority costs in meeting the needs of asylum seekers should be met by Her Majesty's Government, following the withdrawal of social security benefits. [20275]

Mr. Curry: The Government consider that it is a reasonable basis for making additional resources available to local authorities in England for this purpose for 1995–96 and 1996–97.

North Lincolnshire Authority

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to provide additional financial assistance to North Lincolnshire authority similar to that which has been announced for Scottish unitary authorities; and if he will make a statement. [19985]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has already provided that some £2.182 million is to be paid to North Lincolnshire under section 88A of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 to recompense North Lincolnshire district council for the income forgone as a consequence of the transitional reduction of council taxes under the Local Government Changes for England (Council Tax) (Transitional Reduction) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No. 176 as amended by SI 1996 No. 333).

We have no plans to make further assistance available.

Energy Saving Trust

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of funding is projected for the current financial year and each financial year to the year 2000 for the Energy Saving Trust from (a) gas consumers, (b) electricity consumers and (c) other private sector sources. [20395]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 4, which outlined the Government's proposed funding of the Energy Saving Trust. The trust is an independent company and non-Government funding is a matter for the trust.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 102, if he will list the steps taken to ensure full compliance with the Environmental Protection (Applications, Appeals and Registers) Regulations 1991 in respect of the recent variation of the authorisation to burn secondary liquid fuel granted to Castle Cement under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. [20348]

Mr. Clappison: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution issued the variation to Castle Cement on 23 January 1996 under section 10 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and followed all the requirements set out in this and in part II of schedule 1 to the Act, which sets out how variations are to be treated. The inspectorate treated the variation as substantial for the purposes of section 10 and consulted all those prescribed in SI 507. The inspectorate put copies of all notices and other papers as required by the Act on the public registers and carefully considered all the comments it received both from statutory consultees and elsewhere before taking its decision.

Local Authorities (Sale of Interests)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environmental if he will list the local authorities which have sold their interests in (a) a municipal bus company, (b) crematoria and (c) airports in the current year to date. [20454]

Sir Paul Beresford: To date, in the financial year 1995–96 no local authorities have sold their interests in municipal bus companies. Pendle borough council hopes to complete the sale of its share in the Burnley and Pendle Bus Company soon. Two airport sales have been completed in this period. Dorset county council and Bournemouth borough council sold their interests in Bournemouth International Airport plc to National Express. Mid, South and West Glamorgan councils sold their interests in Cardiff International Airport Ltd. to TBI, a local company. Information on the sale of crematoria has not been collected centrally. In September 1996–97 we propose to request information on the sale of assets which have been subject to targeted relaxations in the amount required to be set aside under the capital finance system. Bus companies, crematoria and airports are among these.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by rank order the debt of each local authority expressed as a money sum per head of population. [20745]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have today placed the information requested in the Library of the House.

CITES Regulations

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that annexe D of the draft Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species regulation contains a fully representative list of species. [20758]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is playing full part in the negotiations with other member states in consultation with our scientific advisors at the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and the royal botanic gardens, Kew.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many questions were tabled to his Department in each Session since 1987–88; how many were not answered on the grounds of disproportionate cost; what percentage of the total number of questions this represented; how many were not answered on the grounds that the information was not centrally available; and what percentage of the total number of questions this represented. [21149]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will be providing guidance on the establishment of management schemes for special areas of conservation under the EC habitats directive. [21192]

Mr. Clappison: The Government are undertaking public consultation on a draft guide to implementing the EC habitats directive in the marine environment. Developed by a topic group of the Department of the Environment's coastal forum, the guide will be aimed at those authorities who would be responsible for setting up management schemes on sites covered by the EC habitats directive.

The draft document is also a guide to the regulations which implement the habitats directive in Great Britain—the Conservation (Natural Habitats, etc.) Regulations 1994. The guide sets out the legal obligations and duties with regard to European marine sites.

Like the habitats directive, the guide underlines the principle of sustainable development. The aim is to ensure that human activities are undertaken in ways that do not threaten the nature conservation interest and, wherever possible support it.

The guidance gives advice on the ways in which organisations responsible for aspects of the marine environment can work together to achieve conservation through co-operation. The importance of widespread consultation is also a principal theme in the draft guide.

Comments on the draft guidance are invited by 26 April 1996.

Development Plans

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to amend the system of development plans prepared under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990; and if he will make a statement. [21193]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Westbury (Mr. Faber) by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 13 March 1996, Official Report, column 620.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his decisions on the recommendations made to him by the Local Government Commission on 19 December 1995, following its review of the structure of 21 districts in England. [21404]

Mr. Gummer: I can now announce my decisions on the recommendations made by the Local Government Commission following its review of the structure of 21 districts. In reaching these decisions I have considered the commission's report and the representations which I have received. I have also take account of the estimates of transitional and on-going costs, and the viability of the structures which will result—both the unitary authorities and the remaining two-tier arrangements. In each case, I am satisfied that on balance my decision will best reflect the identities and interests of local communities and will best secure effective and convenient local government.

I am accepting the commission's recommendations that there should be no structural change in Basildon, Broxtowe, Dartford, Exeter, Gedling, Gloucester, Gravesham, Huntingdonshire, Northampton, Norwich, Rushcliffe and Spelthorne. I am satisfied that the case for a single tier of local government has been properly considered; I have no plans to direct the commission to carry out any further reviews of local government structure. Local authorities in all areas where there is no structural change now need to concentrate on developing and improving the delivery of services within the existing system. In most cases, local authorities have given undertakings on this; however, I shall not hesitate to intervene if it appears that those undertakings to work together are not being fulfilled.

The commission made recommendations for unitary authorities to be created in nine of the districts reviewed. I have decided to accept their recommendations for the reasons set out.

Blackburn

I have decided to accept the commission's recommendation that there should be a unitary authority for Blackburn.

As a former county borough it has a history of unitary local government. There is good evidence that Blackburn would operate effectively as a unitary authority. There is strong local identification with the two towns of Blackburn and Darwen within the borough, and support for unitary status. With a population of 138,300 the borough would be able to provide the full range of services, and its economic future could, I believe, be more effectively addressed by a strong unitary authority.

Blackpool

I also accept that Blackpool should be a unitary authority. It too is a former county borough. Its separate identity from the rest of Lancashire is well defined and is both local and national. Blackpool has clear and distinctive socio-economic problems, and tourism brings additional service pressure not shared by adjacent districts. Local residents identify strongly with the town. With a population of 152,100 it would be able to provide the full range of services. I have therefore concluded that a unitary authority would be viable and better able to address the needs and aspirations of local residents.

I am satisfied that, without Blackburn and Blackpool, Lancashire county council would be of sufficient size and strength to be viable, and to readjust its service provision to operate with no loss in cost-effectiveness.

Gillingham and Rochester upon Medway

In north-west Kent, I have concluded that the balance of evidence lies in favour of accepting the commission's recommendations; that there should be a joint unitary Gillingham and Rochester upon Medway but that Dartford and Gravesham should remain within the current structure of local government.

The case for joining the Medway towns in one unitary authority is strong. It is a significant urban area, one of the largest in the south-east outside London, with a population in excess of 240,000. The two boroughs form a continuous conurbation with strong cross-community interests and common physical and economic interests. Uniting the two authorities would provide a clearer focus and impetus to the Medway area and its size would ensure that the new authority would be well able to deliver the full range of local services. Kent county council would still be one of the largest county councils in England.

The commission, however, judged that on balance the case for Dartford and Gravesham was not so strong and had not been made out. It felt that the more diverse characters of the two districts along with the lack of wider support, particularly in Gravesham, would make a joint unitary authority more difficult to establish. I strongly endorse the commission's conclusion that all the local authorities concerned should support and promote a development partnership for the area to manage change and growth. I shall not hesitate to intervene if it appears that those undertakings to work together are not being fulfilled.

Halton

I accept the commission's recommendation that Halton should become a unitary authority. It has an internal cohesion and a high level of self-sufficiency with most residents staying within the borough for shoping, work and leisure. It has a socio-economic profile more akin to that of neighbouring metropolitan areas and is quite distinct from the rest of the county. Both Runcorn as a new town and Widnes as a town expansion scheme have experienced substantial inward migration from Merseyside in the past 25 years, contributing to the relatively low level of community identity with Cheshire.

The authority is well placed to forge alliances and co-operative arrangements with neighbouring unitary authorities. There would be major advantages for Halton in being able to adopt a more locally focused approach to the co-ordination of services within an area which has a high level of deprivation and requires substantial regeneration.

Warrington

Also in Cheshire, I accept that Warrington should also become a unitary authority. As a large maturing new town, it has the size, with a population of 187,000, and the experience—as a county borough prior to 1974—to suggest that it would be well placed to deliver the full range of local authority services. It has grown rapidly since its designation as a new town, emphasising its separateness from the rest of Cheshire. Warrington itself is the main focus for the majority of residents in the borough.

I am satisfied that, without Halton and Warrington, Cheshire county council would remain of sufficient size, with a population of 665,300 to deliver county services. Without these two very urban and quite distinct areas, Cheshire county council would be able to focus more effectively on the remaining, more rural, county area.

Peterborough

I accept that Peterborough should become a unitary authority. The city area has a long history of being distinct from the rest of Cambridgeshire. It is also geographically marginal, situated on the edge of the county. It has a strategic importance with respect to communications, being situated on the main east coast railway link and on two major roads.

It is at the heart of an area covered by the greater Peterborough partnership, and is a major employment and retailing centre serving areas beyond the city. Its sphere of influence extends beyond the boundaries of the county. Peterborough has experienced rapid growth as a new town, and its highly urban character make it distinct from the rest of the county. It has the size, with 158,300 population on present boundaries, to be capable of delivering a full range of services, and unitary status would enable it to focus on its specific urban needs.

The remaining county would be more coherent without the highly urban Peterborough, and will be of sufficient size to be viable. It will, however, be important for the whole area that the county council and the unitary Peterborough address the issue of revised service arrangements, and that the existing economic development partnerships involving the various agencies, local authorities and the private sector are maintained, in order to maintain the quality of service delivery.

Thurrock

I have decided to accept the commission's recommendation that there should be a unitary authority for Thurrock. Thurrock has a community identity which is distinct from the rest of Essex. Its strategic importance extends beyond the county boundary, a result of its location on the periphery of London and the presence of the Lakeside complex. There is good support from residents and local organisations for change and, with a population of 131,000, I believe that Thurrock would be able to provide the full range of local government services.

I am satisfied that Essex—without Thurrock and Southend, which is also to become a unitary authority—would still be large enough for the county council to be a viable and cost-effective provider of services for the rest of the county.

The Wrekin

In Shropshire, I have decided that The Wrekin should become a unitary authority. It has a good case for unitary status on the grounds of both community identity and convenient and effective local government within the district.

The Wrekin has a character which is distinct from the rest of Shropshire, founded in its industrial history and the more recent development of Telford new town. The commission found that the district is largely self-contained for employment and leisure, that there are strong links between Telford and the rural part of the district, and that the population looks more towards the west midlands conurbation than to the rest of Shropshire.

I believe that unitary local government would help The Wrekin to develop its full potential as a major growth point for the west midlands. The benefits would extend beyond the authority's boundaries to the rest of the area. With a growing population, currently some 143,000, and a good infrastructure, I consider that a unitary council would be capable of delivering the full range of local authority services.

I am, however, mindful of the concerns which have been expressed about the impact of a unitary authority on the rest of Shropshire. I look to the new unitary authority to co-operate with Shropshire county council and the neighbouring districts to ensure that the economic and other benefits of unitary local government in The Wrekin are felt throughout the county.

Non-structural recommendations

Where I have accepted the commission's recommendations for structural change, I also propose to accept its recommendations for associated changes.

On strategic land use and planning, I accept the recommendations that the unitary authorities in Halton, Warrington and Thurrock should be enabled to prepare unitary development plans for their areas. I consider that unitary development plans offer the best way forward for the planning in these areas which are adjacent to metropolitan areas which already prepare unitary development plans.

In the other areas which will gain unitary status, I accept the commission's recommendation that the new unitary authorities should work jointly with the county council to maintain a joint structure plan for the combined area.

In these areas, the commission's recommendation provides for alternative approaches to minerals and waste local planning. It recommends that these planning responsibilities should be discharged through joint arrangements with the county council, but that the unitary authorities should be authorised to include such detailed policies in their local plans, if that would secure greater efficiency without prejudicing the county-wide strategic policy. Section 101 of the Local Government Act 1972 would enable joint arrangements to happen where they suit local circumstances. On the other hand, the joint structure plan wold include strategic policies for minerals and waste planning while the unitary authorities' local plans must be in general conformity with the structure plan; this would ensure that any detailed minerals and waste policies included in those local plans did not prejudice the jointly prepared strategic policies. I therefore accept both the alternative approaches. I agree that these recommendations offer the best way forward for planning in these areas.

I accept the commission's recommendations on the police, fire, probation and magistrates courts services in the unitary authorities.

The commission also made a number of recommendations for boundary and electoral changes. One, in the Basildon area, would have involved a particularly large transfer of population between Basildon, Brentwood and Rochford. This was first put forward in 1994 by the commission, following its review of Essex. Despite some local support, I consider that the proposals need further examination, especially with regard to the financial consequences. I am not satisfied that the commission was able to do this within the timing constraints on the district reviews. I therefore intend to direct the commission to look again at this matter, and at other boundaries in Essex, when it conducts its periodic electoral review of the county.

The commission also recommended a number of other smaller changes involving transfers of land between Huntingdonshire and Peterborough in the area of the southern township development. Given the southern township's strategic relationship with Peterborough, and the need to facilitate effective planning and service provision there, I am satisfied that this boundary change is desirable, and I accept the commission's recommended changes. I am also provisionally accepting the recommended changes to the warding in Peterborough, which reflect the proposed boundary change, although, as I mention below, I shall be directing the commission to carry out an electoral review of the city.

The recommended warding change in Gloucester city will rectify the under-representation in a number of the existing wards, and even out councillor to elector ratios; I accept this recommendation. The recommended boundary change in Surrey between Spelthorne and Runnymede districts takes account of changes in the course of the River Thames; former islands would be part of the district whose area they now join, thereby easing service delivery. I accept this recommendation also.

This concludes the commission's current review of the structure of local government in England, and I am grateful for its thorough and expeditious work. As I foreshadowed on 5 March, I shall be directing the commission to undertake immediate reviews of the electoral arrangements in the areas which will acquire unitary status as a result of my decisions today. Unlike the earlier county reviews, the commission did not have time in these district reviews to consider the electoral arrangements in detail. There remains considerable variation in the councillor to elector ratios in many of these areas, and I am concerned that suitable electoral arrangements are in place in time for all out elections to the unitary authorities.

We shall be consulting very shortly on draft orders to give effect to the decisions I have announced today, with a view to making the orders before the summer recess.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a list of all overseas visits make by all Ministers of his Department since 1990, including (a) details of the places visited and brief reasons for the visits, (b) details of the size, composition and cost to public funds of the delegation and (c) the names of non-ministerial members of each delegation and the capacity in which each was present.

[17485]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 1 March 1996]: I have arranged for the available information about overseas visits to be placed in the Library. Providing the other information about other overseas visits that the hon. Member requests would involve disproportionate costs. I have assumed that the hon. Member does not include visits within the European Union in this category.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Telecommunications (Key Escrow)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 229, in respect of key escrow services, who constitutes the network of trusted third parties. [20466]

Mr. Ian Taylor: As stated in my previous answer, discussions are still taking place. Nevertheless, we would expect to see an international market demand for TTP services, and as such would envisage commercial organisations meeting them.

Employment Rights Legislation

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those sections of the (a) Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978, (b) Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 and (c) Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993, the implementation of which are the responsibility of (i) the Department of Trade and Industry, (ii) the Department for Education and Employment and (iii) other Government Departments, specifying which. [20339]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I shall write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Energy from Waste Plants

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the study commissioned by his Department from the Water Research Council into the characteristics of ash from energy from waste plants; what advice he has received on the nature of this ash, and its place in the national waste classification system; if it is his Department's policy to support energy from waste plants; and if he will make a statement. [20462]

Mr. Page: The Department of Trade and Industry commissioned the Water Research Council to report on the properties and utilisation of municipal solid waste incineration residues, at a cost of £103,000. The report recommended that greatest effort should be given to the utilisation of bottom ash as secondary aggregate; an approach successfully employed in Denmark, France, Germany and the Netherlands. Ashes from the combustion of wood, coal and wastes are expected to be included in a new category in the third stage consultation on the waste classification scheme which the Department of the Environment will publish in April. Revenue from the beneficial use of bottom ash will help to improve the competitiveness of energy from waste projects which are supported by the non-fossil fuel obligation. Energy from waste projects also have the prospect of being developed outside the NFFO arrangements.

Post Offices

Mr. Connarty: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many conversions of Crown to agency status post offices (a) have been completed and (b) are proposed in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and each of the English regions; and if he will list the affected office in each case. [20394]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that the numbers of Crown post offices converted to agency status from March 1989 to the end of February 1996 by Post office Counters Ltd. regions are as follows:

Northern Ireland	11
North East	82
North Wales and North West	105
Midlands	79
South Wales and South West	114
North Thames and East Anglia	159
South East	135

A list of these 822 offices could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I understand from the Post Office that the conversion to agency status of the following Crown post offices is currently proposed:

Scotland
Cambuslang

North Wales and North West
New Ferry

Farnworth

Denton

Glossop

North Thames and East Anglia
Southgate, London E14

Wood Street, London E17

Trade Missions (Burma)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been allocated to funding trading missions to Burma; and if he will make a statement. [20393]

Mr. Oppenheim: The DTI has allocated £23,000 in the form of £1,000 grants to eligible UK companies which participated in the Asia Pacific advisory group trade mission to Burma between 26 February and 1 March 1996.

Exports (Burma)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his policy on the sale of goods to Burma. [20330]

Mr. Oppenheim: Except for the European Union defence embargo, there are no restraints on the export of goods to Burma.

Free Postage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those persons and categories of persons who are entitled to free postage. [20522]

Mr. Oppenheim: Royal Mail provides free postage to registered blind people, visually impaired people and individuals or organisations posting certain items to blind or visually impaired people. This service allows packets containing articles which have been specially produced or adapted for blind or visually impaired people to be sent by first class post, free of charge. Some members of the royal family receive free postage to assist them in carrying out their public duties. Petitions and addresses to Her Majesty's the Queen and either House of Parliament can also be forwarded free of postage.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of Thursday 25 January, Official Report, columns 317–18, what recent changes have been made to the list of members of the royal family and their households who receive free postage for their official mail. [20397]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 12 March 1996]: Since 1 March 1996 the Duchess of York and her staff have ceased to receive free postage.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what funds his Department has provided to the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and what amount is planned for 1996–97. [20723]

Mr. Page: Barnsley and Doncaster TEC has received funding for the support of small and medium-sized businesses from numerous Government and European sources. The main DTI support is the enterprise budget which was £362,500 in 1994–95 and £294,000 in 1995–96 and is forecast to be £368,000 in 1996–97.

Company Sizes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many employees currently work in firms with (a) one to 10 employees, (b) 11 to 20 employees, (c) 21 to 50 employees, (d) 51 to 100 employees, (e) 101 to 200 employees, (f) 201 to 500 employees, (g) 501 to 1,000 employees, (h) 1,001 to 2,000 employees and (i) over 2,000 employees; how many firms fall into each of these categories; and what percentage of the total number of firms is covered by each of these categories. [20854]

Mr. Page: Figures are not available by these size classes. The most recent estimates of the number of firms by employee size class are shown in the table.

Table 1: Number of employees and businesses by size of business, end–1993

Technology Foresight Programme

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the progress report on the technology foresight programme. [20588]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Yes. Today I have placed copies of the report in the Libraries of both Houses.

Petroleum Licensing

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will announce the licences for blocks under the seventh landward licensing round. [21190]

Mr. Page: Following my announcement to the House on 18 July 1995, Official Report, column 1210, inviting applications under the seventh round of landward petroleum licensing, I am pleased to announce that the applications have now been assessed and I have decided to award 22 new licences for landward oil and gas exploration covering 74 blocks.

The majority of the awards are in the east midlands and Lincolnshire basin in which a number of oil and gas discoveries have been made over many years. Other awards have been made in less well-established areas including south Wales, Yorkshire and Humberside, Hampshire, Oxfordshire and Wiltshire.

New exploration concepts offered by companies in their applications should result in a significant increase in the exploration activity on land in Great Britain. A quarter of the applications were based on gas from coal and involve the exploitation of conventional coal bed methane, gob gas—gas collecting in old mines from de-stressed coals—and the gas which is currently vented to the atmosphere from abandoned mines for safety purposes.

I have tried to strike a balance in the wards across the round as a whole to ensure that both conventional and coal bed methane resources are thoroughly explored and that the optimum exploitation of hydrocarbon resources will result.

Some of the licences awarded are for blocks that straddle land and sea boundaries. I have decided to apply strict conditions in these cases to exclude any oil and gas activity below the low-water mark. Activities above the low-water mark require planning permission which will take account of any environmental impact.

Although no near shore oil and gas activity has been licensed in this round, should interest be expressed in the watery areas in future licensing rounds, I will look again at the possibility of licensing them subject to satisfactory arrangements being put in place for protecting the interests of other users of the sea and the environment.

I was very impressed with the quality of the applications as well as their innovative and considered approach to oil and gas exploration and development. This is an encouraging outcome in the first landward petroleum licensing round to be held for three years. It is also the first landward round to allow companies to apply for the new unified petroleum exploration and development licence that covers the full life cycle of any hydrocarbon discovery.

Decisions about the awards were made on the basis of the technical work programmes offered by each applicant together with their evaluation of the exploration opportunities. I also took into account environmental and financial factors.

The onshore oil and gas industry has intended to be overshadowed by the huge successes in the North sea and now west of Shetland. Nevertheless, the onshore industry has a continuing and important role to play in the UK's energy sector, particularly in the light of the opportunities from the increasingly deregulated markets for gas and electricity. We also need the flexibility and freshness of approach that small companies bring to enhance the UK's ability to meet its energy needs.

These licence awards indicate the strong interest in petroleum exploration on land and underscore the broad range of licence opportunities available to the oil and gas industry across the whole of Great Britain and the United Kingdom continental shelf. I intend to build on this interest by holding landward rounds on a regular basis in future.

I will place copies of this announcement in the Libraries of both Houses.

Insolvency Service

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he met or spoke by telephone to the Deputy Prime Minister on 28 February to discuss whether the contracting out of Insolvency Service casework should proceed. [19580]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 March 1996]: Any discussions between Ministers are confidential.

Companies House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of market-testing and benchmarking exercises within Companies House; and if he will estimate the efficiency savings arising from such exercises. [20559]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 March 1996]: It will not be possible to determine the costs and savings of the Companies House contracting-out programme until the programme has been completed.

Orimulsion

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will reconsider the approval of the importing and use of orimulsion for the purpose of electricity generation. [20370]

Mr. Page [holding answer 13 March 1996]: No. The choice of fuel to be used in a power station is a commercial matter for the company concerned subject to the operation of the station being able to satisfy the requirements of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases have been referred by Doncaster police to the Crown Prosecution Service in each of the last four years; how many have been prosecuted; and how many have been successful. [19643]

The Attorney-General: Cases from the Doncaster police are dealt with by the South Yorkshire branch of the Crown Prosecution Service. That branch also deals with cases referred to it from other divisions of the South Yorkshire police force and, as statistics are kept on a branch basis only, it would not normally be possible to separate the figures for one police division from others serving the same branch. Exceptionally, I am able to provide figures for the last two calender years. Figures for the years 1992 and 1993 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The figures shown in the tables represent the number of cases received from the police and the number of defendants whose case proceeded to a hearing in magistrates courts and in the Crown court during the calendar years 1994 and 1995 and, of those, the proportion who were convicted. Convictions are inclusive of guilty pleas, as well as of contested hearings.

In the magistrates court, table 1 shows:

the number of defendants whose case was received by the CPS and the number whose case was finalised;

of defendants finalised, the number whose case was referred to the CPS for pre-charge advice, and the number of other, non-criminal, proceedings—such as forfeiture proceedings under the Obscene Publications Acts;

Table 2 shows:

defendants whose case was not proceeded with, divided into cases where the prosecution was dropped and cases which could not proceed and were written off—for example, because the defendant had died, or could not be traced.

Table 3 shows:

of those cases proceeded with, the number of: defendants bound over to keep the peace; defendants cases dealt with summarily by hearings in the magistrates court; defendants committed for trial to the Crown court; and defendants whose case was discharged at committal.

Table 4 shows:

of the cases heard in the magistrates court, the number of defendants convicted and the number acquitted. The sum of the two figures exceeds the number shown in table 3 for cases proceeding to a hearing because in cases where a defendant enters mixed pleas—guilty to some charges and not guilty to others—and is subsequently acquitted on those charges to which he pleaded not guilty, the Crown Prosecution Service counts the result as both a conviction and an acquittal or two convictions when the not guilty plea is proved. The same case may, therefore, count amongst the figures for convictions and those for acquittals.

In the Crown court, table 5 shows:

the number of defendants whose case was received and the number finalised. Of the number of defendants cases finalised, the number dealt with by way of appeal from the magistrates court or committed to the Crown court for sentence.

Table 6 shows:

of defendants' cases not proceeded with, divided into those in which no evidence was offered before the jury was sworn—prosecution dropped—and those which could not proceed and were written off—for example, because the defendant had died, could not be traced by the police or had been found unfit to plead.

Table 7 shows:

the number of defendants' cases proceeded with divided into the number bound over to keep the peace and the number heard in the Crown court.

Table 8 shows:

of the defendants' cases heard in the Crown court, the number which resulted in convictions and the number of acquittals. The sum of these figures is greater than the figure shown in table 7 for cases proceeding to a hearing for the same reason as set out above for cases in the magistrates court.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Identity Cards

5. Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in favour of the introduction of a compulsory British identity card. [18986]

Mr. Howard: Of over 3,000 responses we received to the Green Paper on identity cards, 1,700 were in favour of the introduction of an identity card and of these 800 favoured a compulsory card.

Prison Service

14. Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the study commissioned by his Department into relations between the Home Office and the Prison Service. [18995]

Miss Widdecombe: The hon. Member is referring to the in-depth study recommended by General Sir John Learmont. As my right hon and learned Friend told the House on 16 October, Official Report, columns 30–44, we have set work in hand in response to this recommendation. The work was assisted initially by Miss Kate Jenkins and then taken forward by discussions between Prison Service and Home Office officials—but no in-depth study as recommended by Sir John Learmont has been commissioned. We have had a number of general inquiries in connection with this but no representations as such. My right hon. and learned Friend has undertaken to give a full response to the Learmont recommendations in due course and this remains the position.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

15. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes currently operate in Leicestershire; what was the figure five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [18996]

Mr. Maclean: There are currently 2,701 neighbourhood watch schemes in Leicestershire. At the end of December 1990 there were 1,245. This is an increase of 116 per cent. In Leicestershire, as in the rest of the country, more and more people are realising the benefits of neighbourhood and street watch.

Trials

16. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to improve trials. [18997]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have introduced a number of initiatives to improve the way in which the criminal justice system operates. The Criminal Procedure and Investigations Bill, currently before the House, contains measures which will further improve the preparation of cases and the conduct of criminal trials.

New Technology Developments (Funding)

17. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to fund developments in new technology. [18998]

Mr. Maclean: New technology developments are funded directly by public capital provision, or indirectly through grant and credit approvals, or the private finance initiative and challenge funding, such as the closed circuit television initiative.

Cautions

18. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy relating to cautions. [18999]

Mr. Maclean: Cautioning should continue to be used, but only where it is an adequate response to the particular circumstances of the offence and of the offender.

Fire Service College

20. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the financial deficit shown in the annual report and accounts of the Fire Service College. [19002]

Mr. Sackville: The Fire Service College's accounts for 1994–95 show cumulative deficit of over £7 million. The intention is that the college should continue as a trading fund. A number of measures have already been taken or are under active consideration which are intended to strengthen the college's financial position and to secure its place as the central provider of both command and specialist training for the UK fire service.

Persistent Criminals

21. Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policies he has to deal with persistent burglars and drug pushers. [19003]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend announced last October proposals which would require courts to impose stiff minimum prison sentences on persistent burglars and drug dealers. I will be publishing a White Paper shortly setting out full details of these proposals.

Policemen on the Beat

22. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of policemen on the beat. [19004]

Mr. Maclean: Police officers on the beat are crucial to the fight against crime which is why there is a national objective for high visibility policing. Patrol work, properly directed and targeted, is an effective tool in increasing community safety.

Policing (East Sussex)

23. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve policing in East Sussex. [19006]

Mr. Maclean: The chief constable of Sussex police is responsible for policing East Sussex. The Sussex police authority's budget this year increased by 16 per cent.—or £20.2 million—over 1994–95. The force have said that total police strength should increase by 130 in 1995–96. Spending will increase by a further £5.6 million or 3.9 per cent. in 1996–97.

Knives and Imitation Guns

24. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to control the sale of offensive knives and imitation guns. [19007]

Mr. Maclean: An amendment dealing with the sale of knives and other items was accepted during Committee stage of the Offensive Weapons Bill on Wednesday 6 March. The effect of the amendment is to make it an offence to sell to someone under the age of 16 any knife, knife blade—or razor blade—any axe or any other article which has a blade or which is sharply pointed and which is made or adapted to cause injury to another person.

Any imitation firearm which can be readily converted to fire live ammunition is subject to stringent licensing control. Licensing the sale of possession of other imitation firearms would be neither feasible nor effective in combating misuse.

Fire Stations (Docklands)

25. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his assessment of the increased risk to life and property in the docklands area of London consequent on the proposals to reduce the number of appliances in fire stations covering that area. [19008]

Mr. Sackville: Responsibility for making any such assessment rests with the London fire and civil defence authority. If an application is received from the authority to remove appliances from the docklands area, my right hon. and learned Friend will take advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services on whether the nationally recommended standards of fire cover will be maintained.

Social Security Officers (Police Co-operation)

26. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many chief constables have reported the non-co-operation of local social security officers when asked by the police for addresses for serving warrants for arrest. [19009]

Mr. Maclean: I have received no reports of any difficulties.

Crime Prevention (South-west)

27. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support he has given for crime prevention initiatives in the south-west. [19010]

Mr. Maclean: We support crime prevention initiatives nationally in several ways, for example by encouraging the formation of neighbourhood watch and other watch schemes, and by our support for crime concern.

In the south-west in particular, a safer cities project was established in Bristol as part of phase 1 of the safer cities programme, while there is a project at Plymouth under phase 2. There is also a drugs prevention initiative team working in Avon and Somerset, delivering a programme of work which involves local people. There were 14 successful bids from the south-west in the first round of the closed circuit television challenge competition, worth over £450,000.

Public Bodies

28. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he uses in deciding appointments to public bodies for which he has responsibility. [19011]

Mr. Howard: My appointments to public bodies are governed by the overriding principle of selection based on merit, taking account of the skills and experience needed by the bodies concerned.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20097]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The following advisory non-departmental bodies which are sponsored by my Department:

(i) are on a statutory basis

Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs
Animals Procedures Committee
Boards of Visitors, prison establishments
Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council
Firearms Consultative Committee
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales
Parole Board
Poisons Board
Police Negotiating Board

(ii) publish their advice to Government

Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs[1]
Animals Procedures Committee
Firearms Consultative Committee[1]
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England[1]
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales[1]
Poisons Board[1]

(iii) publish an annual report and lay it before Parliament

Animals Procedures Committee[1]
Firearms Consultative Committee[1]
Metropolitan Police Committee
Parole Board[1]

In addition, boards of visitors may at the discretion of each board publish their annual reports.

[1] In these cases, the bodies concerned meet a statutory requirement. In other cases, the bodies act voluntarily.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20114]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The following advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department:

(i) hold public meetings

Metropolitan Police Committee
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales

(ii) conduct public consultative exercises

Animals Procedures Committee
Firearms Consultative Committee
Metropolitan Police Committee
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England
Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales

(iii) conduct consultative exercises with outside commercial interests

Animals Procedures Committee
Crime Prevention Agency Board
Firearms Consultative Committee
Metropolitan Police Committee

The activities listed are undertaken voluntarily by the bodies concerned except for the parliamentary Boundary Commissions which are statutorily required to hold local inquiries in public if certain conditions are met and also to conduct public consultation exercises.

None of the advisory non-departmental public bodies which my Department sponsors publishes a register of members' interests, agendas for meetings or minutes of meetings.

Prisons (Government Policy)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the 1991 White Paper on prisons represents Government policy on prisons. [19001]

Miss Widdecombe: Both the 1991 White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" and the Woolf report which preceded it, identified the need for a proper balance between essential security measures and effective, constructive regime activities. This remains Prison Service policy today. We have already implemented most of the White Paper commitments.

Public Interest Immunity

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his predecessor signed a public interest immunity certificate in the case of R v. Roche, and others, at Plymouth Crown court in July and August 1991. [18812]

Mr. Howard: No public interest immunity certificate was issued by the then Home Secretary in this case.

Prison Service (Director General)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people (a) applied for and (b) were approached to apply for the post of Director General of the Prison Service when it was vacated by Mr. Derek Lewis. [19835]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 26 February, Official Report, column 417.

Executive Action

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those areas of executive action other than citizenship where he has discretion to act in respect of an individual without giving reasons for this decision. [20074]

Mr. Howard: Comprehensive records are not kept in the form requested, but no provision comparable to that in section 44(2) of the British Nationality Act 1981 has been identified from readily available sources.

Fire Services (Wales)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each financial year from 1990–91 to 1996–97 the finances made available for each fire brigade in Wales in (a) cash and (b) real terms and the sources from which this funding came. [20273]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible for the revenue funding of Welsh local authorities. Welsh local government revenue settlement resources are not hypothecated to specific services such as fire. Funding for fire authorities' revenue services is an integral part of local authorities budget setting. Returns from local authorities showing expenditure on fire have been placed in the Library. No information is available yet for 1996–97.

Convictions

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of cases brought to court secured convictions (a) 20 years ago, (b) 10 years ago and (c) in each of the last five years. [20346]

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table:

Offenders convicted at all courts as a percentage of prosecutions at magistrates courts by type of offence 1974, 1984, 1990–94

England and Wales — Percentages

	Type of Offence
	Indictable	Summary non motoring	Summary motoring	All offences
1974	92	92	96	94
1984	86	89	92	90
1990	73	81	83	80
1991	69	79	80	77
1992	66	78	77	75
1993	64	78	74	73
1994	63	77	74	72

Cyclists (Pedestrian Injuries)

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of serious incidents and injuries caused to pedestrians by people who ride their bicycles on the pavements; what plans he has to address this problem; and if he will make a statement. [20388]

Mr. Maclean: Personal injury road accident data are recorded by the Department of Transport. No estimates are available of the number of accidents between cyclists and pedestrians on pavements. The following table shows the total number of injury accidents on public roads reported to the police in 1994 which involved a pedal cyclist and one or more pedestrians. It is not possible to estimate the proportion of these accidents which occurred on the pavement.

Injury accidents involving one pedal cyclist and one or more pedestrians

Number of accidents 333 — Great Britain 1994

	Killed	Seriously injured	Slightly injured	Total casualties
Casualties resulting:
Pedestrian casualties	3	95	241	339
Pedal cyclists casualties	0	14	68	82

The manner in which enforcement of the offence of cycling on the pavement is carried out, including the allocation of resources for the purpose, is a matter for individual chief officers of police. The Home Office intends soon to seek views on whether cycling on the pavement should be made a fixed penalty offence.

By the use of publicity campaigns, such as "cycle safe", the Department of Transport will continue its efforts to remind cyclists that they should adopt a responsible attitude and comply with the law and with normal standards of common sense and courtesy to others.

Funerals

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which is the lead Department on the funeral industry; and what consideration is being given to amending relevant legislation, along lines suggested by the National Funerals College executive director, the Reverend Doctor Peter Jupp, for the re-use of graves after a period of years. [19172]

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Trade and Industry are responsible for consumers' interests in goods and services provided by the funerals industry, while the Home Office is responsible for the law relating to burial and certain related matters. There are no present plans to amend legislation to provide for the proposed re-use of graves.

Crime Statistics (Essex)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the level of recorded crime in Essex; and what was the level two years ago. [19199]

Mr. Maclean: The police in Essex recorded 101,687 offences in the 12 months to June 1995 and 115,895 offences in the 12 months to June 1993, a fall of 14,208 offences.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of CCTV in tackling crime. [19240]

Mr. Maclean: Police operational experience and independent research show that closed circuit television can have a significant impact in reducing crime and the fear of crime. CCTV prevents crime happening in the first place; it aids the investigation and detection of crime; and it provides evidence to help convict the guilty.

We are making £45 million available to promote the use of CCTV technology in the fight against crime with the aim of providing 10,000 new cameras over the next three years.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is currently the waiting time for those applying for an oral hearing by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; [20639]

(2) how many cases are currently awaiting an oral hearing by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and what was the number at 1 March 1995; [20638]

(3) what steps he is taking to reduce the waiting time for those applying for an oral hearing by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. [20637]

Mr. Maclean: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board advises that the average waiting time for an oral hearing is currently 14 months, although almost 50 per cent. of applications for, or referrals to, a hearing are resolved within 12 months.

The number of appeals cases awaiting resolution rose from some 18,000 on 1 March 1995 to 22,800 on 1 March 1996 by reason of the significant increase in the volume of initial decisions issued—93,000—since the first tariff scheme was withdrawn on 5 April 1995, requiring all the previous year's applications to be reprocessed.

The board has expanded its hearing programme to meet this demand and, at the request of its chairman, Lord Carlisle QC, my right hon. and learned Friend recently made additional appointments to the board for this purpose. From 1 April 1996, under the new tariff scheme approved by Parliament in December, there are procedures designed to help contain the number of cases where such hearings are necessary and to enable cases which do require a hearing to be resolved more quickly.

PROMIS Project

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the costs to date to his Department for the tendering exercise for financial reporting software for the PROMIS project; [19674]

(2) if the companies that withdrew from the tendering process for the PROMIS project will now be invited to resubmit their tenders; [19675]

(3) at what stage in the tendering process his Department will ensure that all companies are able to meet the mandatory requirements for the PROMIS project. [19676]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The recent PROMIS procurement exercise designed to obtain a comprehensive information technology solution to support the Home Office's purchasing and supply function was halted because no compliant solutions were put forward.

The Home Office has no plans to invite further tenders to meet the full PROMIS requirement.

The total cost of the procurement exercise to the Home Office is approximately £160,000.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20481]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 12 March 1996]: Information about the values of payments outstanding is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

Rail Track (Speed Restrictions)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of rail track are currently subject to speed restrictions on each major line throughout the rail network. [19859]

Mr. Watts: The current number of miles subject to speed restrictions on each of the major lines are:

West coast main line: 11

Midland main line: 2.5

East coast main line: 3

Great western: 50.5

Car Ferries

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those ferries currently operating to and from United Kingdom ports which (a) meet and (b) do not meet the requirements of the proposed regional agreement relating to car deck bulkheads, indicating in each case in (b) when he expects the standards to be reached. [19871]

Mr. Norris: The Government, in their response to the Transport Committee's report on cross-channel safety, had already undertaken to publish such a list, and subsequent updated lists, once agreement was reached on the implementation of a higher ferry survivability standard. Such an agreement has now been reached and a list indicating in each case when we expect the standard to be reached will be published after detailed calculations have been completed.

Trunk Road Network

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department received the local authority associations' submission on the case for the transfer of responsibility for much of the trunk road network to local authorities; and when he intends to respond to it. [19770]

Mr. Watts: The local authority associations tabled a paper setting out their proposals for transferring a significant proportion of the all-purpose trunk road network to local authorities for discussion at the national annual consultative meeting on 18 July 1995, when we discussed a possible way forward based on a case study approach. The associations' proposals are currently being considered in the context of the national transport debate; they were discussed further with the associations at the local transport liaison group meeting on 30 January.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what uniform business rate income the Exchequer will derive from Railtrack when the company has been privatised; how this income will be shared among local authorities; and if the payment of uniform business rate by Railtrack has been included in the calculation of track access charges. [19862]

Mr. Watts: Rateable values for Railtrack's operational property are prescribed by orders by the Secretaries of State for the Environment, for Scotland and for Wales. The sum raised from this in 1994–95 was £91.7 million. Other properties are assessed in the normal way by the Valuation Office agency and the moneys collected by the relevant local authorities. The figure for this is not held centrally. These arrangements will be unaffected by privatisation. All non-domestic rates, whether collected by the Secretaries of State or by local authorities, are paid into the non-domestic rating pools for the respective countries and redistributed to local authorities on a per capita basis. The payment of rates is included in Railtrack's costs which were taken into account by the Rail Regulator in setting the level of access charges.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when each remaining part of the former British Rail is due to be privatised. [19863]

Mr. Watts: The timetable for franchising and future sales is set down in the following table. This gives indications only of when sales are expected to be completed or franchises awarded.

(a) Franchises

The Franchising Director is responsible for awarding franchising contracts.

Bidders were shortlisted for InterCity East Coast, Midland Main Line, Network SouthCentral and Gatwick Express on 16 January. The Franchising Director received final bids on 1 March for InterCity East Coast, Midland Main Line and Gatwick Express. Final bids for Network SouthCentral were required by 11 March 1996.

The Franchising Director is inviting the shortlisted bidders (with the exception of Enterprise Rail) to re-tender for LTS Rail.

Invitations to tender for South Eastern were issued on 19 December 1995 and for Chiltern on 30 January. Indicative bids for both are required by 22 March.

Invitations to pre-qualify for Cardiff and South Wales and West were issued on 23 January. 19 applications have been received for pre-qualification, the majority of companies being interested in pre-qualifying for both franchises.

Invitations to pre-qualify for Anglia and Thames Trains were issued on 22 February. Applications must be received by 22 March.

Invitations to tender for the remaining franchises will be issued in due course.

(b) Freight Businesses

Final bids for Freightliner were invited on 22 December 1995. BR aims to complete the sale in the coming months.

The Government and British Rail are examining the options for privatisation of Railfreight Distribution.

(c) Infrastructure companies

Final bids for the following businesses were involved on 5 October 1995 and the sales are expected in the coming months:

Western Track Renewals Co. Ltd.

Northern Infrastructure Maintenance Co. Ltd.

Northern Track Renewals Co. Ltd.

Eastern Infrastructure Maintenance Co. Ltd.

Eastern Track Renewals Co. Ltd.

Southern Track Renewals Co. Ltd.

South West Infrastructure Maintenance Co. Ltd.

South East Infrastructure Maintenance Co. Ltd.

(d) Other BR Businesses

Final bids for the following units were invited:

The engineering link: 15 December 1995

Interfleet Technology: 15 December 1995

Network Train Engineering Services: 15 December 1995

College of Railway Technology: 26 January 1996.

Bids are currently being considered for the above units and for BR Projects Ltd.

Indicative bids will be invited for about 10 other Central Services units. BR expects to dispose of all the above units over the coming months.

(e) Railtrack

The Government intend to sell Railtrack by stock market flotation in May 1996.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each part of the former British Rail which has been privatised since the passage of the Railways Act 1993, indicating the income generated by each sale. [19864]

Mr. Watts: The tables list those parts of British Rail which have either been sold or franchised.

The first two franchises were awarded as contracts to run services in return for the payment of grant and will not generate receipts for the Government.

Gross proceeds from the sales to date of businesses sold by BR amount to some £571.5 million. As explained in the Government's response of 14 December 1995 to the Transport Select Committee Fourth Report, on railway finances, it would be contrary to the commercial interests of British Rail and the Government to publish details of individual sales at this stage, as that may prejudice sales still in progress. Details of individual sales completed will be made public in due course.

In addition to that figure, the sale of the rolling stock leasing companies, which was handled by my Department, realised £1,822 million; that figure comprises £598 million for Eversholt Leasing Ltd., £528 million for Porterbrook Leasing Ltd. and £696 million for Angel Train Contracts Ltd.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the King's Cross railway lands; and what value was attached to the asset. [20305]

Mr. Watts: A valuation of the King's Cross railway lands was carried out for the British Rail Property Board in March 1995. Based on rental income derived from the lands, the existing use value was estimated to be £5.8 million. A valuation was carried out for my Department in November 1995 to assess the development value of those parts of the King's Cross railway lands not ultimately required for the channel tunnel rail link operational railway which indicated a development value of up to £10.6 million.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the last valuation was made of the railway land at Stratford now transferred to London and Continental Railways; and what value was attached to it. [20306]

Mr. Watts: A valuation of the Stratford railway lands, including the land required for the channel tunnel rail link and Stratford international station, was carried out for the British Rail Property Board in March 1995. Based on rental income derived from the lands, the existing use value was estimated to be £15.2 million. A valuation was carried out for my Department in May 1995 to assess the development value of the lands excluding those parts required for the CTRL operational railway, which indicated a development value of up to £12.5 million.

Railway Costs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the operating cost per mile including overheads, maintenance and security of (a) an InterCity train, (b) a Network SouthEast commuter train and (c) a North West Regional Railways train. [20308]

Mr. Watts: The 1994–95 operating expenses per train mile were:

InterCity: £27.67

Network SouthEast: £21.13

Regional Railways: £14.37

Figures are not directly comparable with previous years due to reorganisation of the industry under the Railways Act 1993. The operating expense per train mile specific to North West Regional Railways is not available.

Royal Train

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 29 January 1996, Official Report, column 482, relating to the use of the royal train, what definition is used of a public duty. [20471]

Mr. Watts: The definition is a duty undertaken to mark a public event or occasion.

Marine Accidents (Pilots)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vessels have run aground (a) with a pilot and (b) without a pilot on board in each year since 1987. [20521]

Mr. Norris: The statistics requested are not available.

Highways Agency

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost of the review of the organisation and staffing of the Highways Agency announced to staff in November 1995. [20782]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Clare Short, dated 14 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the cost of the review of the organisation and staffing of the Highways Agency announced to staff in November 1995.

The internal review team estimate their costs at about £110,000. No external consultancy costs have been incurred.

"Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas"

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those recommendations contained in Lord Donaldson's report, by reference to the particular chapter and paragraph, which (a) have been implemented in full, (b) are in the process of being implemented in full, (c) are planned to be only partially implemented and (d) will not be implemented. [20819]

Mr. Norris: Lord Donaldson's report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas", Cm 2560, contains 103 recommendations, which are listed in chapter 23. The Government have accepted 91 of these, are considering a further eight, and have rejected four. The position on each recommendation is summarised in the table.

Position	Recommendations (as number in chapter 23 of Lord Donaldson's report)
Accepted: Implemented in full	2, 3, 6, 8, 10, 11, 14, 15, 17, 21, 22, 24, 26–29, 32, 37, 38, 41, 46–48, 78, 79, 81, 82, 84 88, 90, 91, 94, 99, 100

Under consideration	12, 40, 42, 59, 85, 92, 95, 96
Rejected	9, 36, 43, 60

[1] The final extent of implementation of some of these recommendations will depend on a number of factors.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to implement in full the recommendation contained paragraph 127 in chapter 20 of Lord Donaldson's report published in May 1994. [20817]

Mr. Norris: The Government have provided dedicated emergency tugs at Dover and Stornoway—two of the three key areas identified in paragraph 127—both last winter and this winter. In deciding future deployment, we will take into account experience of providing these tugs, of liaison arrangements with tug operators, and of any relevant findings of the investigations into the Sea Empress incident.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers exist to him to reject a scheme for the proposed Central Railway rail link from the channel tunnel to the midlands following a public inquiry; and if he will make a statement. [20598]

Mr. Watts: The relevant powers are contained in section 13 of the Transport and Works Act 1992. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State can make the order, with or without modifications, or not make the order. Where an application has been referred to Parliament as a scheme of national significance, the power to make the order is exercisable only if both Houses of Parliament have passed resolutions approving the proposals, but such resolutions would not affect his power not to make the order. He would make a decision only after having taken into account the inspector's conclusions and recommendation following a subsequent public inquiry.

Sea Empress

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the full terms of reference given to the marine accident investigation branch into the Sea Empress disaster. [20818]

Mr. Norris: Individual marine accident investigation branch investigations do not have distinct terms of reference. The purpose of such investigations, as set out in regulations, is to determine the circumstances and causes of accidents with the aim of improving the safety of life at sea and the avoidance of accidents in future. The regulations also provide that an investigation may extend to cover all events and circumstances preceding the accident which in the opinion of the inspector may have been relevant to its cause or outcome, and also to cover the consequences of the accident. I understand that the chief inspector intends that the Sea Empress investigation will be comprehensive and will cover, among other matters, the initial grounding, the availability of salvage tugs, the question of double hulls, the safety of port operations and the effects, if any, current salvage law may have had on the conduct of the salvage operation. Indeed, the inspector will consider all evidence and arguments submitted to him which have a bearing on the cause of the original grounding of the Sea Empress and the conduct of the salvage operation.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which recommendations were included in the interim findings of the marine accident investigation branch Sea Empress investigation. [20763]

Mr. Norris: None.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the salvage tugs which were offered to those managing the Sea Empress salvage operation between Thursday 15 February and Wednesday 21 February and their individual maximum bollard pull; [20810]

(2) if he will list each type of dispersant and the quantity used in aerial spraying to disperse oil from the Sea Empress; [20762]

(3) if he will list the products and techniques for cleaning up oil spillages on the shore which his Department has evaluated and tested in the last five years; [20807]

(4) if he will list the tugs used on the attempts to salvage the Sea Empress; and who owned them; [20816]

(5) which specialised vessels suitable for collecting spilled oil from the surface of the sea were offered to the marine pollution control unit on or after 15 February to assist with the Sea Empress operation; and which vessels were chartered; [20812]

(6) if he will list those products and techniques for cleaning oil from the shore, the development of which has been financially supported by his Department in the last five years. [20806]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 14 March 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about oil spill clean up and salvage tugs in the Sea Empress incident.

PQ 1460/95/96

The Coastguard Emergency Towing Vessel at Stornoway, SMIT LLOYD SAFE, 125 tonnes, was offered to the salvors. In addition the salvors considered a number of other tugs. Which tugs these were, and whether they were offered or sought, is now a matter for the Marine Accident Investigation Branch investigation to determine.

The MPCU has in recent years commissioned a number of research projects examining different techniques for dealing with oil pollution on different shoreline types. Initially sandy shorelines were examined (1986) and the methods used at Tenby and Saundersfoot during the recent Sea Empress incident were based on the findings of this project. Later MPCU projects examined and reviewed clean-up techniques for shingle (1989), rocky shorelines (1992) and mudflats and saltmarshes (1993). Within these projects, a number of clean-up tools and products were evaluated and tested, including vehicles, beach-cleaning machines, beach washing plant and cleaning agents. Beach load-bearing characteristics were also evaluated.

The results of much of this research have been disseminated to local authorities by way of MPCU residential training courses, MPCU Scientific, Technical and Operational Advice Notes (Stop Notices), and a technical manual entitled 'Oil Spill Clean-Up of the Coastline'.

MPCU has also funded an evaluation study (1993) into the use of sorbent products as a tool for clean-up (final polishing of shingle/pebble beaches) and it is intended to develop a protocol for testing sorbent use and effectiveness. Work has also been commissioned on bioremediation. A State of the Art Report (1994) has been produced and research is ongoing.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of (a) the marine accident investigation branch investigation into the Braer disaster and (b) Lord Donaldson's inquiry and report into matters relating to the Braer disaster. [20815]

Mr. Norris: Total costs of the MAIB investigation are not known, but the staff costs of the three inspectors involved amounted to £23,000.

Lord Donaldson's inquiry did not specifically relate to the Braer. The inquiry was set up to consider the wider issue of the prevention of pollution from merchant shipping. The costs of Lord Donaldson's inquiry amounted to £390,000.

Milford Haven Port Authority

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the present membership of the Milford Haven port authority and in each case by whom they were appointed; which companies or organisations they represent; in which county they live; when their office will terminate; and what is their remuneration. [20811]

Mr. Norris: The constitution of the Milford Haven port authority provides for the Secretary of State to appoint the chairman and eight or nine other members. One of these has to be appointed after consultation with representatives of organised labour in Wales—in practice the Wales Trade Union Congress—two after consultation with local authorities and two after consultation with the oil industry. The remainder must have wide experience of and have shown capacity in shipping, commercial and financial matters, and so on, as set out in the constitution. AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Quarantine

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many imported pets have developed rabies in quarantine in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years. [20577]

Mrs. Browning: Quarantine premises are all privately owned commercial enterprises and therefore free to set their own charges. The charges within specific quarantine premises will also vary according to the size of the animal. We believe that average charges for the six months' quarantine period are around £800 for a cat and £1,200 to £1,500 for a dog.

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend is satisfied that SNH will continue to be able satisfactorily to carry out its statutory duties. Following the report of the study group on SNH published last December, a new strategic framework for SNH is being prepared in the light of changes affecting the natural heritage since publication in 1990 of "Scotland's Natural Heritage: The Way Ahead". The new document will be published in the first half of this year.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what matters he will consider when determining whether to call in the planning application for the proposed railway on Cairngorm. [19988]

Mr. Kynoch: The wildlife incident investigation scheme, which is administered by the agriculture departments and which investigates reports of suspected wildlife poisoning, has found no evidence to suggest that the existing instruction for the collection of dead squirrels is inadequate.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much public money, in the form of grants, has been provided to assist the development and maintenance of Scotland's skiing industry by (a) Highlands and Islands Enterprise and (b) other agencies, in each financial year since 1979, for each skiing site. [20319]

Mr. Kynoch: The provision of grant assistance by Highlands and Islands Enterprise and its predecessor, the Highlands and Islands Development Board, for the development and maintenance of the skiing industry in Scotland is an operational matter for Highlands and Islands Enterprise and I have asked the chairman of that organisation to write to the hon. Shettleston Public Halls

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when Shettleston public halls were last renovated; and what was the total cost involved. [21097]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Glasgow district council.

Deregulation (Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1968) Order 1995

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the annual saving to business from the Deregulation (Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1868) Order 1995. [19501]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 11 March 1996]: The order will benefit business by permitting the sale of farmed salmon roe, estimated at about £12 million per annum, rather than giving rise to actual savings.

Railway Investment

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by the Scottish Office on grants under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 or other legislation for (a) improvement of railway infrastructure and (b) new and reopened lines and stations, at outturn prices in Scotland in each year between 1975 and 1995. [19300]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [Holding answer 11 March 1996]: Under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 grants totalling £82.3 million have been made by the Scottish Office, between 1974–75 and 1995, towards rail and rail-related projects. Some £58.9 million of the total was made for the replacement/acquisition of rolling stock rather than for railway infrastructure improvements or new or reopened lines or stations. Grants of £23.44 million were, however, made between 1974–75 and 1987–88 towards the Clyderail project which involved reopening, electrification and signalling works. The make-up of this project between reopening and other infrastructure work and by year is not available.

Grants made under other legislation are set out in the table:

Historic Railway Structures

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list (a) the stations open to the public and (b) other structures and features in Scotland owned by Railtrack which are listed as historic buildings, in each case giving their grading; [19328]

(2) what was the total grant paid by public bodies responsible for historic buildings in Scotland to British Rail and Railtrack towards repair or restoration of listed buildings and structures in Scotland in each year from 1975 to 1995 at outturn prices. [19329]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 12 March 1996]: Since these are matters for Historic Scotland, I have asked the agency chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to write to the hon. Member as soon as possible. A copy of Mr. Munro's letter will be placed in the Library of the House as the information requested will be lengthy.

Outstanding Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what values of payments were outstanding within his Department on 5 March, which were beyond the date on the invoice and, where no date was specified, older than 28 days. [20484]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Finance

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated outturn public expenditure on housing for 1995–96 and what is the planned public expenditure on housing for each of the years 1996–97 to 1998–99 (a) inclusive of capital receipts, (b) net of capital receipts, (c) inclusive of gross capital investment only, defined as local authority non-housing revenue account, local authority housing revenue account, Scottish Homes approved development programme, Scottish Homes own stock and new towns and (d) gross capital investment but excluding non-HRA. [19285]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 March 1996]: The information requested is shown in the table. Further details will be published shortly in the Scottish Office departmental report. From 1996–97 expenditure on the non-HRA block will be included in a single capital allocation for all programmes excluding the HRA issued to local authorities. Information on non-HRA expenditure is therefore included only for 1995–96. In 1996–97, 25 per cent. of HRA receipts will be applied to reducing debt and 50 per cent. thereafter, and the figures for expenditure inclusive of capital receipts and for gross capital investment have been adjusted accordingly.

Oil Seed Rape

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the findings of project FF382, carried out by the Scottish Crop Research Institute on the characterisation of oil seed rape; when it will be published; and what correlation the study found between oil seed rape and allergies. [20553]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 March 1996]: The objective of the study was to determine the existence, identification, nature and mobility of volatile chemicals and pollen emitted by oil seed rape, and fungal spores from the crop, which are possible causes of an allergic response in humans, and to purify and standardise them for use in any clinical tests carried out. The study concluded that evidence that the crop can cause such problems has been obtained although as yet the precise cause or causes have not been identified. The study reports that some people react to pollen and fungal spores, but not in the numbers indicated by the percentage of study populations expressing symptoms, most of which showed no correlation with pollen or fungal exposure. The results indicated that agrochemicals seem unlikely to be involved in producing the symptoms. The study concluded that the most likely causes of allergic response in man appear to be volatile organic compounds, although categorical proof of the involvement of one or more is required. The study therefore recommends that further research in a number of areas is required.

Results from the study have already been published. Refereed papers include:

1. Robertson, G. W., Griffiths, D. W., Macfarlane Smith, W. H. and Butcher, R.D., 1993. The application of thermal desorption-gas chromatography-mass spectrometry to the analyses of flower volatiles from five varieties of oilseed rape (Brassica napus spp. oleifera). Phytochemical Analysis 4, 152–157.

2. Butcher, R. D., Macfarlane Smith, W. H., Robertson, G. W. and Griffiths, D. W. (1994). Clinical and Experimental Allergy 24, 1105–1114,

3. Parrat, D., Macfarlane Smith, W. H., Thompson, G., Cameron, L. A. and Butcher, R. D. (1995). Evidence that oilseed rape (Brassica napus spp. oleifera) causes respiratory illness in rural dwellers, Scottish Medical Journal 40, 74–76.

4. Butcher, R. D., Goodman, B. A. and Deighton, N. (1995). Evaluation of the allergic/irritant potential of air pollutants. Detection of proteins modified by volatile organic compounds from oilseed rape (Brassica napus spp. oleifera) using electrospray ionisation-mass spectrometry. Clinical and Experimental Allergy 25, 985–992.

In addition, the results of the research have been presented at a number of scientific meetings and in technical notes; to relevant agricultural trade bodies; and other bodies. A number of other publications are in preparation.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken, and what sums the Government have spent to address the health risks of oil seed rape; and if he will make a statement. [20554]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 March 1996]: The Scottish Office has funded the three–year research study by the Scottish Crop Research Institute into the volatile chemicals etcetera emitted by oil seed rape, at a cost of some £235,000. In addition, a research grant of £63,000 was awarded to Professor Anthony Seaton and colleagues at Aberdeen university in support of a three–year study into the health effects of oil seed rape.

The results of the latter study indicated that the health effects were slight. However, we are considering the implications of these studies with a view to determining what further research into the health effects might be useful and appropriate.

NHS Trust Directors (Insurance)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with the chairmen of NHS trusts concerning insuring trust directors against liabilities other than in cases of malfeasance. [20557]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 March 1996]: None. The issue of guidance to the NHS in Scotland on the personal liability of non-executive directors is currently being considered.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total financial subsidy given by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland to the film industry in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; what subsidies and incentives are available to film producers to produce films in Northern Ireland; how many films have been produced (a) totally and (b) partially in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; what proposals he has to introduce an all-Ireland film board; and if he will make a statement. [19873]

Mr. Ancram: The total financial support given from within its grant in aid by the Arts Council of Northern Ireland to the film industry in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years is as follows:

1991–92: £10,538

1992–93: £25,000

1993–94: £80,000

1984–95: £50,000

1995–96 (estimate): £50,000

Film production projects are eligible for funding from the national lottery and, in 1995, the Arts Council announced an award of £200,000 towards the production of a film in Northern Ireland.

Information about the number of films produced totally or partially in Northern Ireland is not available.

The Government have no proposals to introduce an all-Ireland film board, but are considering options for the development of film and television production in Northern Ireland.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the recommendations made by the Government of the Irish Republic under article 6 of the Anglo-Irish Agreement since it was signed; and if he will list the appointments made as a result of these recommendations indicating to which bodies they were made. [19828]

Sir John Wheeler: Since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement in 1985, the Irish Government have suggested 153 people for public appointments in Northern Ireland. It is not possible to identify all those appointed since 1985, but 24 candidates proposed by the Irish Government currently hold 28 public appointments on the bodies to which they were nominated. All appointments are made on merit. It is not my practice to publish details of individuals so appointed.

Gaming Machines

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to extend the proposed deregulation on amusement with prizes gaming machines in Great Britain to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [19834]

Mr. Moss: These and other deregulation initiatives in the gambling field are being monitored to ascertain their local impact and the need for action to amend the law in Northern Ireland. Appropriate issues will be raised in the consultation paper to be published by the end of this year as part of a review of the local gambling law. Amending legislation will follow, as necessary, when decisions are taken.

Sports Councils

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what projects were jointly funded between the Northern Ireland Sports Council and the Sports Councils in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) the Irish Republic in 1995, and at what cost. [19866]

Mr. Ancram: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland is involved with the Scottish, Great Britain and Welsh Sports Councils in funding the following UK-wide initiatives, and contributes:

There are no projects funded with COSPOIR, the Republic of Ireland's Sports Council.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times the chairman of the Northern Ireland Sports Council met the chairmen of the Sports Councils in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) the Irish Republic in 1995. [19865]

[19867]

Mr. Ancram: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland co-operates with the other home country Sports Councils in UK-wide initiatives. These are taken forward through committee representation, strategic planning and funding, for example:

The Northern Ireland Sports Council and the Sports Council in the Republic of Ireland, COSPOIR, have biannual information exchange meetings at members/officers level. These have resulted in formal and informal exchanges in areas such as:

Strategy for Development of Sport

Drug Testing

Education/Training

Research

Sport for all Leader Award

Mountain Leadership/Rescue

European Funding

Outdoor Centre Programmes

Enhanced co-operation with COSPOIR is being explored in:

(a) development and implementation of strategies, particularly in relation to the 35 all-Ireland governing bodies of sport;

(b) consideration of an all-Ireland sport for all leader award; and

(c) development of education resource material.

Jointly funded projects in 1995–96 are:

Rationalisation of coach education schemes/awards: Cost £7,000

Sport for all Leader Award: Cost £8,000

Class Sizes

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what current agreements or restrictions apply in respect of class sizes in Northern Ireland. [19830]

Mr. Ancram: The maximum size of a class in a secondary school in Northern Ireland is restricted, by regulation 15 of the Secondary Schools (Grant Conditions) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1973, to 20 pupils for a class in a practical subject and 35 in other subjects. There are no similar provisions in the primary sector.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the range of class sizes in which, five, six and seven-year-olds are taught; and how many children are taught in classes of each size. [20296]

Mr. Ancram: The information is not collected in the form requested.

Private Schools

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the areas in which he assists private schools with public money indicating the amounts of money spent in the past financial year. [19829]

Mr. Ancram: No financial assistance was given to independent schools in Northern Ireland in the past financial year.

Fishing Fleet

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present size of the Northern Ireland fishing fleet; what was its size in each of the last five years; how many boat owners have sought the financial incentives available to decommission their boats in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [19872]

Mr. Ancram: The number of licensed vessels in the Northern Ireland fishing fleet at the end of February 1996 and at the end of December of each of the previous five years is shown in the table.

	Length
	Over 10 metres	10 metres and under
1996	199	163
1995	207	161
1994	215	154
1993	219	139
1992	253	n/a
1991	257	n/a

For 1991 to 1993 the information is shown by registered length and from 1994 by overall length. The licensing of 10 m and under vessels was introduced with effect from 1 May 1993.

There were no UK fishing vessel decommissioning schemes in 1991 and 1992. Under the 1993, 1994 and 1995 UK schemes 68, 84 and 30 applications respectively were received from Northern Ireland vessel owners. Under the 1995 Northern Ireland decommissioning scheme for nephrops vessels, 23 applications were received.

Sentencing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce new proposals on sentencing in the courts similar to those announced for England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [20271]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary will shortly publish his proposals for England and Wales in a White Paper. I shall take a close interest in the public response and will be particularly keen to hear what people in Northern Ireland think about these important issues. It is, however, a well-established principle—at the heart of the new impetus we have sought to give in recent years to the development of criminal justice policy—that we have ultimately to develop our own solutions to crime problems in Northern Ireland, in the light of our own circumstances and pressures.

Community Relations Council

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who are the current members of the Community Relations Council; and what remuneration they receive. [19990]

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total value of exports from Northern Ireland for each of the past five years. [20016]

Mr. Ancram: Statistics on Northern Ireland's exports are currently available only for the financial years 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94 and are provided. These are taken from a survey undertaken on the Industrial Development Board's behalf by the Northern Ireland economic research centre and published in April 1995.

Irish and Ulster Scots Languages

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the current budget of the central community relations unit is being devoted to (a) Irish language groups and (b) Ulster Scots language groups. [19992]

Mr. Ancram: The budget of the central community relations unit for 1995–96 is £5,327,000. Of this, £219,790—4.13 per cent.—is being used to assist Irish language groups, either directly or through the grant to the cultural traditions group.

Some £13,970—0.26 per cent. of the CCRU budget—comprises grants made by the cultural traditions group to the Ulster Scots Heritage Council and the Ulster Scots Academic Press.

In addition, district councils may have made small payments to Irish language and Ulster Scots groups drawing on grants from CCRU under its district council community relations programme.

Miss Rita O'Hare

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 1 March 1996, Official Report, columns 749–50, what efforts were made to arrest Miss Rita O'Hare on her recent visit to Scotland. [20044]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: This is a matter for the police, but I understand that the RUC had no knowledge of any visit by Miss O'Hare to Scotland.

Mobile Classrooms

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many children in Northern Ireland are taught in mobile classrooms; [20288]

(2) at the rate of closure in 1994–95, when the last mobile classroom currently being used in Northern Ireland will be closed; [20289]

(3) how many mobile classrooms were in use in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [20290]

Mr. Ancram: Information about the number of mobile classrooms in use in each of the past 10 years, and the number of children taught in such classrooms, is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The number of classrooms currently in use is estimated to be 4,000.

There is no specific time scale for the closure of individual mobile classrooms. The replacement of mobile classrooms by permanent accommodation has a high priority in my Department's capital programme within the confines of available capital resources.

School Computers

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many computers are currently in use in Northern Ireland Schools and; how many children there are for every computer in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [20291]

Mr. Ancram: Available data relate to 1993–94, when there were 25,500 computers and a pupil-computer ratio of 22:1 in primary schools and 8:1 in secondary schools.

Teachers

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what training is provided to head teachers in Northern Ireland; and what proposals he has for additional provision. [20292]

Mr. Ancram: Training is provided by the education and library boards curriculum advisory and support services and the regional training unit, following annual consultation with schools about their training requirements. There are no immediate plans for additional provision.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the mechanisms for

(i) appraising and (ii) removing a head teacher who is underperforming; and what plans he has to change them; [20293]

(2) if he will set out the procedures for ending the appointment of an inadequate teacher and the time scales involved; and what plans he has to alter the procedures. [20295]

Mr. Ancram: Teachers and head teachers are subject to the dismissal provisions contained in paragraph 5 of schedule 4 to the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989, or, where relevant, to dismissal procedures drawn up by individual school boards of governors. Proposals detailing the steps to be followed in dealing with teachers, including principals, whose work is unsatisfactory have recently been put to the Northern Ireland Teachers Council by the employing authorities.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present system of teacher appraisal; and what plans he has to review it. [20294]

Mr. Ancram: A staff development and performance review scheme is currently being introduced for all teachers, starting with the training of head teachers from the 1995–96 school year. It comprises preparation and job observation, followed by a discussion and a summary statement. Plans for its review have yet to be drawn up.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the occasions on which he and his predecessors have attended Council of Ministers meetings since April 1992. [20814]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Neither I nor my predecessor have attended any Council of Ministers meetings since April 1992.

WALES

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, columns 93–94, how many inward investment company visits arranged by Invest in Britain have been made to Wales during the past 12 months; and in how many of these instances the companies concerned met officials from the Welsh Office. [20256]

Mr. Hague: There have been 13 inward investment visits introduced to Wales by the Invest in Britain Bureau over the past 12 months. The Welsh Office was involved in five of these visits and Welsh Office Ministers in two of those.

Welsh Language

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to extend and improve the range of titles in the Welsh language on multimedia software; and what assessment he has made of the titles available; [20310]

(2) what assessment he has made of the range of software in the Welsh language currently available to run on (a) the Pentium multimedia personal computers of Research Machines and (b) Acorn personal computers. [20311]

Mr. Richards: The Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales has a specific remit to commission multimedia software in Welsh, and has already sought tenders for three titles. Four hundred and twenty-five titles were offered under the multimedia initiative for primary schools. Only two were in Welsh. Neither was considered suitable for purchase. Our assessment of other software is that more is desirable, but its range and type are a matter for users in the first instance.

Ariane Programme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the European Commission's Ariane programme as a means of promoting the Welsh language and Wales in the European Union. [20260]

Mr. Richards: Priority will be given to lesser-used languages under the Ariane programme; Welsh language organisations will be encouraged to apply when the programme is agreed.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the European Commission's Ariane programme; and if he will publish them. [20259]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I have received representations from the Arts Council of Wales and Ms Eluned Morgan MEP; I have placed copies of the representations in the Library of the House, together with copies of my replies.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake a study of the criteria for determining areas designated for regional assistance in Wales to identify discrepancies between those areas currently most in need of assistance, and the areas recognised as in need on this basis of the criteria used when the last regional assistance map was established. [20008]

Mr. Hague: No. The assisted areas map can be reviewed only on a Great Britain basis. It was introduced in 1993 and the Government have made it clear that it will not be reviewed within the lifetime of this Parliament.

Multimedia Portables Initiative

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations were undertaken with primary schools (a) in drawing up the specifications for the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative and (b) once the bids were received, on supplying them with hardware and software under the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative; [20003]

(2) what consultations were undertaken with (a) the Welsh Joint Education Committee, (b) the Wales

Curriculum and Assessment Authority and (c) the Welsh Language Board, (i) in drawing up the specifications for the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative and (ii) once the bids were received, on supplying schools with hardware and software under the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative. [20005]

Mr. Richards: Schools were invited to choose between a multimedia suite and portable computers. Those who chose multimedia were invited to indicate a preference for one of three platforms; those who chose portables to indicate what type of portable. No guarantee was given that the Department would meet first preferences. Further consultation either on detailed technical specifications or post-bid would have been impracticable. The Department was assisted throughout by meetings with local education authority advisers.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he gave for the availability of software that would be operable in the Welsh language when drawing up the specifications for the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative; and if this was a consideration when the contract for (a) the hardware and (b) the software was offered to Research Machines. [20001]

Mr. Richards: Careful consideration was given to this both pre-tender and post-tender. Research Machines has no contract to supply software.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make additional finance available for primary schools to train teachers to use the Pentium 75 multimedia personal computers provided under the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative; [20263]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to schools using Acorn personal computers of making full use of Research Machines Pentium personal computers. [20002]

Mr. Richards: Funding will be made available under the grants for education support and training programme as planned. Primary schools can draw on the £3 million made available under GEST to promote the use of IT in 1996–97. The platform purchased represents the best buy in overall value-for-money terms.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he made of the capability of Research Machines, under the contract awarded through the Welsh Office multimedia portables initiative, to support the statutory study of the Welsh language in the national curriculum. [20000]

Mr. Richards: Support of this character is for the Department and the Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales among others, not for Research Machines.

Agriculture Department

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were employed by his Department's agriculture department in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20172]

Mr. Hague: The total numbers of full-time equivalent permanent staff employed within the Welsh Office agriculture department at 31 December in each year are as follows:

1993: 416

1994: 443

1995: 432

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people he estimates will be employed by the agriculture department at the end of the current year; and if he will make a statement. [20077]

Mr. Hague: Four hundred and fifty-four permanent full-time equivalent staff on 31 March 1996.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many claims for capital grants and environmentally sensitive area payments his Department's agriculture department's divisional offices has processed in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20171]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is shown in the following table:

Scheme	Number of claims processed in 1994	1995
Capital grants	3,119	2,070
Environmentally Sensitive Area (ESAs)	1,454	1,384

GP Vacancies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to monitor the number of vacancies for general medical practitioners in Wales. [20254]

Mr. Hague: It would serve no useful purpose to collect this information routinely at a national level. Family health services authorities hold information about the number of vacancies in their area and provide advice to my Department on general trends as and when necessary.

FHSAs also provide more specific advice to the Medical Practices Committee. The MPC has responsibility for controlling the distribution of GPs in England and Wales with the aim of ensuring that there are adequate numbers of GPs throughout the country.

Livestock Schemes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many claims for the four main livestock schemes his Department's agriculture department's divisional offices have dealt with in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [20170]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The numbers of claims processed were as follows:

	1994	1995
Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances	14,143	13,444
Sheep Annual Premium Scheme	16,440	15,441
Suckler Cow Premium Scheme	15,752	14,777
Beef Special Premium Scheme (Finals)	22,420	25,017

The number processed under each scheme each year varies according to the number of claims carried forward for payment from one year to the next.

Manufacturing Projects

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 207, on the number of new manufacturing projects given financial assistance by his Department, if he will review the industrial investment incentives of his Department to secure a higher number of offers in Gwynedd and Dyfed; and if he will make a statement. [20265]

Mr. Hague: There are no proposals for the operating departments to review the terms of the regional selective assistance scheme. The Welsh Development Agency and others are working very hard to achieve a wider spread of manufacturing projects throughout Wales.

School Computers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of primary schools use (a) Acorn personal computers and (b) Pentium personal computers supplied by Research Machines. [20004]

Mr. Richards: Precise percentages are not held by the Department.

Sea Empress

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funds will be available to recompense those engaged in tourism who have been financially affected by the oil spillage from the Sea Empress. [20010]

Mr. Hague: Compensation for economic loss caused by oil pollution from the Sea Empress will be available from the vessel's insurers and from the international oil pollution compensation fund, up to a limit of about £57 million.

In addition, the Wales tourist board has launched a campaign to reassure visitors that the beaches of south-west Wales will be clean by the summer season.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the occasions on which he and his predecessors have attended Council of Ministers meetings since 9 April 1992. [20846]

Mr. Hague: I attended the meeting of the Environment Council on 4 March this year. My predecessor attended a Transport Council on 19 June 1995. The then Minister of State, Welsh Office—the right hon. Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts)—attended the informal council on regional policy on 12 and 13 November 1993.

Wilprint Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date Wilprint Ltd. was removed from the approved contractors' list for departmental printing work. [20845]

Mr. Hague: 27 April 1992.

HEALTH

Pensioners (Health Costs)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many pensioners received (a) free prescriptions, (b) courses of (i) free and (ii) reduced rate dental treatment and (c) free NHS sight tests, reduced private sight tests and spectacle vouchers for (1) 1989 and (2) the most recent year for which information is available under the NHS low income scheme; [19651]

(2) how many pensioners received assistance with NHS health costs from (a) income support, (b) being in receipt of certificate AG2 and (c) being in receipt of certificate AG3; and what estimate he has made of the number who paid full charges but could have received reduced charges if they had applied for AG2 or AG3 in (i) 1989 and (ii) the most recent year for which information is available. [19650]

Mr. Malone: All pensioners are entitled to free national health service prescriptions. Pensioners as a group are not entitled to free NHS sight tests, spectacle vouchers or dental treatment but may be entitled to help through the NHS low income scheme. Pensioners are not identified in the information collected about the number of free or reduced cost courses of dental treatments, NHS sights tests and spectacle vouchers. No information is available about the number of pensioners who pay for sight tests, spectacles and dental treatment but would be entitled to help if they made a low income scheme claim.

The available information is in the table:

Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what budget the Licensing Authority made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines for each year from 1971 to 1994 in respect of its statutory role to promote the collection of adverse drug reactions. [20060]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Control Agency undertakes the role of promoting the collection of adverse drug reactions on behalf of the committee and seeks its advice as appropriate. An overall budget of £821,986 was devoted to running and promoting the spontaneous adverse drug reaction reporting scheme in the financial year 1994–95. Information since 1971 is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the occasions since the coming into effect of the Medicines Act 1968 on which (a) the Licensing Authority, (b) the medicines division of the Department of Health, (c) the Medicines Control Agency or its staff and (d) the Committee on Safety of Medicines or its chairman have (i) sought and (ii) obtained an injunction or interdict preventing publication of information relating to the safety of medicines licensed or formerly licensed under the provisions of the Act; and if he will list for each case the date on which an injunction or interdict was sought, the products concerned, the grounds on which the action was taken, if the action was contested, and the outcome. [20064]

Mr. Malone: We have no record of any such proceedings.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the procedures of the Medicines Control Agency. [20058]

Mr. Malone: The procedures of the Medicines Control Agency are a matter for the agency chief executive operating within relevant statutory provisions and the agency's framework document. The chief executive is accountable to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health for the efficient management and overall performance of the agency. The agency is subject to regular review. The latest review was completed last year and a summary of its findings placed in the Library.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms are available to members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines who wish to raise matters of concern in relation to the workings of the committee. [20062]

Mr. Malone: Committee members have the power to regulate the committee's procedures under schedule 1, paragraph 4 of the Medicines Act 1968. In addition, individual committee members are free to raise any issues which they consider to be of relevance to the workings of the committee, either with the chairman, at committee meetings or by writing to the appointing authority, the United Kingdom Health Ministers.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training in the interpretation of epidemiological data is provided to new members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on their appointment. [20061]

Mr. Malone: Members are appointed for their individual expertise in the fields of medicine, pharmacy or science. Their specialist knowledge and judgment contribute to the advice given by the Committee to the Licensing Authority. In addition, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 521–24.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates (a) he and (b) his ministerial colleagues met the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines since 1 January 1995. [20063]

Mr. Malone: The chairman of the committee met me on 3 October 1995.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in the consideration of issues relating to third generation oral contraceptives prior to the decision taken on 16 October 1995. [20057]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made in the House on 23 October 1995 at columns 701–11.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made in the (a) data sheets and (b) summary of product characteristics of third generation oral contraceptives on the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [20059]

Mr. Malone: None.

North Staffordshire Trauma Centre

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 6 March, Official Report, columns 356–68, what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the North Staffordshire trauma centre; and if he will ensure continued funding for the centre. [20188]

Mr. Horam: We published on 6 March a report of a Sheffield university research study on the cost-effectiveness of the regional trauma centre in the north-west midlands.

The continued funding of the North Staffordshire trauma centre is a matter for local health authorities.

Hydrotherapy Pools

Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he is giving to health authorities and those involved with the design of acute hospitals in respect of the provision of hydrotherapy pools. [20323]

Mr. Horam: NHS Estates has issued, to NHS trusts and health authorities, health building note 8 "Rehabilitation—accommodation for physiotherapy, occupational therapy and speech therapy" (1991) which includes details of the requirements for hydrotherapy suites. Technical advice is given in health technical memoranda 2027 (HTM)—"Operational management—Hot and cold water supply, storage and mains services" (1995); and HTM 2040 "Design considerations and operational management—the control of legionellae in healthcare premises—a code or practice" (1994).

Copies of the documents will be placed in the Library.

Water Fluoridation

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the fluoridation of London's drinking water supply. [20390]

Mr. Malone: Fluoridation of water supplies is a matter for local decision.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the national health service executive is taking in respect of the Association of Community Health Councils for England and Wales paper on the community health council review process; when it was submitted to the NHS executive; and if he will make a statement. [20604]

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive received details of the Association of Community Health Councils views on how the CHC review process might work and the appropriate relationship with regional offices, under cover of a letter dated 11 January 1996. The NHS executive is considering the views expressed by the association.

Medical Waste

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if there is a list of approved contractors dealing with medical waste from hospitals. [20768]

Mr. Horam: There is not a central list of approved contractors for disposal of clinical waste. It is for each national health service trust or contracting authority to satisfy itself, prior to any invitation to tender, that those invited to bid have the capability to meet the required technical, financial and quality performance standards.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on how many occasions in the past five years letters have been sent by the National Health Service Estates agency to NHS hospital trusts about medical waste management; [20789]

(2) what reviews of waste management procedures the National Health Service Estates agency has asked each NHS hospital trust to undertake; [20790]

(3) if he will publish the guidelines for the disposal of medical waste form (a) hospitals, (b) nursing homes, (c) mortuaries, (d) doctors' surgeries and (e) veterinary surgeries. [20759]

Mr. Horam: The National Health Service Estates agency has issued five guidance documents and two estates policy letters to the NHS in the past five years. They relate to NHS bodies obligations under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and their duty of care in relation to the disposal of clinical waste. These are specifically aimed at hospitals and primary care services. The NHS Estates agency is not responsible for issuing guidance to private nursing homes or veterinary surgeries.

As waste producers, NHS bodies' are bound to ensure that waste is disposed of safely and properly. Enforcement of the Act is, however, the responsibility of the local environmental health department. The NHS Estates agency does not have responsibility for reviewing procedures.

The guidance documents are:

Health Guidance Note—Clinical Waste Incineration Joint Venture Arrangements (March 1995);

Health Guidance Note—Safe Disposal of Clinical Waste Whole Hospital Policy (April 1995);

Strategic Guide for Waste Management (March 1991);

Strategic Guide to Clinical Waste Management (January 1994);

Health Service Guidelines HSG(94)50 Clinical Waste Management (December 1994).

The estates policy letters, EPL(92)8 and EPL(95)33 reminded the NHS of the previous guidance.

Copies of the guidance will be placed in the Library shortly.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the tendering procedures for the disposal of medical waste from hospitals. [20791]

Mr. Horam: Tendering procedures for the disposal of clinical waste from hospitals should be in accordance with the Public Services Contract Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/3228) and the Environmental Protection Act 1990. In addition, the National Health Service Estates agency has issued guidance on medical waste management.

Derriford Hospital, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what communications he has received from Plymouth Hospitals NHS trust regarding the elderly patient who fell to his death at Derriford hospital, Plymouth, on 9 March; and if he will make a statement. [20599]

Mr. Horam: We have received no communication from Derriford hospital about this matter. I understand that the trust is holding a full inquiry. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Vernon Seccombe, JP, chairman of Plymouth Hospitals NHS trust, for further information.

Aids for Elderly and Disabled People

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the local authority social services departments that make charges for aids for elderly and disabled people. [20757]

Mr Bowis: Information reported by authorities shows that some two thirds of social services departments in England gained no income from fees or charges in relation to adaptations to homes or the provision of disability equipment for elderly or physically or sensorily disabled people in the financial year 1993–94. Specific information about individual authorities' charges are not available centrally.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department which are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. [16013]

Mr. Horam [pursuant to his reply, 22 February 1996, c. 289]: I regret that my previous answer contained incorrect information relating to the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting; the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work; the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority; and the Medical Practices Committee. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Such information as is available is in the tables.

Disability Living Allowance

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated increased administrative cost for his Department resulting from the introduction of the Social Security (Disability Living Allowance) Amendment Regulations 1996. [16624]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Operational procedures have not yet been finalised, but the administrative costs are not expected to be significant.

Pensions

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals currently have their earnings-related pension reduced as a result of payments from a company pension scheme. [18854]

Mr. Heald: As at 31 March 1995, there were 2,305,840 individuals whose additional pension was reduced, or extinguished, as a result of contracted-out deductions in respect of payments from a company or personal pension scheme.

The contracted-out deduction is the term used to describe the reduction in the additional pension of someone who has been a member of a contracted-out pension scheme or a personal pension scheme used in place of the additional pension.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 40, (a) what the breakdown in public spending per capita and per recipient is estimated by the Government Actuary to be on (i) retirement pensions, (ii) the state earnings-related pension scheme, (iii) other public pensions and (iv) all publicly provided pensions, (b) what is the corresponding estimate of contributions required per capita and per contributor from national insurance and (c) what is the corresponding estimate of the percentage of gross domestic product of total public spending on pensions, on the basis of the Government's assumption of 1.5 per cent. per annum growth in (1) 1994–95, (2) 2000–01, (3) 2010–11, (4) 2020–21 and (5) 2030–31, at 1994 prices. [19031]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Public spending on all publicly provided pensions is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government Actuary's Department does not forecast the number of SERPS recipients.

Such information as is available is shown in the tables:

6. The number of contributors each year excludes approximately 200,000 people paying class 3 contributions.
7. The underlying GDP figures assume 1.5 per cent. per annum growth from the 1994–95 GDP figure given in table 6A.1 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) public spending on SERPS and (b) the corresponding contribution rate in respect of SERPS only (i) before the Pensions Act 1995 and (ii) in (1) 1994–95, (2) 2000–01, (3) 2010–11, (4) 2020–21 and (5) 2030–31, at 1994 prices. [19211]

Mr. Heald: There is no corresponding contribution rate in respect of SERPS only. The contribution rate is a global figure calculated so that it is sufficient to pay all national insurance fund benefits on a pay-as-you-go basis. However, some indication of a contribution rate equivalent to net SERPS expenditure is given in the table.

Percentage

	1994–95	2000–01	2010–11	2020–21	2030–31
Pre Pensions Act 1995
Net SERPS expenditure £ billion	1.8	4.2	9.2	14.5	18.7
Equivalent contribution rate	0.8	1.5	2.6	3.7	4.5
Post Pensions Act 1995
Net SERPS expenditure £ billion	1.8	4.2	8.4	10.9	12.0
Equivalent contribution rate	0.8 per cent.	1.5 per cent.	2.4 per cent.	2.8 per cent.	2.8 per cent.

Notes:

1. The principle underlying the table is that if, say, estimated net SERPS expenditure equals one-quarter of total expenditure on national insurance fund benefits then one-quarter of the contribution rate necessary to balance the Fund pays for the net SERPS. Hence, the lower is net SERPS expenditure the lower the equivalent contribution rate will be.
2. The contribution rate in the above table is that part of the gross class 1 contribution rate required to meet the estimated cost of net SERPS. However, it is assumed that a similar proportion of class 2, 3 and 4 contributions is also used to meet the cost of net SERPS.
3. The expenditure on net SERPS is in respect of retirement pensions only and is in 1994–95 prices.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of home owners whose attendance allowance was withdrawn because they were in residential care temporarily paid for by the local authority pending the sale of their homes, in each year of the allowance's operation. [19325]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available.

Computers

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all cases since 1987 in which his Department has bought computer capacity from (a) other Departments and (b) the private sector, giving the value of each contract and the name of the private sector contractors. [19453]

Mr. Burt: There are no such cases.

From March 1994 the Department had a contingency arrangement with the private sector to protect some of its mainframe computers. The contract was never enacted. From June 1995, after outsourcing of the Department's data centre services, EDS became responsible for the mainframe computers. The Department requires EDS to guarantee a specific level of service but the specifics of contingency arrangements are a matter for EDS.

Compensation Recovery Scheme

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the compensation recovery scheme. [19767]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 17 October 1995, Official Report, column 223.

Pensioners (Benefits)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the number and percentage of (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples (1) under and (2) over 75 years of age entitled to, but not in receipt of, (i) council tax benefit, income support and housing benefit, (ii) income support and housing benefit, (iii) income support and council tax benefit, (iv) housing benefit and council tax benefit, (v) council tax benefit alone, (f) income support alone and (g) housing benefit alone. [19652]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not readily available. Where obtainable, it could be provided only at disproportionate cost and would not produce reliable results.

Lowered Standard of Occupation Allowance

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discretion Ministers have on the payment of allowance for lowered standard of occupation in individual cases. [20037]

Mr. Heald: Article 21 of the Naval, Military and Air Forces etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 1983 provides that the allowance for lowered standard of occupation may be awarded to ex-service men and women who, because of the effects of their war pensioned disablement, are incapable, and likely to remain permanently incapable, of following their regular occupation and any other occupation which is of an equivalent standard and suitable for them. The Secretary of State will pay the allowance where he is satisfied that those conditions are met.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many additional claimants would qualify for the disability working allowance if the functional test were applied for initial claims for those not receiving a qualifying benefit; and what estimate he has made of the net cost. [20166]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of disability working allowance have earnings below the lower earnings limit. [20168]

Mr. Mitchell: The lower earnings limit for 1995–96 is £58. On the 31 October 1995 there were 7,644 claimants in receipt of disability working allowance, of whom 2,620 were earning less than £58 per week.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the current level of unemployment benefit for an adult aged over 25 years in each EU state; and what percentage this figure represents as a proportion of the current national average wage in each country. [20317]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information on the level of unemployment benefits in each European Union country is contained in MISSOC "Social Protection in the Member States of the European Union", published by the European Commission. Information on unemployment benefits as a percentage of average earnings in member states is available in "Social Protection in Europe 1995", also published by the European Commission. Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Severe Weather Conditions

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what additional funding will be made available to help people in receipt of income support who have suffered loss and damage as a result of the recent severe weather. [21290]

Mr. Roger Evans: I recently announced additional funding for four districts in the Glasgow area amounting to £268,308 for 967 applications. At the same time I also made available a further £80,000 from the contingency reserve for any future emergencies.

Since then, two further districts—Sefton and Highlands and Islands—have been awarded additional allocations from this sum of £80,000 due to their increased expenditure during the severe weather.

On 29 February Sefton district reported a total of 76 awards at a cost of £25,315 and Highlands and Islands 396 awards at a cost of £42,000—a total expenditure of £67,315. The majority of awards were for budgeting loans.

I have therefore agreed that a further social fund in-year allocation of £67,315 should be made to the district offices affected.

The latest information we have suggests that there is unlikely to be any further requirement for additional allocations in the current financial year.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount paid in each of the last five years to workers in (a) full and (b) part-time employment in the form of housing benefit, family income support and other benefits paid by his Department. [20121]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information in respect of the in-work benefits is set out in the table. It has been provided in respect of all workers, including those who are self-employed, irrespective of the number of hours they work. In addition to the benefits shown, workers may benefit from a range of categorical benefits, such as child benefit.

Earnings Disregard

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effect on public revenues in 1996–97 and 1997–98 of increasing the earnings disregard under income support for all claimants to at least (a) £10, (b) £15, (c) £25 and (d) £50 based on the assumption that (1) the disregard applies equally to individuals and the joint earnings of couples and (2) each partner in a couple is allowed the full disregard. [18104]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 29 February 1996]: The information is set out in the tables.

Table 1: 1996–97

£ million

Change in disregards	Assumption 1	Assumption 2

1. Estimates are modelled on the 1991–92–93 Family Expenditure Surveys and the 1994 Annual Statistical Enquiry, uprated to 1996–97 and 1997–98 levels of prices, earnings and benefit rates. Costs are rounded to the nearest £10 million.
2. Estimates are lower in 1997–98 than in 1996–97, as they take into account the change to the couples disregard for income support and jobseeker's allowance that is to be introduced in October 1996.
3. Costs include the increased cost of housing benefit and council tax benefit due to increased entitlement to these benefits.
4. The costs are shown as the same under both assumptions because of the small number of claims where both the claimant and partner work part time.
5. Behavioural changes, which would be considerable with the higher disregards have been ignored.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Executive Agencies (Contracts)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidelines he has issued on the vetting of private companies tendering for contracts with a next steps agency. [20190]

Mr. Willets: The principles to be followed are laid out clearly in "The Government's Guide to market Testing", paragraphs 6.14 and 6.27, and guidance note No. 40, paragraphs 10.2 and 15.2, issued by Her Majesty's Treasury's central unit on procurement. The guidelines for next steps agencies are the same as those for the rest of central Government. "The Government's Guide to Market Testing" is available in the Library of the House. I am arranging for copies of the CUP guidance note No. 40 to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what vetting procedures are employed to verify the credentials of private companies tendering for contracts with next steps agencies. [20193]

Mr. Willetts: Departments and agencies act in accordance with the guidelines laid out in "The Government's Guide to Market Testing", paragraphs 6.14 and 6.27 and the central unit on procurement's guidance note No. 40, paragraphs 10.2 and 15.2.

In compiling a shortlist, Departments and agencies check companies' capacity and competence for performing the work, their experience in similar work and their financial status. Further checks are made when evaluating bids on companies' organisation and personnel policies, their technical status, their existing commitments and their financial status, including, creditworthiness, and details of any holding/guarantor companies providing financial backing.

"The Government's Guide to Market Testing" is available in the Library of the House. I am arranging for copies of the CUP guidance note No. 40 to be placed in the Library of the House.

"Competing for Quality" Review

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the "Competing for Quality" review will be published. [20450]

Mr. Willetts: It is anticipated that the review will be finished shortly and the results will be published as soon as possible thereafter.

Civil Servants (Stress-related Illness)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the number of civil servants who have left the service (a) by age, (b) by gender and (c) by Department on grounds of stress-related illness in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [20333]

Mr. Willetts: Stress is rarely cited as a specific cause of ill health retirement, but conditions which may be precipitated or exacerbated by stress fall into the International Classification of Diseases categories for neurotic disorders. The data available relate to civil servants who have retired on grounds of ill health because of neurotic disorders in the calendar years 1993 and 1994, the data for 1995 are currently being analysed.

There were 3,731 ill health retirements from the civil service in 1993, 2,208 male and 1,523 female. There were 4,169 ill health retirements in 1994, 2,346 male and 1,823 female.

Table 1 shows the total number of ill health retirements classified as being due to neurotic disorders, broken down by age at retirement and gender. It further shows these ill health retirements as a percentage of the total number of ill health retirement certificates issued in the year.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 273

SESSION 1995–96

4th March—14th March 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
